To Banish Mice from the Bird-room

Get a box of matches and pour over them some boiling water; put the liquid on bread and place in their run for them to take.—Sam Pritchards (Hednesford).

Green Food and Green Fly.

Procure a flower pot and sow the soil very thickly with rape seed. When the green shoots come up well, you will always have a good supply of green fly on them (in addition, of course, to the green food). No time wasted hunting about the country! I have found the above excellent for keeping Goldfinches in sheen, condition, and health.—R. E. Hillier (Paisley).

An Effective Limewash.

[Winner of Half-crown Prize.]

A mixture composed as follows is a good preventive of red mite:—1lb. of lime, add sufficient hot water to dissolve it, then add 2oz. of whiting, 2oz. of glue, ½lb. of salt, and ¼-pint of paraffin. Stir well, and use it, particularly in all corners and crevices, with a paint brush in the ordinary way. This will exterminate all the mite it comes in contact with.—H. Hornblower (Dosclcy, Dawley, Salop).

Helping Finches into Breeding Condition.

A good thing to get both Finches and Safe bills into condition is to obtain a few small tins (such as empty mustard tins) and put into these a few leaves from currant trees, etc., that are infested with green fly. These may be got at night. In the morning put one of these tins, after taking the lid off, into each cage. As fast as the insects come to the top of the tin they will be eagerly taken by the birds. One of these tins will keep a bird busy all day. —W. Fletcher (98, Station Road, Langley Mill, Derbyshire).

No More Wet Sand Trays.

When fanciers wish their birds to bathe, they unthinkingly place a small bath on the sand tray or hang it upon the wires; anyway, as the case generally happens, there is sand upon the tray, and when the bird starts splashing, the sand tray is saturated. To obviate this, I empty the tray, place it reverse way (bottom upwards) in cage, then put bath into the cage. The bird can then splash to its heart's content. When finished, you take out sand tray, and then replace sand upon the right side, which is perfectly dry. Result—no more wet sand trays to clean.—F. J. Harland (70, Buckingham Road, Southgate Road, N.).

The Sweating of the Young.

After the young are a few days old, remove the nest pan lining (lifting the young out), then put some hay in the nest pan and smooth it round, afterwards putting the young back. I have found this prevent even the worst offenders from sweating their young, as the nest pan lining prevents the air from getting to the young through the holes in the nest pan.—F. G. Ball (Shotton, Chester).

Fuller's Earth for Young Birds.

Should any fancier be troubled with young birds going thick, let him try this remedy. Place a piece of rock Fuller's earth, the size of a thimble, in drinking water and stir well. Change water twice a day by gently pouring off the water and leaving behind the sediment that remains. This holds good for three days. Take away all soft foods and substitute soaked canary and teazle seeds for the first two days; afterwards give crushed canary and rape only. This rarely fails to bring them round.—W. G. Andrews (West Bromwich).

Cochineal for Asthma.

If any fancier should have a bird suffering from asthma, let him try the following, which I think he will find to be an almost certain cure:—Get one pennyworth of cochineal from the chemist and dissolve a piece about the size of a hemp seed in the drinking water; in severe cases give two pieces. This gives almost instant relief. When using this remedy, the water glass will be stained a little with the cochineal, so perhaps it would be advisable to keep the glass for this purpose only.—A. W. Howarth (Sheffield).

Illustrated Ideas

Every "Illustrated Idea" used in this column will entitle the sender thereof to a postal order for two shillings and sixpence.

No. 596.

A Holder for Green Food or Nesting Material.

Sent by Mr. J. Pratt, 29, Astor Street, Bramley, Leeds.

The holder shown in sketch is very handy for holding either green food, a piece of sweet apple, or a little nesting material for the birds to play with. The cost is nil, for it may be cut out of any empty tin. It only wants a piece of cage wire soldered round the top, and it is finished.—J Pratt.

No. 597.

An Improved Nest Holder.

Sent by Miss M. Walker, 56, Queen's Road, Wimbledon.

My cages used to get very dirty at the back, where the nest hung, from the young birds' droppings. So now I make the wire nest holder jut out about two inches, well away from the back of the cage. (The bought wires let the nest go too near.) This keeps the cage back quite clean.—M. Walker.

The Young Naturalist.

*A Courageous Skylark.

A friend writes me of an instance of the keen vision and courage of the Lark. He was crossing some fields at Witton on Sunday last, and paused to watch a Lark sing at an immense altitude, when the song suddenly ceased and the bird seemed to drop like a stone to the earth, and with shrill cries flew wildly around my friend's small terrier, which was a few yards in advance. Time after time the bird darted with open beak at the bewildered dog, eventually driving him from the spot, where my correspondent afterwards discovered the Lark's nest and several young.—Sent by Elliott Tilley (age 13), 84, Station Road, Gorsty Hill, near Halesowen.

*Tim and Dick.

Tim is a big black and white cat, and Dick is a cheery little Canary. Tim's favourite seat is on the window-sill by the side of Dick's cage, and Dick seems quite pleased to have him there. Sometimes their mistress will put the cage down on the floor, and say, "Tim; love Dick," and the big cat will arch his back and rub himself up against the cage, after the manner of cats who want to show their affection. This is quite a true story, but all the same I do not advise you to try so dangerous an experiment with your own cat and bird. Very few cats would be so forbearing as Tim, and very few Canaries would be as strong-minded as Dick. Taken from Llanelly "Church Magazine," and sent by D. J. Mathias (age 12), 34, Cambrian Place, Seaside, Llanelly.

Good-bye, Good-bye.

A pet Parrot that had learned to speak a good many words had learned, among others, to utter "Goodbye" in clear, distinct notes, whenever his mistress's guests left the room. One day Poll was sitting on the garden fence quietly meditating, when a large Hawk suddenly swooped upon him, and, seizing the poor bird in his talons, soared rapidly upwards. A friend who was near rushed to the spot to effect a rescue, if possible, when all at once the Parrot, with his eyes fixed on the scene below and on the friend he was being borne away from, cried out, "Goodbye, Goodbye!" The astonished Hawk was so much startled that he dropped his prey instantly, thinking, no doubt, that it was a very queer, uncanny creature he had caught this time. Taken from "The Sunday Companion" and sent by Jessie Burman (age 13), 115, Wickham Street, Beeston Hill, Leeds.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE

CERTIFICATES IN COLORS NOW READY.

Important Notes and Hints.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. G. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Malden; A. EZRA, Esq., London; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. Cushny, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; MAURICE AMSLER, Esq., M.B., Eton; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., M.A., Baron's Court; E. BAKER, Esq., Cowes; M. THOMSON, Esq., Dunedin, New Zealand.

Result of Our Recruiting Competition.

I have received no claim from any member of the League that he has introduced more members than Mr. Peck, who brought fifty-one recruits into the League, or from any Society that it has more than the forty-one members of the Sheffield O.S. who are members of the League. The two first prizes of £5 go, therefore, to Mr. Peck, of Bexley, Kent, and the Sheffield Ornithological Society respectively, and cheques have been forwarded accordingly. I hope to announce the destination of the two second prizes of £3 each next week.

Membership Certificates Now Ready.

The coloured Certificates of Membership are now to hand, and signed copies have been posted to all members who had sent orders in anticipation of delivery. These Certificates are printed in seven colours, and are a facsimile of a specially designed coloured drawing by Cage Birds artist, Mr. H. Norman. In size they measure 15ins. by 11ins., and, when framed, should make an effective ornament to the walls of any room, besides being a visible record that their owners are members of Cage Birds League, a body of bird-lovers banded together in good-fellowship, and in the defence and furtherance of a delightful hobby. I am pleased to have already received many expressions of satisfaction from members who have received their copies, and I shall be glad to send one to any member sending one shilling to cover the cost. A large number of Cage Birds League members are engaged in the bird trade, and every one of these should certainly have a signed certificate to hang in his shop. The officials whose object in life it is to bring actions against bird shop keepers would hesitate before taking steps to prosecute a shopkeeper whose possession of a Certificate of Membership of Cage Birds League would be in itself evidence that he belonged to an Association whose members are pledged to do all that lies in their power to inculcate the knowledge of the proper keeping of birds in captivity. I hope that every member of Cage Birds League will make a point of applying for one of these Certificates.

Cage Bird League Medals.

It would appear from some enquiries I have received that some secretaries of societies are not quite clear as to the Medals to which their societies may be entitled, and to the conditions under which the Medals will be offered. I would therefore repeat that for every five shillings subscribed to Cage Birds League as an annual subscription of members, societies wil be entitled to either a Silver or Bronze Medal. If those subscriptions amount to ten shillings they may have two of either kind or one of each, and so on, while if the total subscriptions amount to thirty shillings either a Gold Medal or six Silver or Bronze may be added to the schedule. The Medals may be given in any way a Society may wish, but they will be open for competition among Cage Birds League Members only, and League Members must put the letters C.B.L. after each entry, as is the custom with other special competitions. It must be, of course, understood that secretaries must make application for these medals in time for announcement in their schedules, stating the number of paid members of the League who are members of their Society. It must not be left for me to find out these particulars without application.

Associate Members Enrolling in Numbers.

Nothing that Cage Birds League has done has approached in popularity the establishment of Associate Members. Not a single post goes by without a number of applications from readers who have signed one of the coupons published in recent issues, and have got five of their friends each to sign another coupon. These are being dealt with in rotation, and the badges are being sent out as quickly as possible. A coupon appears again this week, and I shall be pleased to register as an Associate Member of Cage Birds League any reader conforming with the simple conditions thereon stated. As one reader expresses it, we shall soon have an army of bird lovers whose numbers would astonish the opponents of our hobby of pet-bird keeping.

How to Become an Associate.

Many readers, writes Mr. F. G. Ball, Shotton, have, like I once had, surplus copies of Cage Birds which they would like to dispose of—this has been my method of doing so. Whenever anyone, especially one who has never heard of Cage Birds, comes to purchase a bird, or whenever I know of anyone who keeps a bird or is interested in birds I ask them to accept an old copy, and tell them where I order mine from. It helps them to start differently to what I and hundreds of others did, and it will also enable them to see where to purchase the various foods, seeds, etc., which will help to keep their birds in the "pink" of condition. Get them to sign the coupons, and when you have got five, sign another yourself, and send the six to the Secretary, Cage Birds League.

In sending coupons signed by himself and his friends Mr. A. W. Fullwood, Wolverhampton, writes as follows.—"I have been in the Fancy fifteen years, and I think this idea of forming an Associate Society of bird-lovers is the finest thing our valuable paper Cage Birds has ever undertaken. A very great number of people, who are bird-lovers, are not in a position to pay an annual subscription to Cage Birds League, but will be glad of the opportunity to become Associates. I am impressing upon all my customers that they should follow my example."

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

PATRONS.—A donation of not less than Ten Guineas in one amount, or an annual subscription of not less than Two Guineas, shall constitute the donor or subscriber a Patron.

LIFE MEMBERS.—A donation of not less than Five Guineas in one amount shall constitute the donor a Life Member.

VICE PRESIDENTS.—An annual subscription of not less than Half-a-Guinea shall constitute the subscriber a Vice President.

HONORARY LIFE MEMBERS.—The payment to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE of a legacy of £20 and upwards shall constitute the administrator or executor making the payment an Honorary Life Member. A form of bequest will be sent, post free, on application.

ORDINARY MEMBERS shall pay an annual subscription of Two Shillings and Sixpence.

JUNIOR MEMBERS.—Members under the age of fourteen years at the date of joining shall pay an annual subscription of One Shilling.

BADGES.

Neat and unobtrusive badges are supplied to members, without any charge beyond their subscriptions as above. The badges may be had either in button form, or mounted in rolled gold in two forms, one as a brooch for ladies or for cycling caps or coat lapel, and the other as a pendant for bracelet or watch-chain. The kind required should be specified clearly.

MEDALS.

Gold, Silver, and Bronze Medals are offered for competition among Cage Birds League members at Open Shows. The terms under which these will be given may be had upon application.

CAGE BIRDS FREE TO PATRONS.

SEALS AND HEADED NOTEPAPER.

GUMMED SEALS printed in gold and colours in facsimile of the LEAGUE BADGE are supplied for affixing to note paper, postcards, or envelopes. Price eightpence per hundred, fivepence for fifty, post free.

100 Sheets, Two Shillings and sixpence.
250 Sheets, Four shillings.
500 Sheets, Five shillings and sixpence.
1,000 Sheets, Eight shillings and sixpence.

All post free.

Members are entitled, if application is made at the time of joining, to a free copy of a sixpenny pamphlet on British Bird Culture, or a similar treatise on Canary and Hybrid Culture.

Henry J. Fulljames,
Secretary, Cage Birds League.

154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

READING C.B.S.

Meeting held June 6th, at Palmer's Hall, before a very fair attendance. Mr. Thomas was elected a member. New prize cards were discussed, and a well-designed card was finally adopted. Schedule for Y.B. show, July 10th, was then gone into. Decided to have 19 classes as last year, and the society to add £1 to the prize money in proportion to the entries. Mr. G. H. Acton very kindly offered 5s. as two specials, and the Sec. would be very glad if any other member will help in the same way. Mr. J. Brooker (chairman) gave a paper on breeding and moulting for colour. At the outset he volunteered the statement that it was the first paper he had ever written on this subject. All we can say is we hope we shall soon get another like it. Full of practical information and interest as it was, we were sorry when it ended. It is to be regretted that he would not hand it over so that it could be published, as it would be sure to be appreciated. Several questions were asked and answered in a good style, and at the close we felt we had spent a very interesting evening. Members report a fair result of breeding up to date, but a few have hens that nest but do not lay. There will be no meeting until Y.B. show, July 10th. The secretary will be glad of any help in showroom on that day.—W. H. Pyke. Hon. Sec.

Through a Bird-room Window.

By the Rev. C. D. FARRAR.

No. 26 of this popular series deals with the Ribbon Finch, generally known as the Cut-throat.

A MAN influences his fellows very little by what he says, by the tricks of manner or by want of them; by the food he eats and the particular taste in liquor he happens to possess; his practical effect upon this world results from the amount of fresh air he takes, from the wholesome thoughts he begs or steals from birds and beasts and trees; from the free wind of charity. These things cling round him, giving out fragrance, as of herbs that grow in a well tended garden. It is no credit, you will say, to the man, the credit is due to the birds, the beasts, the jolly, wholesome earth; but, credit or no, he makes for good, be it much or little, and in a world that is too much given to shut out winds and calls them draughts. And so I venture to think that in a very humble way I conduce to the happiness of the world, by writing these occasional papers on my past experiences.

Common, but Unreliable.

Cut-throats, like the poor, are always with us. There are times and years when some species of birds seem to disappear completely. It is twenty years since I have seen a Turquoisine, I mean a live one. Every year I go to South Kensington Museum and gaze upon a particularly fine specimen I gave to the collection years ago; but, alas! he is stuffed. I don't like to think when it was I last set eyes on a Musky Lorrikeet; but you can never go into a bird-shop without finding Cut-throats, and the price is always within the compass of the most modest purse. Another thing to be thankful for is that you can always tell the cock from the hen, and therefore you are sure of getting a pair, and with very moderate luck you can get them to go to nest. This is all very fascinating to a beginner. It is nice to breed even such a common thing as a Cut-throat. At the same time I have always found Cut-throats most disappointing so far as rearing goes. They will go to nest anywhere, lay any number of eggs and hatch them, and they will live for a few days; but then something goes wrong, and, like Jezebel, they are ignominiously thrown out.

There is one statement that I will venture to make at starting. Cut-throats are perfectly hardy. I have seen them living in Leeds bird market, which is like a railway station, open at both ends, and one long continued draught. A bird that can live there and look happy and contented may be passed anywhere as a "good life."

A Modest Commencement.

The first pair of foreign birds I ever had were a pair of Zebra Finches, and the second a pair of Cut-throats. I can't tell you how proud I felt of the latter; especially the cock, with his throat so suggestive of an attempt at suicide. So far as I remember, I bought them in Leman Street, and paid four shillings and sixpence for them. I took a real care of them for the time, as if they had been Turquoisines, until I found that my care was quite unnecessary. At the time, I only had one place to keep my birds in, a large and sunny attic. My collection was a very humble one, consisting, as it did, of Zebras, Cut-throats, Avadavats, and Bengalese. They were all very common, I grant you, but I do not know that they did not give me as much pleasure as when in later years I had hundreds of birds, including many great rarities. I know I did not feel half the anxiety about them, for if one died I could always replace it at a trifling cost, whereas when one of my rare specimens went aloft, it was not merely a question of money, but there was always a grave doubt if I should ever look upon its like again.

In this big attic I rigged up a lot of cigar boxes with a hole cut in the middle and a little twig jutting out for the birds to perch on, and lined with hay. At one end I put up a lot of logs, with likely places for nesting sites. And then I turned in the birds and awaited results. I had not long to wait. That is the best of these common birds; if they mean to go to nest they will do so at once, whereas your rare specimens either wait for years before they can make up their minds; or else go and die just as they have decided on propagating their species.

Disappointed Hopes.

It was not many days before I saw the Cut-throats carrying building materials into one of the cigar boxes, and they seemed particularly keen on feathers, from which I gathered that they were of a chilly nature. In about a week the hen disappeared and I concluded that eggs had arrived. A few mornings later I was assured of the fact, as I found a dirty white egg, rather large for the size of the birds, cracked on the floor. Still, I felt very happy, and I believe I experienced one of the solid joys and lasting pleasures that the hymn says none but Zion's children know. When you are only a beginner you are proud of having a Cut-throat lay eggs! Things went on all right, and after thirteen days had passed I fancied I could hear a feeble chirping from the Cut-throats' cigar box. This daily increased in volume, until the eighth day. When I entered the attic in the early morning I fancied that the air was not as sweet as it might be; so I opened the window and let in some air.

When I came up later I could find no improvement. I noticed that the smell in the aviary was violent and it was of unmistakably animal origin. I proceeded to investigate, and the nearer I got to the box the stronger the atmosphere became. I got a pair of steps and proceeded to investigate. When I got on a level with the [illegible] I was "red hot," as the children say. Meanwhile the bodies were going bad, and the smell for a mile around was strong enough to take the paint off a door! I got a bit of bent wire, and after a time I succeeded in drawing out four livid bodies of what had once been young Cut-throats. As I looked at these swollen bodies, and thought of what might have been, I felt as grouty as King Ahab when he turned his face to the wall and would eat no bread.

The Same Again.

The parents seemed not to mind their loss, but only rather relieved that the mouldering bodies had been removed. I fancy that their sense of smell is not of a high order, for they went to nest in a box not far away from the old one. All again went well for a time; the eggs laid were duly hatched, and then everything was repeated de novo. I felt a bit sick.

It reminded me of a story I read once about a son of a Publishing Firm, who had been unsuccessful, and was anxious to get some work; and some old friends of his father, who were manufacturers of iron bedsteads, offered him a job of travelling for them till he could find something better. The work was not very congenial, but he did it as well as he could, and, of course, one of his duties was to furnish a daily report. After a time he made a daily footnote to his report: Macbeth, so and so; Scene, so and so, Line so and so. This attracted the attention of the heads of the firm, who were not literary men, and puzzled them much. After a while, one of them said one morning: "Hang it all, let's send out and get a half-crown Shakespeare, and see what it is, any way." And it was found that the passage referred to, ran:—

This is indeed a bloody business.

Success at Last.

As I looked at my second lot of putrefying corpses. I felt inclined to echo his words. But they say it's a long lane that has no turning, and it proved so in my case. For at the third time of asking my Cut-throats succeeded in rearing three fine youngsters, two hens and a cock. Still, my story seems to prove that it isn't so easy as it seems to rear even such a common bird as a Cut-throat. Indeed, from my experience, I should be inclined to say that while it is perfectly easy to get Cut-throats to go to nest and lay eggs and rear for a few days, it is the reverse to get them to rear them to maturity. I think it must be something to do with feeding. Maybe seed diet is too dry and heating and probably, like our Sparrows, they, at liberty, feed a good deal on small grubs.

When I saw these young Cut-throats flying about with their parents I felt as grateful as the native of India who said to someone who had done him a favour, 'If I were to make shoes of my skin for your excellency in exchange for these favours, I would think that I had not trespassed the limits of my gratitude!"

It may be well to utter a note of warning as to the temper of the Cut-throat. It not an amiable bird. Nay he is a born fighter. Put two cocks together, and the stronger will never give the weaker a moment's peace; he reminds me of an Australian horse-dealer, who, speaking of the fighting qualities of certain fox terriers, said: "They fly at each other's throats and they hold on quite quietly—just like a prayer meeting!"

An Expert's Views Upon the Yorkshire Green Canary.

Mr. Geo. Bell Tells How Winners Are Bred and Moulted.

A LECTURE was recently delivered by Mr. Geo. Bell before the members of the Anfield, Everton and Dis. C.B.S., on "Yorkshire Greens." He said: In touching upon this one-time local variety of the Green Canary, I thought a few remarks on how to work up a strain would be very useful, as the Green is now becoming one of the most popular and interesting varieties of the Yorkshire Canary. Many a novice buys stock at a good price and expects by merely putting the birds together he is sure to breed a few winners. How often are his hopes disappointed; and much of this disappointment might have been avoided had our young friend asked the advice of some old fancier. The novice nine times out of ten chooses unsuitable partners through his lack of knowledge, and it is here where the trouble commences. No matter how good the birds are in themselves, it is impossible for the operations of the breeding season to be brought to a successful isue if the birds do not suit each other. There is no set rule how to pair birds. Experience in the breeding room, and one's knowledge of the stock must be the chief guide. The keynote of success rests upon a wise selection. But with patience and perseverance success is certain. I advise those just about to start to select their stock prudently; one single rash action at this time may foil all your plans. Never buy a bird for breeding purposes unless a good pedigree accompanies it. Having judiciously started a few stock pairs, the ultimate success, of course, rests with the owner.

Colour Counts Before Type.

On starting to breed Greens at the present time, I should select birds of the Yorkshire type, as this is my favourite. Type, quality, feather, colour, and position are the important items, and we want them combined if possible. One thing I would like to point out is that if you get colour you can soon work up type and quality. Colour is the main point in this variety, so I put it first. I want you to breed for colour, not feed for colour. In other varieties type is put first.

I would prefer the start be made with buff green cocks and yellow green hens, as I have generally found that the best birds are produced in this way. They should be sound in colour, with quality of feather and good type, especially in the hen. I have proved that the high quality of feather possessed by the hens is reproduced in far higher degree by them than by the cocks. Avoid coarse-feathered birds as far as you can at all times.

How Colour is Retained.

A stud book should be kept, so that you can ascertain how to pair the birds on any future occasion. By this book you will be able to pick out which birds have Green or foul blood in them. It will also help you to find out which pair produce the best results. Having secured a strain of your own, after a few seasons' careful breeding, the fancier must not think he can rest on his oars, or that the labour is at an end. It will be necessary to be on the look out and see that colour, size, and quality of feather are not being lost. By this time the stock will be full of reliable Green blood, and any cross that may seem advisable can be introduced. If colour is required, I should advise pairing a pure yellow Cinnamon hen, of true Yorkshire type, to a buff Green cock bred from self Greens. The Green and Cinnamon cross constitutes the fountain of colour for Green breeding. When birds of this cross are obtained it will not be necessary to introduce the same cross again for several seasons, so that the breeder may keep as far as possible from the Cinnamon tinge. From a cross of this description colour and quality of feather will be improved.

If size is being lost, I should advise taking a dip into Lancashire blood. A mistake is often made at the first step in the unwise selection of the Lancashire which it is wished to use for crossing purposes. I would therefore say that any kind of Lancashire will not do. The one that must be used is the so-called Lancashire of the Yorkshire type, with narrow skull, close feather, thin body and long legs. I would also urge that in all cases it should be a Yellow Plainhead. We do not want coarseness of feather, and for that reason I prefer a yellow to a buff as the former will be less likely to transmit that coarseness than the latter. We will assume that a bird of the right character has been obtained. It should be matched with a buff Green hen of the true Yorkshire type, and of fair size only; this hen must in all respects be typical.

From a cross of this sort it must not be thought that self-colour Greens will be bred. One may be got in a nest, but most of the young ones will be heavily variegated, and some of them only slightly ticked. It will be gathered from this that fanciers will not breed champions at the first cross, although there are exceptions even to this, but experience has tanght me to expect nothing beyond stock birds at this stage. The young ones from such a pair should be well looked over, and those showing a great tendency to be clear, or that have broad skulls, should be discarded. You must pick out for the next cross the birds that are yellow and most heaviiy variegated; yellows are to be preferred, as by again using them, nice short, silky, close-feathered birds are obtained, and these are wanted in this variety. In pairing the yellow variegated cocks of this cross, a pure-bred buff Green hen must be used, of the right type. The produce from these will probably be both Greens and Cinnamons, or variegated. When pairing the yellow variegated hens you must use a pure-bred buff Green cock. If these instructions are followed a strain in which the Green blood is intensely strong will be produced. The best results I have seen have been obtained from the above cross. My best birds, both for yellow and buff Greens, are self colour; it is here where you get size and quality of feather.

Don't Despise the Buffs.

Although I have not told you to use the buff variegated birds, I do not mean them to be despised, as enough yellow variegated birds will not always be to hand, so you may be compelled to use a buff from the same cross. We cannot always get our stock birds in our own liking, and sometimes we have to pair up with whatever buff variegateds we have got. I have had very good results from using buff variegated hens paired to a very fine feathered yellow Green cock. For instance, my yellow foul and buff foul Green cocks and buff Green hen, all of which took many firsts, including the Crystal Palace show, were all bred from a buff variegated hen and a yellow Green cock; so it can be seen that from this cross, and from our variegateds, good birds are to be had. I would advise that the young ones from this cross be paired again to pure Greens; by doing so more self-colour Greens will be obtained.

We are informed by Mr. H. Copp that a white Blackbird was caught last week near Barnstaple.

Mr. A. Hirst (Accrington) will judge the members' show of the Clitheroe C.B.S. on Dec. 7 next.

Mr. J. Bryson, secretary of the Aberdeen O.S., has changed his address from 8, Broomhill Road to 293, Holborn Street, Aberdeen.

Manningham C.B.A. will ramble to Fewston, June 16; meet Manningham Station 8.10 a.m., writes Mr. H. Grange, sec. Fanciers invited.

The Birkenhead C.F.A. have engaged Mr. Wellings (Prescot) to judge young bird show, June 29, and Mr. Cowgill (Bradford) for old bird show, Nov. 30.

The name of the owner of the Buff Yorks winning special for best Canary at Carnarvon was given in our report as W. Molan. This should be W. Nolan.

We are asked to state that the Metropolitan C.B.A. will hold a young bird show at All Saints' Parochial Hall, Battersea Park, on June 15, from 4 to 9.30.

Messrs. A Hamilton (Caldercruix), G. Fulton (Partick), J. Park (Govan), D. Brown (Edinburgh) will judge the Scotch Fancy Section; and Mr. T. Brown (Duns) the Belgian Section at the Scottish Metropolitan (Open Derby) on Sept. 28.

Wallasey C.B.S. have been presented by Crane and Sons, the large piano manufacturers, with a cup for their nest feather show on July 6. It is expected that this will be the best young show the club has held for many years. I am glad to say, writes Mr. T. Edwards, Hon. Sec., that through the medium of your paper we have received substantial additions to our membership.

CAGE BIRDS has many readers resident in seaside or country districts. And it has many town-dwelling readers who when on holiday bent would be glad to stay with other bird-loving enthusiasts. We propose to add to our advertisement headings one for "Holiday Apartments." Any of our readers having accommodation should be able to let it readily by the aid of a small announcement under this heading. Rates as usual, 18 words 6d., and ½d. for each subsequent word.

Newcastle-on-Tyne C.B.S. annual Nest Feather Show will be held in Crosby's Cafe, Northumberland Street, June 22. We hear from Mr. A. E. Silk, of the Aviaries, Whitstable, that the cups he is offering for competition at next season's shows have been accepted at Kirkcaldy, Swansea, and Warrington, where competition will be confined to novices; and at Gateshead, Plymouth, Cardiff, Scottish National, and Glasgow and West of Scotland, where the competition is to be open to all.

OBITUARY.

It is with the deepest regret, writes Mr. W. Stockton, that I have to inform you of the sad misfortune which has befallen Mr. G. Bainbridge, Felling-on-Tyne, in the death of his little daughter, who was laid to rest on Sunday, May 19th. Mr. Bainbridge is well known as an exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead, and I am sure the hearts of all our members and all fanciers who know our friend will go out in sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Bainbridge in this their hour of trouble. May they have strength to bear it.

Mr. Stephens (South London).

It is with very much regret, writes Mr. W. Hodson, hon. sec., Dulwich and Peckham C.B.S., that I have to inform you of the sad death of Mr. Stephens, one of our members, and a hard worker on the committee. Mr. Stephens was a keen fancier of British birds, and was well known in the South London district, his name often appearing under letters in your correspondence columns. On Whit Tuesday he was thrown from his bike in the Old Kent Road, a motor-car passing at the time unfortunately going over him. He was taken to Guy's Hospital, where his injuries were found to be of a serious nature. An operation was at once performed, but it was of no avail, and he passed away on Thursday morning, June 6. He leaves a widow and two little children. The funeral took place last week-end, at which the society was represented.

Messrs. Nicholson and Tallantyre write that Mr. Jas. Johnston (Wallsend) will judge the Nest Feather Show of the Haltwhistle C.B.S., July 20.

West Bromwich C.B.S., writes Mr. Andrews, sec., have appointed Mr. Geo. Baker (Birmingham) to judge their Nest Feather Show, June 22nd.

Societies desiring the support of the Crested C.C. are requested to make application to me forthwith, writes Mr. John Tyson, Hon. Sec., 169, Sloane-street, London, S.W.

Mr. A. E. Silk (The Aviaries, Whitstable) has intimated his intention of presenting a cup for competition in the Norwich Section at the Scottish National Annual Show, writes Mr. J. R. Meikle, the sec., and we have accepted the offer. The cup will be open to all competitors.

Members of the Salford Linnet Club, writes Mr. B. Wharton, Hon. Sec., are earnestly requested to attend the contest at headquarters on June 15th, as this is the last open contest of the season. It is hoped that all the Lancashire fanciers will support us. A social evening will be held in the concert room afterwards. All friends specially invited.

Owing to the resignation of Mr. G. Taylor (Secretary), all correspondence for the Northern B.B. M. and F.B.C. should be addressed to me in future, writes Mr. W. Curry, 60, Grosvenor-gardens, Newcastle, and societies who have not applied for our patronage, and are desirous of having same, should apply before our next meeting, July 24.

We have received an account of a Linnet Singing Contest said to have been held at the Turf Hotel, Newcastle. The communication bears neither signature nor address. Further, it is written on both sides of the paper, and is of much too "rambling" a nature for publication. Will the sender please note the style in which these contests are reported, and, in future communications, write on one side of the paper, and sign his report.

Will all members of Bradford West C.B.A. who did not attend the meeting of June 8 kindly note, write Messrs. Kilburn and Western, that the conditions of the Payne Cup have been altered? When Mr. Payne offered to give a cup to be won outright in one year, we expected just an ordinary cup, but it has exceeded all expectations, being an elaborate cup of the value of about seven guineas. All members present came to the conclusion that it would be unfair to lose sight of such a trophy in one year, and it was unanimously agreed that the cup, before becoming the sole property of any member, must be won two years in succession or three times in all, not necessarily in succession. We hope all members will show their appreciation by making our first feather show, July 13, a great success All birds to be entered Friday night, July 12, and staged at 2.30 Saturday. Mr. A. Shaw judges.

White Sparrow Near Dublin.

For the past few days a white Sparrow has been observed in the paddock at Warren House, Sutton, near Dublin.

White Canaries for King George.

Dr. Palmer, who is on a visit to Bristol from New Zealand, has, says the "Western Daily Press," brought with him about thirty pure white Canaries, which have been bred in the Dominion by him. It is intended to ask his Majesty King George's acceptance of a pair of these remarkable little birds for the Royal Aviary. White Canaries have been known, but never before in such a number, states Dr. Palmer, who further said that there is every reason to believe the strain has been established; also that the birds were bred on the lines of Mendel's theory.

"Blades" Abroad.

At our last meeting, writes Mr. J. A. T. Woodall, Sheffield O.S., we had reports pertaining to two of our members who recently left old England for pastures new, Mr. J. W. Crooks, of Crest fame, and Mr. H. E. Wilkinson, of Wilkinson and Elliott, lovers of the Yorkshire Canary. The former reached America some weeks ago, and is already highly satisfied with the new country. In breeding also he has done well, for he took two pairs over with him, and up to the time of writing he has bred six youngsters. Mr. Wilkinson would land about May 27th, so that we have not heard from him yet. Our secretary has been in communication with the secretary of the Victoria C.B.S., Australia, whose members are eagerly looking forward to welcoming our old friend Harry, and I gather they will give him a right royal reception. In his letter the Secretary tells us that he will arrive just at the commencement of the show season, which is the best time of the year for anyone interested in the Fancy to arrive, as by visiting the shows he will meet and get in touch with all the breeders and exhibitors of note.

OUR LITERARY COMPETITION.

After somewhat protracted consideration of the winning essays in our recent Literary Competition, it has been decided to award the chief prize—the framed original painting of birds, value £4 4s.—to Mr. W. Spillman, of 35, Alcester Street, Devonport. His article, entitled "Climbing the Norwich Plainhead Tree," was published in our issues of Feb. 10 and 17 last. It was the opinion of the judges that all the winning essays were very meritorious, and ran Mr. Spillman's contribution a close race.

How Bird Breeders Are Faring in 1912.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others. The communications must in each case be accompanied by the sender's name and address.

Mr. W. B. Smart, sec. of Loanhead C.B.S., writes that some fanciers are doing well, others moderate. Full results for the district will be given later on.

I have been breeding this last nine years, and have shown some of my specimens and won several prizes. This year I have six pairs up Yorkshires and Norwich, and I have at present 20 young doing well. I make all my own cages and fittings. Anyone can call on me and see for themselves.—J. Taylor (2, Beaumont Buildings, Bow Street, W.C.).

'PHOSTO'
THE MARVELLOUS
PHOSPHATIC FOOD
For Canaries and Cage Birds.

TWO RECENT OPINIONS—

May 29th, 1912.
"It has given excellent results. I have had 18 chicks hatched out, and not lost one. The hens commence to feed as soon as the chicks are hatched. Never had such stuff before, and I have been a breeder for six years, and have tried all sorts of food, etc. I have a hen that would not feed her first brood. The second brood I gave her "Phosto," and she is feeding grand. Please forward another tin, for which I enclose 2s. 6d. I would not be without it now.—J. Warwick, 32, High Lever Road, North Kensington."

May 30th, 1912.
"I cannot speak too highly about "Phosto" for Canaries. I now have some 5 weeks old larger than their parents. These have been fed on "Phosto."—H. B. Bambridge, Dental Surgeon, Brixham, Devon."

Canaries and Heredity.

A Short Cut to Mendelism.

An interesting Lecture by Miss Durham, delivered before the Wimbledon C.B.C.

There was a large attendance at the usual monthly meeting of the Wimbledon Cage Bird Society, held at Mr. Johnston's Rooms, May 6th, Mr. W. H. Stoakley presiding. The chief event of the evening was an intensely interesting lecture by Miss Durham on "Inheritance or Family Likenesses, and the Laws which Govern them."

The Chairman, in welcoming Miss Durham, said they were perhaps aware that she was connected with the John Innes Horticultural Institution at Merton, and had there dealt with heredity in Canaries and other similar subjects.

Miss Durham, then proceeding, said the subject of inheritance or family likenesses, and the laws which govern them, was one of paramount importance to anyone engaged in breeding, whether of plants or animals.

Speaking of Canaries, she said that every breeder knew that it was not always the prize-winning bird which necessarily bred the best offspring. In order to obtain the best results, birds must be chosen carefully, and yet sometimes the very birds from which good results were expected proved deceptive. The first person who tried to analyse scientifically inheritance or the handing down from parent to offspring of definite qualities or characters was a certain Austrian Abbot called Mendel, whose work was published about fifty years ago, but was passed over and forgotten till about twelve years ago, when it was rediscovered by three separate individuals, all well-known scientific men, who were able to add confirmation to Mendel's views from those of their own. Mendel set out to explain and examine the problem not from the point of view of the Fancy, which was to breed a finer and better prize-winner than anyone else, but to find out exactly what happened when individuals bearing different qualities were bred together.

Some Results of Mating.

Canary breeders knew perfectly well that green or black-eyed birds never resulted from mating two cinnamon, or, as she preferred to call them, pink-eyed birds together. On the other hand, they did sometimes appear when two green-eyed or black-eyed birds were paired. We could now supply answers as to why that happens, and, moreover, we knew how many of such pink-eyed birds might be expected to appear. By applying the methods which Mendel first instituted the breeder could find out which of the qualities he wanted to appear in his birds would be inherited or how he could combine them to produce the desired result. Mendel used peas for his experiments. He chose two varieties of peas, one of which was tall, six to seven feet high, and the other dwarf, ¾ft. to 1¼ft. He first made sure that each variety bred true to its character, and then he crossed the tall with the dwarf, and the dwarf with the tall. In order to carry out the experiment, he removed the stamens before they were ripe, and then afterwards, when the flowers were ready, dusted the pollen of the plant chosen to be the father on to the stigma of the mother.

The All-Important Third Generation.

In this way cross-fertilisation was brought about. As a result of this, when the seed was ready, sown, and the new plants produced, he found that in this, which we call the first generation, all the plants produced were tall, like the tall parent, whether the tall parent had been the father or the mother. When these plants had in their time produced flowers they were allowed to fertilise themselves. Then it was found that the second generation consisted of two kinds of plants, one resembling the tall grandparent, the other the short grandparent, and there were three talls to one short. In the third generation it was found that whereas the short plants bred perfectly true to shortness and never threw talls, there were two kinds of tall plants, one breeding perfectly true to tallness, the other splitting again into talls and shorts as in the previous generation in the proportion of three to one. The tall plant might be said to be dominant and the short plant recessive, because the character of tallness overmastered and hid from view the short character.

Separate Characters.

Now, supposing that instead of mating the two impure forms together, the impure form was mated with the pure tall form, all the offspring were tall, though there would be the two kinds, one pure and one impure, indistinguishable to the eye, it was true, but when used for breeding the true characters would come out again. Now this meant that the characters of tallness and shortness were separate. Each reproductive cell carried one character or the other. No one reproductive cell could carry both. A new plant or a new animal was made as the result of the union of the two reproductive cells, and the new individual which resulted from such a union might inherit one character or the other or both according to the characters carried by the parent cells. It was often a puzzle to breeders why two apparently pure breeding forms might throw a waster or a quite different form unexpectedly a reversion or throwback, but they would now see how this happened. In order to test, therefore, whether birds were throwing true to type, they must not mate with the pure type, but with another form. In the case of the cinnamon Canary, if they wanted to find out if a green cock was pure to greenness, they must mate it with a cinnamon. If the cock was pure, then there would be no cinnamon young, but if he was not pure to greenness, there would be cinnamon young

The Part Sex Plays.

As a result of the more recent work which has been carried on by Mr. Bateson and others, very interesting facts have come to light, and not the least interesting is the part played by sex in inheritance. It has long been known that certain characters are inherited from one sex and not from the other. Generally this kind of inheritance is from the female side; for instance, colour-blindness in humans. The character seems to be associated or connected in some way with the sex character. The inheritance of sex itself is a question of great interest to all of us. We should all like to know, for instance, in breeding Canaries how to produce cocks or hens at will. Alluding to the belief that the sex of the offspring is believed to be influenced by the age of the father, she said in her view this opinion still requires proof, and at present scientific analysis has not yielded this proof. In the case of the Canary, if they mated a green hen with a cinnamon cock the young would be mixed greens and cinnamons, but all the cinnamons would be hens. In the reverse mating of cinnamon hen and green cock, the young would be all green unless the cock was carrying cinnamon blood.

Cinnamons and Females.

A green hen pure for greenness was unknown, but pure green cocks were known. It was suggested, therefore, that the green hen was not only impure for sex, but also for cinnamon, and the cinnamon in some way was associated with the female character. If an impure green cock was mated with a green hen there was mixed offspring, and the cinnamons were again all hens; to get a cinnamon cock the impure cock must mate with a cinnamon hen. Speaking of her own experience, she said she had had 224 birds by mating green hens with cinnamon cocks, and got 125 cinnamon hens; 238 birds bred by mating impure cocks with green hens gave sixty-eight cinnamon hens; the rest were greens. One of the most interesting things she had found out was that hens were produced greatly in excess of the cocks. For every 100 cocks she had 150 hens. It looked very much as if certain hens had a tendency to produce excess of females.

At the close of the lecture Miss Durham was accorded a vote of thanks by acclamation, a compliment for which she briefly returned thanks.

The Green Woodpecker's Nest.

The nest of the Green Woodpecker is frequently betrayed by the chips at the foot of the tree. The nesting hole is bored in a decaying tree, but usually in a portion that is fairly sound. The Green Woodpecker is shy, and will dodge round the opposite side of the trees, occasionally peeping at the intruder.

The Goldfinch's Work of Art.

The sprightly Goldfinch is a neat builder, although generally somewhat late. A nest recently found by the writer was quite a work of art, composed of moss, vegetable down, dry grass stems, and snugly lined with hair; while the exterior was plentifully covered with lichen. It was partly suspended from a branch, and reminded one of Graham's lines:

"Sometimes suspended at limber end
Of plain tree spray, among the broad-leav'd shoots,
The tiny hammock swings to every gale."

HOW I WON THE BATTLE.

The Story of a Yorkshire Canary.

Tells of his visit to a show, and what he thought of it all.

Well, here goes!! and with a snap of the lid I find myself in darkness, and know that once again my destination is a show. I'm a Canary, Yorkshire in type; gentleman of the Fancy, you know! and this will not be the first time I have graced a show bench. Victorics? Rather! in the keenest competition, but modesty, although I am often called "swanky," is one of my strong points. With the shutting out of light the most tedious part of the business has commenced, and before my destination is reached, many jolts are to be mine. At last! after what has seemed an eternity, I am lifted out into the light of day, to gaze with interest on the scene of battle. Row upon row of cages greet my eyes, containing brothers and sisters of all my varied tribe, and aren't some of them hideous? Look at poor old humpback; he's enough to send any self-respecting bird into a fit. Ah, well, poor chap, just what man has made him, and beauty is in the eye of the beholder.

Seems to be a crowd of my variety, and my class (Clear Yellow, by the way) seems endless. Craning upward I can just see an old rival of mine—whacked him last time—now busily occupied with his toilet he is; must begin mine. What a confounded row my brethren do kick up; no time for a quiet snooze; this waiting is getting on my nerves. Thank goodness at last here comes our judge. Hello! seen him before somewhere. The first cage is in his hands, my fate will not hang in the balance long. How careful he is, noting first one and then another, giving all an equal chance. He reaches me. My cage is lifted in those firm hands; now or never! Don't I just give him a show, straight as a die. I never waver as he runs his nail along the bottom of my cage, but there is no need for coaxing; he is getting of my best. "What type" I hear murmured as he turns me round for a view, in profile; "certainly the best I've handled so far," and, reluctantly, it seems to me, I am replaced whilst he jots something down in that book of his.

The Happy nding

My neighbours having been handled in a like manner, our class is finished, and then don't we give vent to our pent up excitement! The room trills with song, much to the disgust of some insignificant Rollers I can just see peeping from another room. The end is near; I see them with hands full of cards. They approach me; will they stop? My heart beats wildly. Yes!, A card is slipped between my bars, and yet another, and I found myself the proud possessor of a first and special for best bird in my variety. I almost forget my modesty. Later, with admiring faces round me, I gain some little idea of why all that tender care was bestowed on me through my moult, and as the remarks—"What a Gem," "Lovely colour." "Wax isn't the word," etc., are passed, I forget everything in the enjoyment of knowing my master's care has not been wasted. On reaching home I see that kind face beaming with pleasure as, tired and sleepy, I am lifted from my case, displaying my cards. That night, as my head slips under a wing, in fancy I can see him recounting to his birdy friends my birth and subsequent development.—R. Fielden Richards.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES.
How to Breed, Manage and exhibit.
By H. W. Battye, past President of the Yorkshire Union. It deals fully with the Yorkshire Canary and its sub-varieties, and should be in the hands of every breeder. It gives the fullest instruction upon pairing, breeding, moulting, exhibiting, and how to treat both in health and disease. Illustrated by Messrs. H. Norman and A. J. Simpson. Price 1/-, post free 1/1½.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL.
By C. A. House. A thoroughly practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the Roller (or Singing Canary). An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman; exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases, and seeds—a compendium of knowledge. Price 1/-, post free 1/2. Cloth bound, 2/2.

NORWICH CANARIES.
By C. A. House. The latest and most practical manual on this popular variety of Canaries. It tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder, and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal," are worth the cost of the whole book many times over. Price 1/-, post free 1/1.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS.
By Claude St. John. An intensely practical handbook for beginners at Canary Breeding. It contains 116 pages 7in. by 5in., and profusely illustrates innumerable hints. In this book the reader is instructed how to pair up the stock birds, how to cage and feed them, how to test the eggs, what to do when the young birds are hatched, and so on until the birds are old enough to be put on the show bench. Interesting from cover to cover, it is by far the best 6d. handbook on the subject ever published. Price 6d., post free 7d. Cloth bound 1/2.

COLOUR FEEDING OF CANARIES AND OTHER BIRDS.
By J. W. Ramsden. Tells you how to mix the colour-food, and how to moult the birds to get the richest possible colour. Price3d., post free 3½d.

SEEDS, FOODS, AND WILD PLANTS FOR CAGE BIRDS.
Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

A comprehensive and complete manual, written by various leading authorities on these subjects. It contains valuable information on the various seeds suitable for all varieties of cage birds, their food value, uses, etc.

It tells you the good and bad points of canary, hemp, rape, teazle, and all other seeds used by bird keepers. Descriptions and illustrations of the various wild plants, such as shepherd's purse, chickweed, privet berries, etc. Absolutely indispensable to all bird lovers who wish to keep their pets in the best of health and condition.

PET RABBITS, CAVIES AND MICE.

THE ART OF COLOUR FEEDING.

With a Time and Money-Saving "Tip."

By J. PITCHFORD. (Stoke-on-Trent).

A Lecture recently delivered before the Longton C.B.S. and Stoke C.B.A.

MR. CHAIRMAN and Gentlemen: The subject of colour feeding is one in which most of those present are interested, and I have no doubt you have had more or less experience of colour feeding birds for exhibition, therefore much that I may say on the subject you will be well acquainted with. Still, it is possible I may be able to enlighten you on some point that you are not quite clear about, or have overlooked, then my trouble in writing this paper and coming here to-night will not have been in vain.

A Present-day Necessity.

Colour, as everyone knows, is a necessity to the exhibition bird, and the breeds in which artificial colour-feeding is essential to success in competition are Norwich, Yorkshires, Cinnamons, Lizards, and Hybrids. It is no use exhibiting any of these varieties unless they are colour fed, however good in type, quality, or condition they may be. Get your birds as rich in colour as you can; you cannot get them too hot for present-day competition. Opinions differ as to the effects of colour feeding on Canaries. Personally, I have found it beneficial during the moulting season, as birds I have been colour feeding have gone through the moult quicker and better than those which have had none. Peppers are a vegetable readily eaten by birds in their natural state, and it was through birds eating capsicum pods growing in a conservatory, and moulting out such a grand colour, that the idea of colour feeding first originated. In the early days of colour feeding nothing but cayenne was used. Cold pepper is a recent product; it is a "vegetable-fruit," something like a tomato.

How the Ingredients are Mixed.

I mix my own colour-food in the following manner: To one pound of cold pepper add four ounces of hot Natal pepper, four ounces of moist brown sugar, and two ounces of best olive oil. These should be well blended together and then put in an airtight tin or covered jar for future use. The next thing to be considered is a medium for administering the colour to the birds. Until last autumn I always used egg and biscuit, using six Osborne biscuits to one egg. To this amount of egg food I commence by giving one teaspoonful of the pepper, gradually increasing the quantity up to four spoonfuls, and continuing at this strength right through the moult. The pepper must be thoroughly blended with the egg food, and for this purpose there is nothing to equal a chemist's mortar and pestle.

Another method of preparing the colour food is to soak a quantity of home-made bread in water, then squeeze as much of the water out of it as possible. Mix in the quantity of pepper required and work it all well together with a fork, then add a small quantity of mixed seed to it. This is much cheaper than using egg and biscuit, but there are very few of us who can obtain home-made bread, so that this method is not practicable for every fancier.

Saving Time and Expense.

The chief objections to colour feeding are the expense and the time and trouble involved, but to the true fancier the trouble is but a "labour of love." Still, if we can adopt a method of colour-feeding that will give satisfactory results, and at the same time save time and expense, it is policy to do so. With this object in view I discarded the use of egg and biscuit during the last moulting season, and used instead Spratt's Cod Liver Oil Cage Bird Food. I have no doubt you will be interested to know that the results were very satisfactory, and as the cost is about one-fourth that of egg and biscuit, and it can be prepared in a few minutes, this method of mixing colour food has much to recommend it. When using cod liver oil food it should be scalded with boiling water, making it crumbly moist—not sloppy. Allow it to go cold, then add the required quantity of colour (pepper) and it is ready for use.

To Help Through a Difficult Moult.

The proper time to give the colour food is just before the birds commence their autumn moult; in the case of young birds at about eight or ten weeks old. A little linseed should be given to the birds daily during this period, which will help to give a bloom and finish to the process of colour-feeding. A small piece of sulphate of iron, about the size of a split pea, should be put in the drinking water three times a week when the birds are about half through the moult. This is a good tonic and acts, too, as a mordant in fixing the colour and making it more lasting. While the birds are moulting it is advisable to cover over the front of the cage with a piece of calico or muslin. This will keep the birds quiet and free from draught, and prevent the sun from bleaching their colour, and as it will also keep them clean, you will be able to show any birds a few times before washing them.

The moulting period in Canaries, and especially in young birds that are moulting their first, or nest, feathers, is certainly the most critical time they have to pass through. Therefore one cannot be too emphatic in drawing the particular attention of fanciers to this important part of the subject. It is most essential to exhibitors that their birds should have a successful and uninterrupted moult. It frequently happens that some birds are unable, from some cause or other, to cast their feathers at the proper time, and so get "stuck in the moult." In this case a simple and inexpensive medicine can be prepared as follows: Sixpennyworth of hay saffron, sixpennyworth of rum, one pennyworth of gentian. Mix together, and allow to stand a few days to get out the strength of the saffron. Give about 20 drops in the drinking water each day. A few feathers plucked from the back of the bird will generally give it a start, and the bird will continue right through the moult without further trouble.

I always leave the seed box on the cage when the birds are being colour-fed, unless I find the birds are not eating as freely as I would wish, in which case I take away the seed, only allowing them to have it for an hour or two in the afternoon. By this means you ensure that the bird partakes of sufficient colour food to obtain the desired rich effect.

When and How to Take Chaffinches.

September and October are quite early enough, as the young birds are then in semi-developed plumage, which renders their identification an easy matter, and, what is more important, they will then have attained a robustness which precludes any arrestment of development by a change to a confined state.

The Bath set, which I have already described, is a very effective method of taking, or the cover-feed method. This, though more effective during winter, especially for the taking of Greenfinches, Linnets, and Bramblings, may be depended on as very effective with Chaffinches during the above months. Take a fairly large bag of screenings (these are easily procured from any farmer or dealer in seeds), arrange them in two separate, but adjacent heaps, where birds are located, water each heap well, and cover both with old bags, matting, or grass; allow a few days to elapse, during which the various seeds will germinate, in which state they are greedily devoured by Finches, etc. Then remove cover from one of the heaps, and arrange a few unlimed grasses in and around same. This is the ground bait, and a day will suffice for all the birds in the locality to locate and banquet thereon, after which the covering may be removed from the second heap, and limed grasses distributed thereon. Another method is to affix a number of grasses to the seeding heads of groundsel or "Fat Hen," on which a flock are observed to be feeding. Or fallen beech mast may be set as directed for bath set, taking care that the limed part is raised about three inches from the ground, and ends of grass are not too firmly fixed in the soil.

Hand and Canary Rearing.

I have no hesitation in condemning both of these methods as being unlikely to produce an exhibition specimen. The former because, however cunning the hand, there is invariably a check to development following the process. But I should certainly advise this method being adopted by anyone who possessed a good tutor, or wished to ascertain the abilities of a Chaffinch when trained in the manner of a piping Bullfinch. Canary rearing will prove a failure, or worse, at least such has been my experience, notwithstanding the fact that I invariably chose proved feeders for my experiments, yet a reference to my notes shows that out of fifty-three eggs of Chaffinch and Buntings hatched, I only succeeded in rearing six, and every one of these young ones were obviously delicate and stunted. This is no doubt attributable to the lack of insects, which in the wild state constitute the major part of the diet of these species. I would advise those who have a desire to Canary-rear these to supplement the chyle supplied by the Canary with small portions of mealworms, gentles, or wasp-grubs administered by hand. This, though I have an opinion that the insective tastes of the Chaffinch are similar to those of the Chats, viz., for coleoptera. This is borne out by the results of quite a few microscopic examinations which I made of the crops of nestlings which were drowned during the awful storm last July, the bright metallic wing-sheaths of various beetles being easily discerned and the iodine test failed to reveal the presence of starch, though possibly such had been assimilated (ante mortem).

Treatment of Fresh-caught Birds.

The secret of success lies in gradually weaning the bird from the succulent seeds and live insects, on to a dry seed diet, slightly augmented by an occasional supply of live or preserved insects, and the more gradual the change the less chance of arrestment of growth or vitality. For seed, supply rape seedlings and scalded oats, in addition to canary seed, which also should be slightly moistened. For green food, supply groundsel, chickweed, mouse-ear and "Fat hen," and a few beech mast or a smashed walnut. For insects, mealworms, gentles, or chrysalides, wasp grubs, beetles or earwigs. These insects have their value as a steadying agent, apart from the fact that they are indispensable to condition—a remark which applies to the bath also.

Never hang a Chaffinch high up, breast high in a scullery is a very suitable place for steadying, and if a small piece of fish or a small perforated box containing a smear of honey be placed in the cage, such will attract flies, which he becomes very adept at catching.

Colour Feeding—Pro or Con?

This is a question I am often asked in connection with the Chaffinch, and my answer is that such depends entirely on whether the bird has a failing in depth of tone in breast. That such a specimen is improved in that respect by judicious feeding, there can be no doubt, but a comparison with an equally excellent unfed specimen, makes apparent the fact that such improvement has only been achieved by a sacrifice of other features, viz., sharpness, yet harmony, of contrast in the colour scheme of the species, and that lustre or bloom, which is invariably flattened more or less by cayenne. I am not an anti-feeder, but I think the assertion that colour feeding a Chaffinch is like applying a coat of bad varnish to a good portrait, is not without a modicum of truth. To the novice I would say, whether you feed or not, don't think you will succeed in benching a cage-moulted specimen equal to that gorgeous specimen which excited your admiration, and your disgust at its taste for second-hand corn, last spring. Such beauty is evanescent in a caged state, like the rose tint of the Linnet. We know not why, like Shakespeare (and my Goldfinch) I can only say—

"'Tis true, 'tis pity, 'tis pity, 'tis true."

I will next deal with the Bullfinch, which, with the Thrush, concludes the series.

The Bullfinch's Varied Diet.

The Bullfinch is generally regarded as a granivorous bird, but in reality his diet varies with the seasons. In spring he draws on himself the gardener's wrath, by his destruction of fruit buds (herbivorous). Later he makes amends by destroying a host of arboreal insects wherewith to rear his young (insectivorous). During summer and autumn his tastes are divided between the fruits of the earth and the weeds of the wayside (frugivorous and granivorous), and in winter he eks out a subsistence on what remains of the wild seeds, nettles and dock in particular, and the cones of the birch tree.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

SEED AND HEN DYING (E.O.A.).—The sample of hemp is quite sound and sweet, and of very good quality. The rape is a very good quality of summer rape. The canary is rather small in size, but of first-rate quality. You might satisfy yourself whether the latter is free from the visits of mice. There is nothing whatever in the seeds to account for death of hen. Numerous causes may have been responsible for the loss, but in the absence of all data it is useless speculating about it. You should have given full particulars of treatment, and any symptoms shown before death, or, better still, have sent the body to Mr. Yates for post-mortem. Should another bird fall ill, write again and give full particulars.

WHAT IS WRONG? (H. Williams).—Really, I cannot tell what is the matter from such slight data as the bird drooping its wings and shaking feathers. Surely there must be some other symptoms you might have recognised, and also said where you keep and how you feed it, and condition of its bowels and appetite. Examine its cage well for red mites, and if any are found deal with them as described in the ANNUAL. Also feed for a week as mentioned in ANNUAL for backward birds. Give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence in the water for two days, and for the remainder of the week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid in the water each day. If not well in that time please write again, and give fuller particulars, when I shall be better able to advise you.

COLOUR FOOD (J.B.).—The ordinary red food as sold by all our large vendors is all that is really essential for ordinary varieties. A little soft brown sugar is added to make it more attractive, and sometimes a small proportion of hot Natal pepper when an exceptionally deep colour is desired. A very good blend is 1lb. of tasteless red, 8ozs. sugar, and 2ozs. hot Natal, thoroughly blended together, and stored in jars or air-tight tins. One or two ounces of best salad oil may be added whilst blending, if none appears to have been added by the maker. But as a rule there is quite enough oil in it when bought. You will find several recipes for colour foods in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and Part IX. of "Our Canaries."

NORWICH HEAPY (J. B. Fizington).—Putting the bird in a wall-case now is about analogous to locking the stable door after the horse is stolen. You will be lucky if its sojourn in the window has not permanently ruined its health. Keep now in a bright cosy position, but not overheated, and see that it is free from direct draughts and impure air. Keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand. For one week give a diet of plain canary only, with a free supply of green stuff daily, and add to the drinking water six drops of dandelion juice and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, every second day. After this add a fourth part of summer rape to the staple of canary seed, and in addition give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed every second day, and on the alternate days give a pinch of equal parts hemp, millet, and teazle. Give a little green food daily. Dissolve a dram of ammoniated citrate of iron and quinine in one ounce of sherry, add a teaspoonful of glycerine, and give ten drops of this mixture in the water two days in every three for a fortnight. If not quite well report progress made at end of month, and I will advise further, if necessary.

INJURED TOE (Norwich).—Your present letter is quite clear, and the treatment I advised last week after surmising that the extra toe shown in sketch was an error still holds. Try the treatment given in the last nine lines of type in reply last week and report result at end of month.

NO RESULTS (M.C.).—If the birds are anxious and ready to commence nesting again, you may allow them to make one more effort, in which case begin at once to feed them as advised to "A Reader of Cage Birds," in last week's issue, and continue this method of feeding until the hen has gone to nest again. Also give the same course of medicines in the water advised in that reply. If you have a lusty young cock available, I would advise you to substitute him for the four-year-old cock, as the latter may possibly be worn out early.

CRESTS AND ROLLERS (H.A.).—(1) It is quite a matter of personal taste whether the Crest or Norwich is the better songster. I personally prefer the Crest, as although its song has rather less variety it is more deep and mellow, and not so painfully shrill and piercing as that of a robust healthy Norwich is apt to be. (2) You would doubtless get some very fair singers from a Roller cock and Crest hen, especially if the young cocks were trained solely under the Roller cock. But if the Crest hen is of fair type it would be wasting good material to utilise her in this way, whilst better songsters might be obtained by mating the cock with a Roller or even a Border hen.

GROWTH ON SIDE (H. Goldstone).—The substance sent was an abnormal feather growth, which sometimes appear during the moult. At times a single quill only is affected, but occasionally several quills become affected, coalesce, and a more or less extensive deposit of matter occurs, which forms into these growths. The cause is obscure as yet, and the growths are not in themselves dangerous in any way, though apt to be very disfiguring when of material size. The one you sent must have been an exceptionally large one. I shall be glad to hear if it reappears either now or at the moult. If you notice it starting to grow, slightly moisten it with lanocyllin three times a week, and give a morsel of bread and milk slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur twice a week for a month.

BOWEL OBSTRUCTION (Miss F. Bird).—You ought to have given full particulars of the foods you use, especially soft food, and how you mix them. Also how often you give green food. The cause of the "caked" vent is much more likely to be due to the food supplied than to the hen. If the bowels appear constipated you may not be giving sufficient green food, but if they move freely you probably give too much. Again, the addition of sugar to the egg food, if at all overdone, will set up this trouble. In cleaning the birds use a small camel-hair pencil, such as is found in a box of water colours, and after cleaning birds, clean the brush, and then partly fill it with salad oil, and just touch the vent with the oil for a day or two until the trouble passes away. Add a third part of crushed sponge cake to the soft food you name for a time, and well sprinkle it with maw seed. Give also a teaspoonful of soaked rape each day for each brood that is being reared; see that your hemp is sound and good; and give chick weed, lettuce, and tender young tops of groundsel as green food. Regulate the quantity of green food given in such a way as to keep the bowels free, but not relaxed, and the evacuation normal.

INTRODUCING FRESH HENS (J. Kirkland).—You certainly must not introduce fresh hens into the breeding cages where you have hens already sitting on eggs. If you want to mate these fresh hens with the two cocks, you must place each hen in a separate breeding cage, and move the cocks from the hens that are sitting, and mate them in the usual way with the other hens. This means that the hens now sitting must be left to rear the broods by themselves, which they will probably do satisfactorily. When this method is adopted the cock really ought to be taken away at the commencement of incubation, as when removed at a later stage some few hens will leave the eggs and refuse to "see the job through on the lonesome." Therefore you must keep an eye on them for a day or so after moving the cock, and if they leave the nests and do not return there will be nothing for it but to return the respective cocks before eggs are spoilt.

A TRIO (Philbert).—(1) The colour of young from a yellow cock and buff hen (clears, I presume), depends very largely upon the colour of their respective parents. There will be yellows and buffs, and probably clears, ticks, and more or less variegated, the extent of marking depending upon the amount of green blood in the birds. The question is a very vague one. (2) The hen had probably not begun to feed the last brood of young. By all means try removing the cock this time, and let the hen hatch and rear the brood alone. Cock should be removed when hen commences to sit, or at least during the first few days of incubation, and not be allowed to remain until near hatching. Feed hen whilst sitting on plain canary seed, with an occasional pinch of rape. On the eve of hatching give half a teaspoonful of egg food, and continue a regular supply of this, fresh, twice a day, in small quantities, until young are reared. Begin giving a little green food on the third or fourth day, or earlier if hen seems slow to begin feeding. You might also add a pinch of sulphate of soda to the drinking water for one half of each day for two days before, and after the eve of hatching. Get Part V. of "Our Canaries," for the fullest details of feeding. (3) Yes, an "untried" hen is one that has not been mated, in the current season at least. The only advantage in having untried hens is that you have the "raw material" good or bad, and know you are not starting with hens which have been put to a practical test, and are discarded because they were "found wanting."

LOSS OF YOUNG (J.F.P.).—It is quite possible the young may have died of inflamed bowels set up by obstruction, as you suspect, in which case you might have seen several replies of late referring to the trouble; notably to "J.S." last week, and "F.L.N." and "D.E." on May 25th. But I think the cause is more likely to be that the hen ceased feeding them, and a little judicious variation of diet, adding a little soaked rape, a variety of green food in small scraps, and sprinkling the egg food with maw, might have brought her round. If the bowels appeared to be obstructed, then a few of the tender young tops of groundsel would have been the best green food, and should have been given in sufficient quantity to just keep the evacuation of a normal consistency. The absence of droppings from young three days old is, however, no evidence that the bowels are not working properly, as the evacuations at this age, and for some days later, are disposed of by the hen. If the pair of birds are both thoroughly robust and healthy, and anxious to nest again immediately, you may allow them to do so if you wish, and when the nest of young are hatched follow up above hints and those in replies referred to. As you have only the one pair of birds you should discard the white of the egg. The yolk alone will make ample egg food for two days, if you remove only half the yolk from shell the first day and bury the remainder in a tin or cup filled with fine meal and keep in a cool dry place.

GETTING A SECOND BROOD (F.W.B., Hastings).—You did right to remove the cock under the circumstances, as the hen was clearly not ready to go to nest again, and will not agree very well with the cock as long as she is in this condition and so attentive to the young. You ought to have put a little crumbly moist egg-food, and a pan of lightly crushed seed in the nursery, as the young would very soon have picked up a fair proportion of their own food. If they do not already do this, supply them with food as suggested, but you need not trouble to give water, or green food as long as the hen is feeding them, and in a few days when you see them picking over the food and frequently nibbling a seed in their beaks, place them in a rather larger cage by themselves, and feed as advised for weaning birds in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," or Part V. of "Our Canaries," and you will find them quite able to do for themselves in a very few days. Then re-mate the parents in the ordinary way. The hen will be more amenable to the cock's attention by this time, I expect.

BREEDING WITH WHEEZY COCK (J. R. D.).—Ashton).—It is a very great mistake to breed with such a cock, as the young are extremely liable to be predisposed to the complaint, and become affected early in even a worse degree than the parents. The cock feeding the young will not affect them. They will inherit the predisposition constitutionally. I am afraid nothing will cure the bird. Any remedy can only be palliative, and the schlorodyne mixture you say you have tried is the best you can use. It must be used, however, in combination with proper preventive measures, and removal of causes.

A SILENT YORKSHIRE (Puzzled).—I take it the bird is not mated, in which case if the Goldfinch was a fresh introduction last autumn before the Canary was ready to resume singing, after the moult, it is possible he may simply be jealous of his company. It is difficult to account otherwise for such cases as these. See that he is quite free from cold draughts, and try keeping him where he will not see the Finch. Give a diet of plain canary only, and a liberal supply of green food for a week, and add to the water six drops of dandelion juice and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny piece every second day during the week.

After this add a fourth part of summer rape to the staple diet, and give a small teaspoontul of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw and gold of pleasure seed. Give this every second day for a fortnight, and on the alternate days a pinch of equal parts hemp, inga, millet and teazle. Give a spray of green food daily, and add to the water four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every day for a week. His behaviour in flying at the wires is simply an indication of tameness. He wants to make friends, and play with your finger. Possibly he is more interested in courting your notice than in singing.

CAUSE OF DEATH (Miss K. S. C.).—I'm afraid I cannot help you very much. The "hard substance" internally, of the locality of which I am not at all clear, is in any case not consistent with the bird being in perfect health a few hours before you found him in extremis, as it were. The external symptoms you describe are very similar to what may be expected in a case of pneumonia supervening, or a severe chill. The only really satisfactory way of ascertaining the true cause of death would have been to send the body to Mr. Yates for a proper post-mortem to be made. If you have another die in a similar way, I would strongly advise you to adopt this course. By the way, it was a most risky thing to put this bird among your other birds, where it had not previously been kept, when it was so obviously ill. Suppose the trouble was infectious! It would even be a good plan to test the cage, by keeping a common, worthless Canary in it for a week or two, and if it should die pretty soon, get a p.m. to ascertain the cause. No envelope reached me.

DIET OF CRESTS (J. Roberts).—When the young are a month old you should begin to add a regular supply of canary and summer rape seed, dry and uncooked, and a little cracked hemp to the daily supply of soft food. Mix the soft food rather on the dry side as soon as the young are doing for themselves, and give about a teaspoonful of hemp daily. Crack the latter fresh each day, but do not smash it up. As soon as they crack the canary seed quite freely, gradually reduce the other items until by the time the birds are seven or eight weeks old you have got them on a staple of plain canary with a small quantity of egg food, crushed biscuit, or bread and milk every second day, which you may continue until the moult is at hand. In addition to this staple, give a pinch of summer rape every second day, alternately with the soft food, and a little seed mixture, hemp, millet, teazle, inga, black rape, and broken groats, as frequently prescribed here, two or three times a week. Keep a supply of pure, fresh water, and for green food give half ripe plantain stalks, shepherd's purse seed, and seedy chickweed.

REMOVING COCK (W. Miller).—As your hens already go to nest too early now the cocks are removed there is little hope of them not doing so if the cocks are left with them. The opposite effect is more likely to happen. Still, you might try it with the next brood, which will be the last brood for this season. When another round of broods are being reared, do not start giving hemp until the young are about ten or twelve days old, otherwise your feeding will do very well. If you have any more young about fourteen days old you might also try returning the cock, and keep an eye on his behaviour. If he takes up feeding the eyes on his behaviour. If he takes up feeding the young all will be well, and if he molests them they will be quite old enough to place in a nursery cage, when one or both old birds may continue feeding them, and in the worst event they will be quite old enough for you to easily complete the rearing by hand. As soon as the young leave the nest supply them with a nursery cage, with crumbly moist egg food, a little soaked rape, and seeds to "practice on," as advised to "J. Roberts" in this issue.

STRANGE BEHAVIOUR (J. C. M.).—The manner in which the cock behaves after copulation is quite common among Canaries, though it is much more pronounced with some specimens than others. In many cases it is barely noticeable. It is doubtless of nervous origin, and does not necessarily affect the fertility of the eggs in any way. The manner of the first hen, in a minor degree, is also quite common, though this hen was rather abnormally demonstrative, which may possibly have been somewhat due to excessive vigour and inefficient action combined. As a beginner you should get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," which will help you over numerous difficulties.

SEPTIC INFECTION (G.D.).—I'm afraid I cannot enlighten you much without full particulars of your method of feeding, and the conditions under which birds are kept, and you give not the slightest information on these points. The cause is probably due to some error in the general hygienic conditions or dietary. In a general way see that the greatest cleanliness is observed in the cages, perches, nest, and nesting material. Pay particular attention to the water supply, keeping it pure and fresh, and frequently cleansing the vessels thoroughly. When hens are nesting add sufficient Condy's to the water every day or two to give a slight pink hue. See that all foods are perfectly sound, sweet, pure, and fresh, leaving nothing that is putrescent, such as soft food and greenstuff, to be eaten after it has become stale, and pay particular attention in this respect to egg food, using none but quite good fresh eggs, and, if possible, see that they are laid by fowls in a healthy condition, and under hygienic management. Similarly with green food; give none but perfectly sound and fresh, and see that it is grown under clean and wholesome conditions. It would be wise to avoid plural mating for this season at least. If you have any further lose, write again and give full particulars as indicated above, and refer also to this reply.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

AILING GREY PARROT (Moore).—As a preliminary, bathe or spray the nostrils with diluted glycothymoline, and repeat your query next week, giving me full details as to how you have been keeping, feeding and treating; in the meantime, while letting it have plenty of light and air, keep it strictly out of draught, and put a half-teaspoonful of bynophosphates into the drinking water daily. You must not use a metal drinker while giving drugs.

PARROT PULLING ITS FEATHERS (J. E. K.).—Apparently you can do but little save to avoid anything which seems to aggravate the trouble. Feather pulling is almost incurable once the bird becomes confirmed in the habit. Cease spraying for a bit, and just grease the bare parts with paraffin oil, rubbing this on with your finger; do not put on sufficient to run among its plumage and make it greasy. Providing it eats sufficient of it, the canary and millet alone will be ample, but I should add a few oats. Also continue to supply all the other items as at present. Continue the Dinneford's Magnesia and chemical food as already directed. On all suitable days put it outside, but not in an exposed position, and not when cold winds are prevalent. Give it as much fruit as it cares to eat; also some seeding grass and chickweed to pick over. Continue as above for another month, and then report progress again.

AVADAVATS (E. E. M.).—Yes, they are Avadavats; you will have to trim the beak back as often as it grows to any abnormal length, keeping a piece of clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage, and a few small-ish lumps of old mortar on cage bottom should assist the bird in keeping his beak down to normal size. Add to your dietary millet sprays and greenfood (flowering or seeding grass, chickweed, groundsel, lettuce, etc.), I should ignore their not taking greenfood; supply a little of the kinds I have named—not all the kinds at once, but varying them from day to day. Dinneford's Magnesia and bynophosphates are good remedies to keep by you. Give one dose of the former, half teaspoonful in the drinking water, and follow this with about 20 drops of the phosphates in the drinking water every other day, but you must not use a metal drinker while giving the above. Also give them all the light and air you can without draught.

RUNNING AT NOSTRILS (Pakena).—This can arise from several causes. I cannot help you unless you tell me how you have been feeding and treating the bird. Send me this information at once, and I shall be pleased to help you. In the meantime give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water for one day, and repeat the dose after an interval of two days. Also spray or bathe the nostrils twice daily with dilute glycothermoline; it will do no harm if a little is swallowed. Do not give this in bulk, but mix a little for each occasion. You must keep it strictly out of draught, but at the same time it must have light and air.

BARE OF PLUMAGE (Constant Reader).—Treat as already advised as regards spraying and drugs, but diet as follows: Seed mixture: One quart each canary and white millet seed, one pint oats, half a pint each hemp, paddy rice, dari, sunflower, and shelled nuts, and a gill of grit (not sand)—well mix and keep a continuous supply in the cage. You can give a little soaked bread or biscuit daily, but soak it only in chemical food and water in equal parts, and lightly dust with flowers of sulphur before supplying to the bird. Also supply ripe fruit, according to season and bird's taste, liberally. A dry crust or piece of plain biscuit occasionally is very wholesome, keep clean cuttlebone hanging in the cage. You must keep its bowels well regulated, not watery loose, with occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful in the usual supply of drinking water, but a metal drinker must not be used. The spraying will help the bird, as will outdoor treatment on suitable days (not while cold winds prevail), do not stand in an exposed position. Report progress a month hence.

VARIOUS PARRAKEETS (H. J. E.).—I do not consider metal receptacles good; these should be of wood, at any rate for Parrakeets, which do not line their nest at all. Any box or log will do, if of suitable size, providing the bottom is concave, this providing a resting place for the eggs—wooden barrels if hung up level naturally provide this, therefore are usually recommended. If you care to send me a stamped addressed envelope per Editor of this paper I will put you right.

DOVES AND PIGEONS (R. H. Walsh).—Bleeding-heart Doves or Pigeons are a costly but beautiful species, warm brown above, whitish below, with a patch of vivid crimson on the breast. Bronze-spotted Doves have metallic spots on the wings. Crested Pigeons are very beautiful birds, clad in blue-grey, paler below with metallic lilac and bronze wing bands. I think you would prefer either the former or the latter. It is quite impossible to give the whole Dove family in the query column, altogether too large an order, but if you will indicate the direction your fancy lies, and state your accommodation, I shall be pleased to name suitable kinds. Re nest receptacles, send me a stamped addressed envelope per Editor, and I shall be pleased to help you. I do not consider it probable that a Canary and a Java Sparrow would mate.

BUDGERIGARS NOT BREEDING (P. P. B.).—You really expect too much from me, not a hint as to how you are keeping—cage or aviary. There have been cases of them breeding in quite small cages, but this must not be taken as a general rule, so I cannot attempt to even guess a reason for them not breeding. Give details, and I will try to assist you. Give them canary and white millet in equal parts, with a liberal supply of green food, such as seeding or flowering grass, lettuce, chickweed, groundsel, etc., according to season; cuttlebone, grit, and a few oats occasionally. Our Nutshell, "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free, from our Manager, would assist you in keeping and breeding these charming birds.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

LINNET MULES (Dou).—You will find all the particulars you want given in the reply to "Beginner" this week. Unless one knows the disposition of the cock Linnet—i.e., that he does not interfere with nest, or eggs, or young—it is a wise plan to separate him from the hen Canary while she incubates the eggs and rears the young. Perhaps you may be able to keep reasonably close watch on the Linnet at first, however. I have had Linnets which would both sit on the eggs when the hen came off and lend a hand (or beak, rather) in the feeding of the young Mules.

THE CASE OF A BLACKBIRD (J. G. Coughtrey).—Try the following: Mix together an equal quantity of unrefined honey and glycerine, say a tablespoonful of each and well stir a teaspoonful of the mixture into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water. Give this fresh daily for a week to ten days, as may be necessary. It is a simple remedy which I have known prove efficacious in quite a large number of cases of hoarseness and loss of voice in different kinds of birds. By the way, I don't think much of the method of feeding you mention; it is neither varied nor generous.

CUTTING THE TONGUE (E. Derbyshire).—I have for many years past very frequently stated that it is useless to cut a bird's tongue with the idea of enabling it to talk freely, as birds do not make use of the tongue in talking—in short, it is an act of sheer cruelty, and those perpetrating it ought to be compelled to have their own tongues slit in return. Many other writers, too, have said the same thing. How hard it seems to kill this "old woman's" helief! The wretched question crops up as regularly as the influenza! All you need to do is to repeat short catchy phraees as often as possible to your bird—such, for instance, as "Hello, Jack" and "Come on, Jack"—which he will soon begin to mimic when he gets older.

FURTHER FROM BEXHILL (P.G.).—Many thanks for your interesting letter. By all means send along your theory concerning light muling. I am not scared at scientific terms, and long ago got over the head-ache which synchronised with my determined wrestle with Mendel's principles of heredity. I can quite believe that in the magical third generation you will be able to breed dark

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Mules "to order," but the light ones—well, that's a very different kind of order. Go ahead with your scheme, however, by all means. Respecting the Swallows, I have never heard the matter even mentioned, but will make enquiries. Don't forget the promised further information concerning the Blue Tits. You would seem to possess a very worthy hen Canary.

LINNET OUT OF CONDITION (Perplexed).—It is a little out of condition internally, and in my opinion a short treatment with dandelion juice (taraxacum) will put matters to rights. Get one ounce of taraxacum from a chemist and stir a teaspoonful into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water.' Give this for two days (fresh daily), then on alternate days (plain water in between) over a period of 8 to 12 days, as seems necessary. Your feeding is good; continue the shepherd's purse and chickweed. Get the following seed mixture made up and give a teaspoonful daily for a fortnight (afterwards at frequent intervals): plantain, gold of pleasure and sesame two ounces of each, dandelion, thistle, white lettuce, maw, and cornflower, one ounce of each, by weight.

TWO ITEMS (D.E.).—(1) The answer to the question referred to was not given by me (possibly by my colleague, Mr. St. John, who replies to Canary queries), hence I do not know definitely to what kind of birds it refers. You could mix 2 or 3 drops of cod liver oil emulsion amongst the soft-food (I presume that you gave the olive oil in this way), which would serve your purpose and help build up the young at the same time. If the fault is really the hen's, then the only remedy lies in getting rid of her. (2) The young Greenfinches won't need soaked seed, but it should be lightly cracked—at any rate, the hemp and sunflower should be. Offer them coarse oatmeal or groats in additiou (whole Plasmon oats are really best of all), and plenty of wild seeding greenwood, such as shepherd's purse, chickweed, groundsel, plantain, and the like. A good all-round seed mixture would be: Canary three parts, teazle and white sunflower two parts each, summer rape and hemp one part each, by measure. You would find the "Nutshell" booklet on the Greenfinch (post free 2½d. from our publisher), or Mr. Norman's book on British Hardbills (post free 1/1), full of valuable information concerning the species.

FROM A NOVICE (T.D.X.).—No sample was received with your letter (did you omit to enclose it?) so that I cannot, of course, say whether it is sulphate of soda or not. There is no reason why the sulphate should not be given when using the food you mention. At the same time, neither old nor young birds should be indiscriminately dosed with this medicament—nor any other, for matter of that. At the same time, if a saline medicine is needed, then sulphate of soda cannot be beaten. For young birds, and especially those just feeding themselves, seeding shepherd's purse is the only green food I care to use freely—it is not a green-food in the same sense as lettuce or watercress, but green-seed-food, so to speak, for it is the soft seed out of the pods that is eaten and so much relished and which does the birds so much good. Seeding chickweed (either the ordiuary kind or the mouse-ear) is also good providing too many leaves he not given.

MULING MATTERS (Beginner).—Am afraid you ask for information which I could hardly give without writing a long article—an impossibility in the space allowed these replies. You should read up the articles on Mule breeding which have recently appeared in CAGE BIRDS; also books on the subject. You should not return the Linnet until the hen Canary shows signs of desiring to go to nest again, which ought not to be until any young which hatch are about to start to fend for themselves. Feed the hen while sitting mainly on canary seed, with just a little mixed seed (or mixed hemp and rape) occasionally, and a trifle of egg-food. If you have only the one hen up, when the young hatch give the hen egg-food made by mixing the yolk only of the egg (hard-boiled, of course, and minced) with an equal quantity of crushed Osborne biscuit, or stale crumb of a standard loaf. Later on, when a greater quantity of food is needed daily, use a portion of the white of the egg also, increasing the biscuit, of course, at the same time. Let her also have good, sound hemp (lightly cracked) and summer rape seeds, and, after the second day, a little seeding shepherd's purse and chickweed, gradually increasing the two latter items until you are giving them practically ad libitum.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

NOVICE.—Anæmia was the cause of death. The body was dropsical and in a very ill-nourished condition.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A. W. L.—We cannot answer until you let us know for what purpose you require the disinfectant. "Nutshell" booklet No. 9 deals with the disinfection of cages, bird-rooms, and aviaries, and we think you would find the information you require in this (post free 2½d.). You could not, for instance, very well disinfect soil with the same medium you would utilise for cages, walls, etc.

H. Hornblower.—We could not possibly reproduce your sketch of the perch, which is at the same time a red-mite trap, as this idea is already the subject of a patent.

W. Forbes.—Your notice, we think, would hardly do for breeding cages, which are generally stacked one above another.

H. Flintoff.—The strictly correct pronunciation is Der-be; but locally it is more often pronounced Dar-be. It is one of those points around which dispute can always arise.

J. Locke.—We could not reproduce the picture you so kindly send us, but will see if we can obtain one of the original photographs.

CLITHEROE C.B.S.

A lecture was delivered in Bennett's Tea Rooms, June 10, by Mr. J. Barnes, of Whalley, on colour and colour feeding. Mr. J. Briggs in the chair. The lecturer, in opening, said they must always go in for good coloured birds both in the cocks and hens. He preferred marked hens and clear cocks for breeding a good percentage of clear ones. The lecturer, however, thought they could get good coloured birds from two clears providing they had green blood in them. They must always have good feathered birds and the best of quality. With regard to colour feeding when the birds moult they must start when the young birds are from seven to eight weeks old. The way he preferred to mix colour food was 6lbs. of tasteless to 1lb. of hot, mixed well together; then put it in an airtight canister or jar. When using it with egg food, put castor sugar to their liking, starting with it weak and gradually making it stronger. He gave the birds colour food six days, and on the seventh day mixed seed. He covered the cage fronts with brown paper down to the middle bar when the birds are moulting. Questions were afterwards asked, and satisfactorily answered. A hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. Barnes for his lecture, and the hope was expressed that more members would attend the meetings and endeavour to make the society a success.—J. Southworth, sec.

CONSULT THIS REMARKABLE MAN.

Prominent People Say He Reads Their Lives as an Open Book.

Do You Want to Know About Your Business, Marriage, Changes, Occupation, Friends, Enemies, or what to do to Achieve Success?

TEST READINGS FREE TO ALL "CAGE BIRDS" READERS WHO WRITE AT ONCE.

Attention of the mystically inclined seems to be centred at present upon the work of Mr. Clay Burton Vance, who, although laying claim to no special gift of supernatural powers, attempts to reveal the lives of people through the slender clues of handwriting and birth dates. The undeniable accuracy of his delineations leads one to surmise that heretofore palmiste, prophets, astrologers, and seers of divers beliefs have failed to apply the true principles of the science of divination.

The following letters are published as evidence of Mr. Vance's ability. Mr. Lafayette Redditt writes:—"My Reading received. With the greatest amazement I read as step by step you outlined my life since infancy. I have been somewhat interested along these lines for years, but had no idea that such priceless advice could be given. I must admit that you are indeed a very remarkable man, and am glad you use your great gift to benefit your clients."

Mr. Fred Walton writes:—"I did not expect such a splendid outline of my life. The scientific value of your Readings cannot be fully appreciated until one has his own Reading. To consult you means success and happiness."

Arrangements have been made to give free test Readings to all readers of "Cage Birds," but it is especially requested that those who wish to avail themselves of this generous offer make application at once. If you wish a delineation of your own life; if you wish a true description of your characteristics, talents, and opportunities, simply send your full name, the date, month and year of your birth (state whether Mr., Mrs., or Miss), and also copy the following verse in your own handwriting:

"Your power is marvellous,
So people write;
Please read my life.
Are my prospects bright?"

Send your letter to Mr. Clay Burton Vance, Suite 273a, Palais Royal, Paris, France. If you wish you may enclose 6d. (stamps of your own country) to pay postage, clerical work, etc. Please note that 2½d. postage is required on letters posted to France. Do not enclose coins or silver in your letter.

ROSSENDALE C.B.F.S.

A lecture was given June 11, at Commercial Hotel, Stacksteads, by Mr. L. E. Watkins (Bolton) on the Roller. There was a very good attendance and he gave the members something to think about, giving them hints on breeding, sinking mating, feeding, etc.—Ingham Taylor, hon. sec.

KETTERING C.B.S.

Meeting held headquarters, June 10. Mr. E. Whitehall gave a very interesting paper on "Domestic Pets," pointing out how many lessons can be learnt from all our pets. After a very lengthy discussion, a vote of thanks was unanimously passed to the speaker for giving such a very interesting address.—A. Martin, Sec.

Roller Canaries at the 1912-1913 Palace Shows.

Sir,—As Mr. J. W. Norris has not contradicted the statement of my informant, that the general meeting of March, 1912, declined to sanction interference with any member's private right to exhibit Roller Canaries at the Crystal Palace Show in the future, I infer my information is correct. The object of my letter in your issue of June 1 was that committees and members should know such a commendable decision had been arrived at.

A Proposed Cage Bird Society for Bargoed.

Sir,—Being a Canary fancier, I should like to see a society formed in Bargoed. I know one or two fanciers that are anxious to join, and I am sure there are enough fanciers in the district to form a good society, if we could only get in touch with each other. If you would publish this in Cage Birds, it would no doubt give us the necessary introduction. Wishing your valuable paper the success it deserves.

And for Penygraig, Rhondda Valley.

Sir,—Having been approached by several well-known bird fanciers in the locality to form a club here in Penygraig, shall be pleased if you will kindly announce that I intend calling a meeting at the Butchers' Arms Hotel, Penygraig, on Tuesday next, the 18th inst., with the intention of forming such a club. All fanciers are heartily welcome, and I hope that all interested in the Fancy will make every effort to attend. The meeting is to be called at 8 p.m. prompt, and I hope to see a good muster there. Thanking you for the use of your valuable paper.

Egg Laid When a Month Overdue!

An Extraordinary Experience.

Sir,—The following account of my experience with a large Norwich Plainhead hen may interest your readers. She laid on the 27th and 28th April, which eggs were taken away and replaced with china eggs. She missed the 29th; on the 30th she appeared drowsy, and I treated her for egg-binding for two days without result. Then I continued treating for inflammation. She improved, but the swelling at the vent continued. The hen, sitting on the china eggs, continued to eat well. Thinking now it was a growth in the vent, which I considered incurable, the same as I have seen affect fowls, I separated her from the cock and put her in a spare cage with a nest to sit in, and kept her bowels open. Fancy my surprise when, on the 5th June, she laid a large full-shelled egg, partly covered with a second shell. When broken, the white was blue-black, rotten, and smelt very badly. Now the egg must have been carried inside the hen for over a month after it was due. The hen appears none the worse and quite lively. Has any other reader had a similar experience, with the bird living after undergoing such a strain?

Rearing Young Birds Without Egg Food.

Sir,—I was much amused at Mr. Canning's letter in this week's Cage Birds referring to the above subject, and the loose way in which he writes upon this important subject. He is rash enough to pass his opinion without examination of the matter before him. I sum Mr. Canning's letter up in one word, viz., prejudice, which is the enemy of all truth, knowledge, and improvement, and is the blindness of the mind, rendering its powers not only useless, but mischievous. Healthy criticism makes for advancement, but it is fundamental that such criticism be dictated by commonsense. The time that Mr. Canning has kept birds does not necessarily stamp him as an authority, because another man with keener faculties may advance considerably further in much less time. Mr. Canning proceeds to give us details of his method of preparing egg food, and he differs from all who can claim to be called experts, by not boiling his eggs half long enough. But supposing five minutes' boiling is enough, there are three other processes after the eggs are cold, the part cannot be greater than the whole, the food was to be done in three minutes; so we will dismiss this part of his reasoning in Euclid's way, and call it absurd. Touching on wheezing, Mr. Canning does not grasp my meaning; this complaint is really a state of disordered respiration caused by the narrowness of the bronchial passages. I contend that egg food, by raising the temperature of the blood, and causing overheating, renders the birds confined in cages easier victims to an attack. Upon sudden changes taking place in the temperature of the air, the bird takes a chill more easily when its blood is in the unnatural condition following upon egg feeding. I have always studied the food question for the benefit of my birds, and I aim at fortifying the system by giving them proper nutriment to sustain them and keep them at a high level, and in the pink of condition. Referring to septic fever, I would point out that Mr. Canning is much nearer to an outbreak of this malady amongst his birds than the fancier who does not use egg food. The word "septic" in chemistry is used to denote those bodies which tend to promote putrefaction. Now, egg food virtually begins to decompose one hour after it is made, and the process is accelerated in a hird cage. I think these facts should make even Mr. Canning reflect, if he has not imbibed too many prejudices in his youth. No, Mr. Editor, my food does not cure diseases, hut it does more: it prevents them to a very great extent. Many can testify throughout our hobby what a terrible scourge septic visitation is and what ravishes it will make, and I believe the egg food is often responsihle; candidly, this consideration first started me to seek a substitute, and I hope to have the opinions of other fanciers on my method before many weeks. I do not expect every fancier to see eye to eye with me without duly considering my claim. However, I have confidence that I shall be given a fair trial to prove what I say.

T. Stanley.

A Bird-catching Query.

Sir,—Having noticed in your correspondence columns a gentleman saying a person is liahle to the penalty named, I should be pleased if he will enlighten me as to where it comes in, as in our district (Sleaford) Chaffinches are not listed, and there is a clause inserted which says "Any owner or occupier of land or any person authorised hy him is exempt from all birds not on schedule." I am a bird-catcher myself, although I have never set up Chaffinch pegging, but as your correspondent's penalty may apply in other cases, I shall be obliged if he will explain.

Birdlet.

A Recipe for Egg Cake.

Said to Supplant Hard-boiled Egg.

Sir,—It seems to be a religion with Canary breeders that egg food is necessary in rearing young. The term "egg food," I take it, means the accepted formula, as egg and bread crumb or egg and biscuit. As every breeder knows, it is essential that this he given absolutely fresh, and observing the fact that young birds are being fed for at least twelve hours a day, unless such food is changed two or three times during this period it is sure to "go off" more or less. Taking into consideration the frail mites whose staple food it is, it is easy to understand the harmful results that may accrue from even a morsel given that is not thoroughly sweet. Now, as regards the mother: even Canaries are very "human" with respect to food, and will eat that which is most palatable, irrespective of what is most heneficial, and the result of too much of this food from its over-stimulating effects brings them too soon into breeding condition, and the results are that the young, while still unable to leave the nest, are neglected, perhaps plucked of their feathers, and the mother starts laying again, with the result that the young are probably lost from lack of maternal attention. From long use I am satisfied that the formula given below supplies all the nourishment that is required in the successful rearing of young, whether Canaries, Hybrids, British, or various seed-eating foreigners, and the advantages I have found are as follows: It is economical, can be made at home, is palatable to the birds, sufficient can be made to last at least a week (or longer if required), it remains sweet until the end, and every particle will be eaten up by the birds, and, unlike egg food proper, it does not over-stimulate the hen, consequently the desire to start re-nesting is considerably lessened. Formula: One egg, teacup nearly full of castor sugar, teacup quite full of self-raising flour. Beat egg, add sugar and beat, add flour, wet down with a little milk until quite limp, and pour into a shallow tin. Cook in a quick oven for ten minutes. You have here the essential feature of egg food, every particle of which is of equal value. Keep it in a closed tin, and commence using when a day old (it rubs up better than when new). Break off a piece as required, and rub between the hands until fine. Since using this formula I have never resorted to egg food as such, and from years of experience I am satisfied that more and healthier young can be reared, and the baneful results of egg food proper very largely obviated. I would add that I use this food in conjunction with the usual seeds all through the year—of course, in a much lesser degree.

How to Identify the Warblers.

Valuable Hints to Rambling Bird-lovers.

Sir,—One of the chief charms of field ornithology lies in the daily difficulties that hesot one. If all hirds were as easy to identify as the Blackbird and Robin, few of us would trouble to go deeply into the study of wild-hird life. The novice begins by being interested in our common resident birds, and after a time, when he commences to classify, he finds that many species are partly resident and partly migratory. The Bunting family is generally the first stumhling block. Of these hirds we have eight species which are not by any means easy to identify as male, female, or young, but there are marks that, with a little perseverance hecome familiar to the student. With the visit of our beautiful migratory birds, one finds difficulties of identification of daily occurrence, and especially is this so with the beautiful little Warblers—the Chiff-Chaff, Willow Warbler, and the Wood Wren. If one could only handle the birds, there are certain means of identification which make the matter practically easy, but as this is denied to us, we must study the habits and manoeuvres of these little creatures to help us in our pursuit. In the early days of March, the little Chiff-Chaff makes the toilsome journey to his English home; he is the first to arrive, and about the last to depart. He has been noticed in the West in the winter months, and I think a few stay with us all the year round. He is with us generally a week or more hefore his song, if you may call it a song, is heard. I noticed one in a garden here quite eight days before he commenced to sing; the weather was cold at the time. It would he too cold to find insects readily, and such food would be absolutely necessary to sustain such a mite. The Chiff-Chaff is the smallest of these three Warblers; he is somewhat dingy in colour, has a faint whitish eye stripe, dark feet and legs, and has the shortest wings of the three—the wings when folded, only cover the root of the tail. In flight, he flaps his wings quickly and flies in an undulating manner; he is less rapid, and, what is of great importance, is much rarer than the Willow Wren and more shy, so that if we see either of these two we may generally consider it to be the latter. The Willow Wren is the next to arrive, and is not many days after the Chiff-Chaff in reaching our shores. In colouring he is practically a copy of the same—yellowish-brown hack, whitish breast and abdomen, and yellow flank; the eye stripe has a greenish tinge, the legs are a shade paler than those of the Chiff-Chaff. He is not hy any means shy, and one may stand under a tree and watch him closely, running out to the end of each branch, and hunting carefully each separate leaf, for he is a veritahle leaf-searcher; he only pauses in this occupation to sing his peculiar song, so unlike that of any other bird. Commencing with a high note, he sings in a descending scale, and finishes in a manner suggesting exhaustion, as though he would continue it if it were not such an effort. There is a difference in this song during the height of the breeding season, when he will occasionally finish with a high-pitched note. The peculiarity of song of the Willow-Wren and his hold familiarity are certain aids in separating these Warblers. Now, to deal with the Wood Warbler, or Wood Wren, as he is more commonly called. He is a bird of the woods, especially beech woods, and can often be detected hunting among the foliage of those grand trees. He is the largest of the three, and has larger wings, which, when closed, reach nearly to the end of the tail. He is greener and brighter in colour, and the eye-stripe is more distinct and yellow; his flight is swift and gliding until he is about to settle, when he descends in a somewhat spiral manner. He sings a cheery mellow bubbling song, his wings and tail vibrating swiftly the while, and he sometimes sings on the wing like our well-known pet the Greenfinch, finishing with a mellow trill as he alights on some favourite branch. He will occasionally dash out and catch some passing insect on the wing in the manner of the familiar Flycatcher. In the identification of these fragile little creatures one should remember that the Willow Warhler is much more plentiful than either of the others, and one can generally tell whether the bird he is watching is a Wood Wren, unless some peculiarly coloured Willow Wren deceives him. The old birds moult before going to their winter homes, and, of course, are then bright and clean looking. These must not be confused with the young birds of the year, which are a pale yellow colour, and are fond of coming to our gardens in late summer, clambering up our rose trees and the stalks of other plants in the manner of the Grasshopper Warbler. In the summer months when the foliage of the hedgerows and shady lanes is getting thick, a croaking scolding note from the opposite side of the bushes betrays the fact that the Whitethroat is busy constructing his nest somewhere near. Stay and watch for him; his scolding note continues until he is unable to contain himself no longer, and then, flitting about among the hranches, he warbles a few hright notes, his quivering wings and ruffled crest showing the energy he is putting into his song. Taking wing, he continues singing, and alights upon a favourite branch some distance away. Here he can generally be seen for some time, and we may note his pure white throat and upper breast and hrownish back and legs; when he ruffles his plumage, his head seems too large for his body. One should not confuse the Whitethroat with any other hird, his pure white throat distinguishing his from the Garden Warbler, and his size and colour from the Lesser Whitethroat, hesides which his actions are somewhat peculiar. He is busy and inquisitive, trustful and confident in himself, flittering from bough to bough, and darting after passing insects in the same way as the Flycatcher. The Lesser Whitethroat is a shade smaller, but although this difference is noticeable in caged specimens, it is hardly enough for identification in the open, and fortunately the Whitethroats differ in plumage; the back of the Lesser bird is darker, and of a greyish brown, and the head a bluish grey; the legs are bluish; in song the two birds differ considerably. The one has a truly warbling note, pleasant to listen to; the other's is a piercing high pitched effort, and one may hear it the whole length of a long country lane without once catching a glimpse of the performer. The Lesser is not only shy, but considerably rarer than the greater bird, but as he is such an incessant songster he and his brothers get the credit of being much more numerous than they actually are. Now, if one only will remember that if a brownish bird is seen with a pure white throat singing a warbling song, this is likely to be the greater of the Whitethroats, there need be no mistake in identification. Other birds have white throats, but they are of a dingy dirty white, and lack the purity of the genuine Whitethroat. I thought, as there are such good reports in our Cage Birds of fanciers' rambles, these few notes might be of use to them.

Societies in Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Sir,—Will fanciers please note that there is another society, which, when started a few weeks ago, was styled "Newcastle Novice C.B.S." They have now changed it to Newcastle-upon-Tyne C.B.S. There is only one society—the old-established one—called Newcastle-upon-Tyne C.B.S., which I have the honour to be secretary of. We have no connection whatever with this new one. Our headquarters are 65, Grainger Street, Newcastle. My address is 218, Ladykirk Road, Benwell, Newcastle.

Hybrids with Alien Parents.

Should They be Given Separate Classes?

Sir,—I was very pleased indeed to read Mr. Archer's reply to my letter, but extremely sorry to see that some of my previous remarks appear to have hit him fairly hard. Mr. Archer says: "The British bird and Hybrid Fancy need encouragement, and if you, Mr. Morris, will be more to the point and less personal, the better you will shine." In my last letter I strictly stated Hybrid breeding between British birds needs every encouragement, which I think is more to the point than Mr. Archer's remarks, viz., the "British bird and Hybrid fancy" needs encouragement. What I staunchly advocate is that the use of our British hen Bullfinch as a Hybrid breeder should be more encouraged. I have no inclination to wish to shine through the medium of the Fancy Press. My letter was strictly intended to encourage those with limited means, who use British birds, to try to get justice. I was rather surprised to see that Mr. Archer is what I should term a fairly modern recruit to the Fancy, and I sincerely trust he will not be another six years before his efforts to breed a Hybrid are rewarded; and if it gives him as much pleasure as it did me when I bred my first Goldie-Bullie (British), which won the Hybrid Cup at Walthamstow in 1907, he will feel more than repaid for his time and attention. Although by no means an ideal place, we have a nice place at Ilford, where my partner and myself were again successful in breeding a Hybrid from two fresh-caught birds, this time in the shape of a Linnet-Bullie, which we sold to Mr. Edwards, of Leominster. Wishing Mr. Archer and his partner every success with their Hybrid breeding, I now close.

Wild-Bird Life.

The Last Migrants.

The much needed rains have refreshed the country; the grassland, trees and hedgrows, look all the brighter and greener, and the wild birds have benefited much by the extra food brought to the surface by the moisture. All the migrants are with us now, including the Turtle Dove, Spotted Flycatcher and Red-backed Shrike. These are generally the last to put in an appearance, and sometimes the Summer is well advanced before the two last named are seen in some districts. They are both particularly conspicuous and interesting birds, although so unlike in appearance, their only similarity is their habit of perching upon prominent sites so that neither is easily passed by. Near the writer's dwelling is an old park fence, and upon this one can count quite a dozen Flycatchers. They do not congregate together, but each keeps at a respectable distance from the other. At times they dart into the air after insects, first on one side of the fence, then on the other. It is curious to see them suddenly disappear on the opposite side, and then after a short interval as suddenly come in sight again within a few inches of their original position. Large elm trees grow close to the fence, and cattle frequently rest under them, so that flies are plentiful, so much so that the Swallows and Martins from the village hawk round them for hours, particularly in the evening. These big trees are the happy homes of many birds. For some years a pair of Jackdaws have nested in one, the Missel Thrush, Blackbird and Song Thrush, have each in turn hatched and reared lusty broods, and several pairs of Starlings are still busy, the greedy young ones for ever screeching for food, and like Oliver, "for still more food." Some distance up one of the trees, where a branch grows out from a larger one, a pair of Chaffinches have their nest, it is hardly discernible and looks like a bulging in the growth of the tree, but the writer has seen the old ones constantly visiting the spot and knows that they are busily rearing their young. Against the stem of one of the trees, a pair of Spotted Flycatchers have managed to lodge enough material to form a nest. A few growing twigs support it, it is a cosy little structure, but rather exposed to the weather.

Hawk Kills a Flying Homer.

Sir,—On Sunday morning, June 8, a Kestrel Hawk was seen attacking a Pigeon, which it eventually killed, and was afterwards well mobbed by a large number of Rooks, as it was close to a Rookery. After some manœuvring, a sportsman managed to get a shot at the Hawk as it was devouring the Pigeon, which it had nearly eaten. On its leg was a metal ring with the numbers EP2SC1911, also a rubber ring with the number 255 .

The Boiling of Eggs.

Sir,—With reference to boiling eggs, I notice Mr. W. Hainsworth (Preston) says that if eggs are put in boiling water it makes them crack. So it does. They should be put in cold water and allowed to come to the boil; then let them boil for ten to fifteen minutes. I am a Canary and Mule breeder, and a member of the Clapham Cage Bird Club. This is the way I boil my eggs. I put them in a small calico bag that I keep for the purpose, and put them in cold water and let them boil for fifteen minutes. Then I take them out of the iron saucepan and hang up in the bag to drain. They keep much better and are more digestible; also the yolk does not go black.

The Type of Present-day Winning Norwich Plainheads.

Sir,—I was attracted by the report of the meeting held in Norwich protesting against the type of present-day winning Norwich Plainhead Canaries, and censuring the judges. The chairman, in his introductory remarks, mentioned that some letters appeared in CAGE BIRDS on the subject, and added that evidently the same idea prevailed in other places—i.e., that the judges were not judging to the ideal laid down by the governing bodies. If I remember correctly, there was a quotation from a Norwich daily paper in your journal decrying the Palace judges and the winning birds, which was followed by the writer with a letter; but that letter marked the end of the correspondence; no one seemed inclined to take the matter up, and to say from only one letter that the same idea prevailed in other places seems a long way from essaying a fact. I never attempted in that letter to censure the judges. On the contrary, I was congratulating the judge on finding the right bird for the diploma. I only mentioned two birds which had been winning all over the country, which, in the opinion of your humble, should have been kept in the stock room. I wasn't at the Palace, but I had seen most of the winners previously in stronger competition, and I knew what they were. One of the two birds mentioned didn't win at the Palace. Mr. Woollard seems to be the leader of this little band of pessimists, and he gets his information about the judging at the Palace second-hand. Those who informed him may, or may not, be good judges of a Norwich; but I would like to ask Mr. Woollard if he has seen in the flesh the unflighted buff which won the diploma. If he hasn't, I ask him not to judge it from a drawing which appeared in a Fancy journal quite recently, and which did not flatter it. Had the fanciers who described the winners to him any faults to find with that bird? Didn't the judge find the winner there? That bird is perhaps not ideal, but I would lay odds that he had plenty to spare in winning in that class. Has Mr. Woollard seen Mr. Smeaton's unflighted yellow, or Mr. Cook's yellow hen, a hen of the Robin type so beloved by himself, and yet a big 'un and a quality bird? Has he seen Mr. Vardy's variegated buff, a bird that it is almost impossible to find fault with, and is one that even a stickler for type and quality like Mr. Woollard himself couldn't find fault with? These birds are a near approach to the ideal, and if Mr. Woollard and his brother pessimists from Norwich will breed and exhibit some as good they will see that the judges will find them; but when a class is put before a judge full of birds all exhibiting faults, it remains for the judge to pick out those for premier honours which have the least faults. Mr. Woollard must understand that the Norwich Plainhead has undergone a great change this last ten years. In the N.P.C. standard 25 points are given for head and neck alone; and our breeders and judges know that head points are difficult to get and difficult to retain; consequently fanciers have been striving for these head points. Some of them may have overlooked a few minor points in their eagerness for the head, but if Mr. Woollard will visit a few of the best shows he will find birds nearly approaching the ideal. I think it was Pope who said that the study of mankind was man, but if Pope had been of the present generation of Canary fanciers, he would have said that the study of mankind, or that section of mankind in which the Plainhead fanciers move, was how to get those 25 out of the hundred points allowed by the governing body. In that study, fanciers have had to traverse a long lane, but as Mr. Woollard knows, most long lanes have a turning, and the turning is just now in view. Indeed, some have reached it. In a few years' time, with careful selection, we shall have Norwich with wonderful heads and quality and type that will please so good a judge as Mr. Woollard himself. I can assure these fanciers from Norwich that there is no real cause for alarm, nor any reason for the wholesale censure of our judges. If they will put a curb on their impatience and move with the times instead of standing still and blaming those judges who are moving with the times and the improvements in the Norwich Plainhead, and try to breed a few like some of the real toppers which are being exhibited, they will be doing the Fancy and themselves a good turn.

SUB ROSA.

Faults Found with the Yorkshire Show Cage.

Sir,—Having read the letter last week by our friend "Falls of Clyde," I think his arrangement of two loose wires very good indeed, and one way of being able to get at the insides of cages with ease when required. I notice that we are going to be favoured with some drawings respecting the same matter, and I shall be delighted to see them and pass my humble opinion as to which is the best—namely, least trouble, easy of replacement, and a permanent model for cage makers' consideration—particularly for the benefit of new beginners in the Fancy. Apart from the breeding cage fronts, I have a great dislike for the present style Yorkshire show cage. I think it is a most uncomfortable article to clean out, etc., and needs great alteration in that respect; again, the inside seed trough is far from being an ideal arrangement. I hope my remarks may have a few supporters, as there is always room for a little improvement; or, at least, to have our readers' opinions on the subject.

MANCHESTER & N.C.O.S. FIND NESTS VERY SCARCE.

At the ramble on May 18th, about thirty members and friends were present, including a few ladies, who had a ramble "on their own," and joined us at tea. Mathram was the place selected, where we were met by our fellow-member, Mr. Moorbey, who had kindly consented to conduct us. We set off up hill and dale through woods, and along the banks of streams. Bird life was fairly plentiful. We saw Blackcaps, Magpies, Robins, Wagtails, Thrushes, Blackbirds, Wrens, Starlings (that were feeding a nest of young in the eaves of a roof of a farm-house), Yellowhammers, etc. Nests were very scarce owing (we were told by our guide) to a lot of boys having been on a trip and robbing most of them. However, we found a few, amongst which was a Wren's, with six eggs. We also saw a Magpie's nest, but it being in a high tree none of us felt inclined to see if there was anything in it. However, what we missed as regards nests was made up for in the beauty of the country. The woods were one mass of bluebells, and several took home quite a bouquet; also along the lanes the Hawthorn trees were laden with bloom, making them smell quite fragrant.

We almost lost one of our members; he slipped down a hill with a deep pond at the bottom, but managed to escape all right. He was none the worse, judging by the way he moved the "egg-food" at tea. Several of the members were keen on having a photo taken; we came across a man sitting by the bank of a stream, with what we thought was a camera, but found out it was his lunch! We were now feeling we could do with tea, so "made tracks" for same, and did full justice to it. Afterwards one of the members dropped across a photographer, who consented to chance his camera on us. After a walk through the large grounds attached to the tea-rooms, we set off to the station for Manchester. It was a grand day, and I think everyone agreed we had had a very enjoyable afternoon.—H. BOOTHAM, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S. PASS SPLENDID DAY AMONGST BIRDS & WOODS.

On June 9, the occasion of the first of a series of rambles arranged by the Sheffield O.S., the sun was shining brightly in the heavens, a clear blue sky was overhead, and the birds were chirping merrily, as if once more to welcome Old Sol. The weather became slightly unsettled later in the day, however, slight showers occurring at intervals until about five o'clock. We had to wait the passage of a thunderstorm before starting, and then our chairman, Mr. T. Down, leading, in a quarter of an hour we were in the woods, and at once came across bird life, a Yellowhammer being the first to greet us. These woods are full of bird life, which really is surprising, being so near the suburbs of the city, Chaffinches, Linnets, Greenies, Goldies, and Bullies all greeting us immediately on our entry with their various songs. The sun had now appeared again, shining between the leaves of the birch, beech, ash, and other trees; this was a lovely sight, the glistening raindrops on the leaves, when crossed by the sun's rays, giving them the appearance of being decked with diamonds. Proceeding further, Wood Warblers, Whitethroats, Ring Ousels (rare), Robins, Wrens, Blue Tits, etc., all attracted our attention. One of the party was suddenly observed at the top of a tree, about forty feet from the ground. He thought something at the summit appeared to represent a nest; but, alas, his exertions were in vain, for when he reached the topmost branch he found only a few dead leaves that had collected amongst a clump of branches. We at about this point found our first nest, a Blackbird with four young, all appearing in excellent condition. This was followed by the discovery of a Redstart's nest in an old wall, with four eggs. We now take the fields for about half a mile. Immediately on doing so we are greeted by a couple of Skylarks, soaring high, enjoying life to the full. Higher up the hillside we are on the outskirts of our second wood (Wharncliffe Woods). What a transformation the writer beheld. A fortnight ago, when traversing the same paths, with wife and children, this part of the wood was carpeted with bluebells—any artist coming across this scene would have gone wild with delight. Now not a single flower remained, only the carpet of green. Pushing on, we came across more birds that were the envy of more than one present. A lovely cock Hawfinch was quite close to us. We wondered how this would have compared with that noted exhibit "Midland Chief." We think our friend of yesterday would have been on top.

Cuckoos had been entertaining us all along the route, but we had not seen one, when all at once a battle royal was before our eyes, one of these marauders being evidently bent on turning out the occupant of a nest, about thirty feet from the ground. Alas! the latter could not hold his own against the odds of a Cuckoo, and he fell amongst the bushes, if not dead, mortally wounded. In the meantime our photographer was not idle. We at this point hear a whisper that our chairman has made arrangements for refreshments to meet us; this announcement was gratifying to every one concerned. Soon we behold a four-wheeler. It is not necessary to mention why the vehicle had been brought to this outlandish place! We naturally indulged in about twenty minutes rest before entering Grenoside Wood, which proved the most interesting and instructive part of the journey. This is where the softbills live, and no wonder. At this point one of the old residents, one who has traversed every inch of the woods from boyhood, who knows every nook and corner, met us and acted as our guide until we reached headquarters, the "Norfolk Arms," for tea. He pointed out a hermit's cave, which up to about fifty years ago had been occupied continuously for thirty-five years. It at one time penetrated about six yards underground. Our next dive is into an ant hill. A good many of our members had provided themselves with tins of various kinds, bags, etc., to procure real live ants' eggs for their feathered friends at home. What a treat the birds would have next morning! There was one continuous string of these ant hills for three miles, so that our members soon had all the eggs they could carry. Our guide here gave us practically a lecture on the habits and doings of the industrious ants. What an array of soft-billed birds we beheld here; every species you could mention, and a good many the writer had never seen before, and no doubt a good many more of the party were in the same boat. We had been so interested in our guide and his entertaining manner that the time went out of our minds entirely, when all at once someone discovered it was six o'clock, the hour tea was ordered for, so we had to hurry up. At the "Norfolk Arms" our host gave us a right royal reception. A ham and egg tea was in waiting for us, and a jolly good tea, too, and to improve matters we were all in form for it. After the repast Mr. Longbottom, in a few well-spoken words, proposed a hearty vote of thanks to our host and hostess for our splendid spread. This was ably seconded by Mr. P. Walsh, the hostess suitably responding. Every one of the thirty-five members who had participated in this glorious outing admitted that it had been the finest and most instructive and enjoyable ramble it had ever been their lot to take part in, and are all looking forward to the next one on July 14 to Maltby.—J. A. T. Woodall, Press Correspondent.

Several accounts of Rambles have unavoidably been held over.

MAKE THE BEST USE OF YOUR MONEY.

A great deal of money is invested in birds during the breeding season, and on this money there ought always to be a fair return in the way of profit. But it is essential that the breeder shall be conversant with the best-known methods of advantageously utilising his birds. And we are afraid that many fanciers are not sufficiently far-sighted to see that money spent in acquiring this golden knowledge is money laid out to the best possible advantage, to help, in fact, to ensure a rich harvest. It has ever been the aim of CAGE BIRDS to assist its readers to success in the hobby, and a great standard work just published under its auspices stands as monumental evidence of the successful attainment of this desire.

"Our Canaries," the latest, best and greatest of all works dealing with Canary keeping and breeding, is a library in itself. Within its covers will be found coloured plates (32 in all) of every variety of Canary, correct, up-to-date, exhibition models, full particulars of the best and most secret methods of breeding them, contributed by all the notable fanciers of the day, together with the fullest details concerning cages, aviaries, management, foods and feeding, diseases, etc. No keeper of Canaries can hope to get the best and most profitable results from his stock until he has studied this magnificent volume. It will put pounds in his pocket, and costs but a few shillings to purchase. The price, strongly bound in cloth, is only 15s. post free; further, payment may be made on a very easy instalment principle, if desired, particulars of which may be had on application to our publisher. Don't delay; write at once to CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Great Tits in a Beehive.

I see you have a note of a Linnet's nest in a beehive (writes Miss F. Bird, Peterborough). Last year a pair of Great Tits built a nest in a hive in my sister's apiary, and raised eight or nine young ones. A queen bee was being raised meanwhile in the hive. The birds' "door" was a hole for ventilation (from which the perforated zinc had gone) in the roof of the hive. This year they have built there again, but several of the young ones have died. There are only two left, which are about to fly.

Swallows at School.

A pair of Swallows are at present building their nest inside Birtley School, North Tyne. Whilst the children are busy with their lessons the birds are busy flitting in and out of the open window, erecting their little house, apparently unconcerned, and certainly undisturbed with the daily routine of the school. Last year, also, a nest was built in the school and young ones reared—probably by the same parents—but on that occasion it was done in the summer holidays. Evidently the Swallows feel that a schoolroom is an appropriate place for "bringing up their young."

Singing Contests.

LEEDS.

Weekly contest for quality held King's Head, Shannon Street, June 8th, when 15 birds sung for three good prizes given by Mr. Tillotson: 1, T. Stead; 2, J. Hollingworth; 3, T. Chadwick. Judges: W. Naylor, S. Hardcastle; also June 9th, when 18 birds sang before a crowded house, when the best singing for some time was heard. 1, T. Stead; 2, H. Whitfield; 3, H. Whitfield. Judges, Messrs. B. Sissons, W. Naylor.—Walter Naylor, Hon. Sec.

DUSLINGTHORPE.

Quality singing contest, held Skinner's Arms, June 8.—1, Sellars; 2, Sellars; 3, Granger. Also June 9: 1, 2, Ward; 3, Sheard; bye, Simmons and Tomlinson. Judges, Summers and Dolton.—C. Clayton, sec.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

The usual week-end Linnet-singing contest took place June 9, Prince Albert Inn, when 19 birds entered to sing for four good prizes given by Mrs. M. A. Saynor. Judges, Messrs. J. Clark and H. Hayes. 1, A. Richardson; 2, A. Bryan; 3, 4, divided between E. Wood and A. Binns.—E. Wood, secretary.

SPENNYMOOR.

Linnet singing held at Butcher's Arms, June 8; 40 birds entered, and some very good time was done. Mr. Jos. Gardner judged. Awards: 1, Mounter; 2, Martin; 3, Beales; 4, Brady. Mr. Brady had a collision with his cycle going to contest, and damaged his birds. Next contest at above house, July. 1st, silver cup and 10s.; 2nd, copper kettle and 7s. 6d.; 3rd, carvers and 5s. Mr. Jos. Gardner, judge; timekeeper, Weeler.—J. Beales, sec.

CASTLEFORD.

Weekly Linnet contest, June 8, at George and Dragon Hotel, Bridge Street, before a good number of fanciers and friends; 37 birds were entered for a four-minutes sing, and three good prizes. Winners:—W. Nelson, 81; A. Sweeting, 76; E. Smith, 72. Also June 9, 20 competed in a three-minutes sing for three good prizes given by Mrs. Paker:—W. Nelson, 54; J. Kirk and J. Brindley, 43. Week-end singing is open to all, and we have the best room and window in the district.—Walter Dobson, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

Contests were started again at the old house, Fitzwilliam Hotel, Attercliffe, Sheffield. Mr. J. Grundy gave three prizes. Result: 1, 3, Baker; 2, Robinson.—Squire Cutts, sec.

Linnet Singing Society held at Royal George, Brightside Lane, Sheffield, June 8. Mr. C. Hill gave three special prizes for three minutes time-singing; only 11 birds entered. Result: 1, Thompson, 91sec.; 2, 3, Driver, 73 and 70; Thompson, 40 and 39. Also June 9, when Mr. C. Hill gave three more special prizes for three minutes' time singing; only 21 birds entered. 1, 3, Thompson, 97 and 49; 2, Driver, 69; Albert, 35. Contest every week-end; first pair of birds hung at three o'clock, Saturday next.—A. Thompson, sec.

BLACKBURN.

Cup contest for quality, held headquarters, Old Red Lion, Snig Brook, June 8; 22 birds competed. The singing was grand. 1, Bootsman Cup and gold medal, Barnes (Wigan); 2, 3, Topping (Blackburn); 4, Bromilow (Leigh); 5, Hayhurst (Blackburn); 6, Barnes. Next contest, the consolation, will be held June 22 for quality only.—Rd. Hayhurst.

WESTHOUGHTON.

Affiliated contest for time and quality, June 8, at headquarters, Horse Shoe Inn, Wingates; 41 birds competed for eight prizes—four for time and four for quality—and some good singing was heard before a large company. Winners, quality: 1, R. Holcroft; 2, J. Ashurst; 3, F. Kennedy; 4, J. Poole. Time: 1, D. Banks, 142; 2, J. Woodward, 130; 3, R. Statham, 112; 4, D. Banks, 99. Judges for quality: F. Gibbons, J. McAllister, and Milligan; for time, J. Evens and R. Statham; tappers, W. Robinson and W. Halliwell; minute man, J. Peet; birdman, J. Brown.—J. Woodward, sec.

KIPPAX.

Members' sing held at Commercial Hotel, June 8; there was only a moderate entry; 1, J. Wallis; 2, 3, J. Liversidge, jun. Timekeepers, P. Potter, T. Hall. J. Wallis's bird looks like being a winner at our members' sings. It sang 24secs. first break. There will be no sing June 15, owing to the room being occupied.—R. Plowe, hon. sec.

DURHAM.

Linnet sing held at Balaclava Inn, Crook, June 8th. 27 birds competed. Result: 1, 2, 3, divided between Franks and Newcastle. Mr. T. Simpson judged. Next contest at Todhills, June 15th, cup and 30s. cash given. Also June 22nd, Reed gives over £3 in prizes at the Black Horse, New Elvet.—G. Reed, Sec.

CHOPPINGTON C.B.S.

First feather show, June 8th, in the club room, Railway Hotel. Entries came up very well considering the poor breeding results fanciers are having in this district. The show arrangements were well looked after by Mr. Seely (chairman) and the committee, composed of Messrs. Edwards, Thompson, Rigg, Fairbairn, Clark, and others. Messrs. Seely Bros. won the special for best bird in show with a yellow marked Norwich. Mr. G. H. Seely, as secretary, as usual had everything well in hand. Mr. R. Rowell judged, and his awards were well received. NOR. YELL., ETC. (5): 1, 3, Seely Bros. 2, hc, Fairbairn; vhc, Fail. BUFF (12): 1, Seeley Bros.; 2, vhc, Clark; 3, hc, Rigg; c, Fail. WALKLEY C.B.S.

Table show held at headquarters, June 6th. A huge surprise awaited the officials, this proving to be the record show of its kind ever held in Sheffield nine classes, only one being cancelled. The total entry was 84. Considering the members have had very indifferent luck this breeding season, they deserve to be congratulated on their efforts. The judges were Messrs. J. Woolhouse, Yorks; G. Drabble, Novice Yorks; W. T. Furniss, Nor. and Brit. Their awards gave every satisfaction. MEMBERS' CLASSES—YORKS. YELL., ETC. (7): 1, vhc J. Thorpe; 2, Ridal; 3, J. Jones; hc, G. Butler; c, C. BRADFORD EAST O.S.

First feather show at headquarters, Park Chapel Schools, West Bowling, Bradford, June 8th, when a grand entry of 81 birds was recorded. Mr. Matt Broadley, Windhill, judged and gave every satisfaction. Some very promising young birds were staged and were much admired during the afternoon. This was the first show of a series of six to be held during the year for a valuable list of special prizes, and competition proved very keen. Most points in the respective sections were won by Messrs. F. Allen, H. Hill, J. Northrop, S. Binns, S. Wood, S. Midgley, and Morrell and Harper. Awards:—CHAMPION SECTION—YORKS. CL. YELL. ORMSKIRK C.B.S.

A table show of young Canaries, British, and Hybrids, held at the Church House, on June 3rd. Norwich and Borders turned up very well, but many of the latter were lacking in quality. Some well-known winners were forward in the British and Hybrid classes, a Canary-Bullie heading the latter. The Secretary judged Canaries, and Mr. E. A. Walker the remainder. Awards:—NOR.: 1, 3, Lewis; 2, Johnson, jun.; vhc, Hesketh. BORD. 1, 3, c, Johnson, sen.; 2, vhc, Hesketh; hc, Lewis. BRIT.: 1, 2, 3, vhc, Johnson. HYBRIDS: 1, 2, 3, Johnson. Similar classification is provided for next month's meeting, July 1st, when Yorkshires are expected to be out in full force.—T. H. Tiffen, Hon. Sec.

DONCASTER C.B.S.

Meeting and nest feather show held June 8th, at Black Bull. Mr. Presley judged, and his awards gave general satisfaction. There was a fairly good entry with quality a most prominent feature, particularly in Yorkshires and British, the winning yell. Yorks. belonging to Mr. Beers (who, we think, is making his first attempt), being a real eye-opener. Let us hope he will keep it up. In Buffs were some stylish youngsters, 1, and 2, Blanchon, will most likely be heard of again. In Brit., 1, 2, Pogmore, Linnet and Twite, are very promising, being full of quality and markings. There was a good attendance of members and friends present, who consider the room in which the show was held to be an ideal one. In Mr. Seels the society has a gentleman who does not fail to welcome with every courtesy all members or friends. Awards.—YORKS, YELL.: 1, Beers; 2, Tonkinson; 3, Blanchon. BUFF: 1, 2, Blanchon; 3, Beers. NOR.: 1, Simpson; 2, 3, Flint. BRIT. F.M.: 1, 2, Pogmore; 3, Bescoby.—G. Bescoby.

BEDFORD AND BEDS. O.S.

First nest feather show, June 6th, the number and quality of the birds exceeding anything previously seen in Bedford at nest feather shows. Messrs. Keech, Beanland and Goodman each brought a good team, containing many choice specimens. Mr. Goodman's birds, however, were handicapped by being a fortnight too young. Some of them will be heard of again. Mr. Keech's winners and Mr. Wilmot's first clear buff were very typical specimens. Mr. H. Markham was judge and gave general satisfaction. CL. YELL. NOR. (12): 1, 2, 3, Keech; r, Wilmot; vhc, hc, Beanland; c, Goodman. BUFF (15): 1, Wilmot; 2, r, Bushby; 3, Beanland; vhc, hc, Goodman; c, Keech. MKD. YELL. WIBSEY C.B.S.

The above society held the first of a series of six members' shows, June 8th, at Horse and Groom Inn, when, considering the very indifferent breeding season that fanciers in the district have experienced, the entry of 44 birds must be considered good. Mr. L. Briggs judged, and his awards seemed to please all present. The special for best bird in show was won by C. Bastow; best vhc, Bairstow and Chapman; best hc, F. Hanson; most points with four birds, C. Bastow, 21 points; second most points, L. Hudson, 18. Points were gained in cup competition as follows: C. Bastow 18, L. Hudson 18, W. Mann 15, F. Hanson 11, H. S. Crossley 11, Bairstow and Chapman 9. Awards:—YORKS CL. OR TKD. YELL. (10): 1, C. Bastow; 2, W. Mann; 3, A. Holden; 4, vhc, Bairstow and Chapman; hc, H. C. Crossley; c, G. Hudson. EAST BOWLING B.F.A.

In consequence of their usual meeting-place being unavailable, the above society held the first F.F. show of the year in St. John's Parish Room, where 58 birds were staged. The competition was very keen, and, indeed, the quality of many of the exhibits was such that Mr. W. A. Cowgill had some difficulty in giving his awards. His rulings, however, gave every satisfaction, and the show was in every way a successful function. Awards:—OPEN—CL. OR TKD. MIDDLESEX O.S.

Young stock and Finch show held June 6th, at Southall. Considering the early date, there was a very nice show. Many of the birds will be heard of again during the coming season. Mr. F. Easterling judged and gave satisfaction to all. YORKS, CL. OR TKD. (13): 1, 2, 3, bc, Jefferis, 1st very smart clear, Yorkie all over, takes special best Canary, 2nd ticked on wing, not quite so stylish, 3rd well placed, trifle smaller than first two, if a hen a good one: vhc, Fletcher; a very nice class. MKD. OR VARIEG. (7): 1, 2, vhc, Fletcher, nice style and feather, should be heard of again, the 2nd not far behind, perhaps does not show quite so well; 3, hc, Phipps and Huxley, green marked, nice feather and condition; c, Barnyard. MULE OR HYBRID (1): Smith, nice dark Goldie-Canary, good condition. GOLDFINCH (2): 1, Caunbers, good black leg, nice face and buttons, will improve with another moult; 2, Burrows, very nice Finch, not in condition. CHAFFINCH, ETC. (7): 1, 2, Caunbers, Chaffinch, nice size and colour, good condition, takes special best Brit., 2nd another Chaffinch, not quite the bloom; 3, Smith, Greenfinch, nice yellow, well shown; vhc, Phipps and Hutley; hc, Burrows; c, Taylor. LINNET, ETC. (5): 1, 2, Burrows, Linnet, nice colour and markings, good size and condition, 2nd very smart Redpoll; 3, Phipps and Huxley, another nice Redpoll, not quite the condition; vhc, Smith. FOREIGN (2): 1, Smith, Budgerigar, in splendid condition, well shown; 2, Higgins, Lavender-headed Lovebird, nice bird.

Club Reports.

LANCASHIRE C.A.

Meeting held at Rochdale, May 30th, Mr. Naden presiding. The annual report was a great success, so it was decided that the Secretary have an extra 5s. for his services. Decided that the four highest birds count for L.C.A. specials in future instead of nominating four as before. Next meeting, June 15th, Church Inn, Oldham, 6 p.m. Subs. of 2/6 now due. Applicants for patronage please apply to—J. Hampshire, Sec., 7, Cowper Street, Oldham.

THATTO HEATH O.S.

Monthly meeting held headquarters, June 3, Mr. Enever in the chair. We had a very good attendance of members, and one of the best meetings since the formation of the society. Nest Feather Show, headquarters, July 6, with twenty classes, for Canaries, British, Foreign, and Mule or Hybrids, and it is hoped that this fixture will encourage some more of the local fanciers to come in and join our ranks, whilst the society is still in the making. Our subscription is only 2s. 6d. per annum, with 6d. entrance fee.—H. R. Macdonald.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF SCOTLAND.

Committee meeting held June 5th. First Feather show arranged for June 29th, in the Crown Halls, Sauchiehall Street, Glasgow, 3 p.m., Mr. Fred Bowman judge. Secretary reported receipt of ten "specials" to date. Three applications for membership were considered and recommended for acceptance. Yorkshire fanciers are cordially invited to join us. We are catering liberally for the "novice" at this show. Most of our members are doing fairly well in the breeding-room. Will club secretaries, applying for our patronage, and other correspondents, kindly note that my address is now 2, Alexandria Terrace, Govan.—R. B. Gibbs, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN B.B.M. AND F.B.C.

Meeting held on May 29th, in Lockhart's, 65, Grainger Street. The Chairman (Mr. C. Pettereon) presided. Several letters from societies applying for club's patronage were read. Decided to leave them over until next meeting, July 24. June meeting has been postponed owing to its date falling in race week. The Secretary (Mr. Geo. Taylor) not having the time to spare to attend meetings, etc., tendered his resignation. Mr. Joe Mackenzie proposed that the best thanks of the Society be given him for his past services, seconded by Mr. J. Scott and carried unanimously. Mr. Taylor suitably replied. Having been appointed in his place, I shall be glad if members will send all correspondence to me in future, and also subscriptions, which are now due. I will gladly send particulars, etc., re membership, to any fancier in the Northern Counties who would like to join us. Annual sub., 2/6.—W. Curry, Sec., 60, Grosvenor Gardens, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Committee meeting held headquarters, the Feathers Hotel, Great Chapel-street, Westminster, on May 30th. Present, Messrs. J. Robson (chairman), J. Dewhurst, T. R. Trower, W. H. Shepherd, G. Mortlock, A. J. A. Marley, C. T. Maxwell, A. C. Askew, A. Plumbridge, and J. P. Carr. Mr. Robson spoke at some length on the sad death of Mr. W. Page, an active committeeman of the club, as did also several members present. It was unanimously carried that a letter of deep sympathy should be sent to Mrs. Page in her sad bereavement. A number of rings for marking wild birds had been sent by Messrs. Witherby, of High Holborn, for members to place on young birds during their country ramble. These rings were very much criticised by the members, being somewhat clumsy, and with sharp edges, and it had been agreed that Messrs. Robson and Crabb should wait on Messrs. Witherby and explain the danger of these rings. At the last meeting Mr. Robson stated that Mr. Crabb and himself had waited on Messrs. Witherby ,and although he (Mr. Robson) was not satisfied with the safety of these rings, Messrs. Witherby assured them that they were perfectly safe ,and no report had been received of any bird being injured by their use. It was agreed that a few of the rings should he used during the club ramble. A letter was read from Mr. J. Dixon in respect to a medal alleged to have been won by him at Gateshead. It was unanimously carried that, as Mr. Dixon had not complied with Rule 6, he had not won the medal. The committee's attention was drawn to a resolution that was passed re the club diploma being hung in the club room, and Mr. Dewhurst very kindly offered to have a box frame made for the diploma and suitably lettered before being hung in the club-room. Mr. Dewhurst's offer was unanimously accepted. A discussion was opened respecting extending the work of the club. After much discussion it was decided to further discuss the matter at the next meeting. Messrs. Bonham (East Lexham), Otto Puck (Chingford), and Maddison (Newcastle) were elected members.—Plumbridge and Carr, Hon. Secs.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held June 6th, at headquarters, 65, Grainger Street, Mr. T. C. Crawhall in the chair. Mr. Crawhall informed the members present that the Secretary had written to Mr. T. Taylor on behalf of the society tendering our sympathy at the death of her husband, our esteemed fellow member and committeeman; also that Mr. R. Tindale had sent a wreath on behalf of the society, and would like anyone so disposed to contribute towards it, so members please note Mr. Tindale's address is 141, Stanton Street, Newcastle. Correspondence was read from Cinnamon C.C., Border Fancy Club, Northern Lizard Club, Northern Border and Scotch Fancy Club. Mr. Crawhall also read a long letter from our late member, Mr. J. Currah, who is in Australia. New members elected: Messrs. J. Smart, Tweedmouth; J. Dugdale, St. Lawrence; W. H. Butler, Stanley; T. W. Christie and Son, Chopwell; W. C. Ward, Newcastle; W. Robertson, Newcastle; T. Bewick, Dudley Colliery; and Mr. Callaghan, Newcastle. Mr. A. Brown, of Gateshead, gave us a lecture on the Norwich Plainhead. He commenced by saying we had to take his remarks as his own expression. What he liked to breed with were short cobby birds of the Bullfinch type, with large skulls. For quality he used yellow hens; for type, buff hens; but for size, double Buffing. He didn't care for forcing birds to breed, but just paired when ready; gave bread and boiled egg; he found this made better birds than egg and biscuit. For green food he gave chickweed, and he reduced the egg food when leaving parents. He always gave plenty of water to bathe in. When showing birds, see that cages are clean. The lecture was listened to very attentively, and at the close Mr. Brown answered a great number of questions. He was heartily thanked for same, and suitably replied. Committee please note: Meeting, June 20th, at 8. Mr. Ramsden will give lecture at July meeting, "Colour Feeding." Will fanciers and friends please note that there is only one Newcastle-upon-Tyne Bird Society, and that is the one I have the honour to be secretary of. There is another society which, when started a few weeks ago, called themselves "Newcastle Novice C.B.S." But my society is the old-established society and is the society in Newcastle. Do not forget nest feather show, June 22nd, in Crosby's Cafe (1.30 p.m. to 8.30 p.m.), Northumberland Street. I will supply anyone with tickets if they will send to my address, 218, Ladykirk Road, Newcastle.—J. W. Reed, Sec.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Fortnightly meeting held June 8th, Mr. W. F. Swan presiding. Mr. Fern was made a member. The classification for open show was considered and adjourned until next meeting.—J. Jeffrey, Hon. Sec.

SHETTLESTON C.B.S.

Meeting held, Johnston's Rooms, June 8, Mr. Hendrie presiding over a good turnout of members. First Feather Show fixed for July 6. Four handsome silver medals to be competed for. All fanciers in the district wishing to compete must send in the names before July 1. For full particulars apply A. Berry, sec.

WEST OF SCOTLAND O.S.

Monthly meeting in Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Mr. P. Thom (president) presiding over a fair attendance. Arrangements for first feather show held July 6th were completed, and are as follows: Crests, 4 classes; P.H., 4 classes; Yorks., 2 classes; Borders, 5 classes. Mr. F. Taylor judge. Birds to be staged not later than 3.45, Nelson's Hall. Messrs. Thom, Smart and Gunion were appointed as deputation to attend Glasgow and District C.B.A. meeting.—Wm. Hutchison.

LEIGH.

Leigh Linnet Club held a general meeting June 7, when the following officers were elected for the coming season: President, J. W. Jones; vice-president, G. Amison; secretary, R. Holcroft; assist sec., W. Statham; committee, A. Jackson, T. Statham, J. Yates, R. Disley, J. Poole. Decided to have the annual knife-and-fork tea July 20. Will every member come to our next general meeting, July 5, when there will be business of very great importance.—R. Holcroft, Sec.

NOTTINGHAM Permanent O.S.

We are holding our annual first feather show with classes for British birds and mules, on July 20th. We look like having a good show, several of our members having got some good youngsters. Fanciers, now is your time if you wish to become members of this society; it is open to anyone residing within 10 miles of Nottingham. The society is in a flourishing position. There are specials at F.F.S. for best young birds. Anyone wishing to become a member should let me have their names and addresses. Subs., 3s. per year.—J. Bunn, Secretary, 81, Ena Avenue, Sneinton Dale.

NORTHERN BORDER & S.F.C.C.

Meeting and table show June 3rd, Mr. W. Smith in the chair. Correspondence was read re patronage, and the Secretary was instructed to write and give number of classes required for shows to receive our patronage. The following were elected members: Messrs. Beaver (Wellington Quay), Stephenson (Wallsend), G. R. Henderson (Whitley Bay), Dyer (Benwell). Winners at table show:—Class 1, W. Smith. Class 2, W. Smith. Class 3, 1, 3, 4, Mr. Greenwell; 2, J. Johnstone. Class 4, 1, Mr. Smith; 2, 3, Mr. T. Smith. Class 5, 1, 3, Mr. Smith; 2, W. Affleck. Class 6, 1, W. Affleck; 2, J. Read; 3, T. Smith. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. Montgomery for acting as judge.—M. C. Potts, Sec.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

The above society held a very successful smoking concert, June 4, in the Old Inn, Mr. J. C. Murray (President) in the chair. Over 40 members and friends turned up and a most enjoyable evening was spent. After justice had been done to the excellent repast supplied by Mr. C. McLean, the toast of the Cowdenbeath Cage Bird Society was enthusiastically pledged. An excellent programme of songs and recitations was carried through, the following contributing: Messrs. Wm. Robertson, A. Simpson, A. Robertson, J. Brand, A. Beveridge, Wm. Gewar, Jos. R. Reid, E. Duthie, Geo. Raitay, Jas. McVicar, Geo. Sinclair, and J. MacKiver. Mr. Robt. Johnstone, at the piano, provided a splendid accompaniment. Members and friends were delighted with the quality and variety of the entertainment. The only regret was that time was so short, as we could have gone on for another couple of hours easily.—Joseph R. Reid, Sec.

CINNAMON-MARKED YORKSHIRE C.C.

Annual meeting, held in Market Tavern, Bradford, June 8, under the chairmanship of Mr. R. Garnett. The balance sheet was accepted, which showed a balance of 8/- upon year's work. The following were elected officers for ensuing year: President, Mr. A. Brown; vice-presidents, Messrs. P. Drake and R. Garnett; auditors, Messrs. S. Dean and R. Halliday; secretaries, Messrs. B. Brown and R. Garnett; committee, Messrs. W. Richmond, H. H. Towers, D. Thornton, A. Cooper, F. Hammond, T. W. Hall, A. Whitley, J. Bailey, T. Ogden, J. Greaves, E. Clegg, W. H. Shackleton, G. Snead. Three competitions are to be run by the club for coming season, open champions, amateur, novice. Some alteration was made in regard to open novice competitors, any member now being eligible to compete for amateur prizes who has not won three first prizes in open classes. This rule should considerably improve the entries for amateurs. The following new members were elected: Messrs. J. E. Hirst, W. Long, J. Atkinson J. Harney. Decided that applications for patronage be accepted until July 20; all future communications to be addressed to Mr. B. Brown, 10, Haw Street, Yeadon, or Mr. R. Garnett, 117, Woodville Terrace, Windhill, Shipley.—A. B. Grayshon.

PERTH CITY AND COUNTY O S

Monthly meeting held in Laidlaw's Rooms, Leonard Street, June 3rd, Mr. D. Brown in the chair. A letter was read from Mr. John Young, Rutherglen, agreeing to act as judge of Crests at open show. Agreed that nest feather show be held June 29th, at 3. Classes: Nor. P.H. yell., ditto buff, Mules, Brit., Lark and larger, Brit. small. Entry, 3d. each bird; over 4 free. Special for best in each variety. A prominent fancier was nominated for judge.—J. Kew, Sec.

GT. HORTON (Good Intent) O.S.

Meeting held Church Schools, Southfield Lane, June 8th. Mr. D. Bartle presided over a record attendance, and the meting proved to be one of great interest. The business part of the meeting was gone through in a real good manner. Subjects which were discussed brought forward some very long debates. Four new members were elected: A. Brown, J. Ramsden, J. Ward, and Mrs. C. M. Sunderland. There is still room for more, and new fanciers will be welcomed. Subs. 3s. per year. For further particulars apply to A. Morley, Assistant Sec., 123, Hartington Terrace, Lidget Green.

VALE OF LEVEN C.B.C.

Monthly meeting held in Schoolroom, Alexandria, President J. Hannah in the chair. The ball committee reported that they had taken Public Hall, Alexandria, for First Feather Show, July 6, from two till six p.m., and Public Hall, Alexandria, for Annual Show, Nov. 16. Ramble committee reported ramble in conjunction with the Glasgow and Western C.B.C., and agreed that the same had been a great success. Classes for First Feather Show were carefully gone over, and adopted. Admission, F.F. Show, to be twopence, and threepence for annual show. Judges were approved of for F.F. Show. Owing to lateness, other special business of Annual Show had to be left over until next monthly meeting.—A. H. McLean, sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Crown Hotel, Station-street, June 5th, Mr. Broadhurst in chair. Messrs. Austin, Smitb, Steanes, and Webb were elected members. Classification as suggested by committee was adopted for nest feather show, to be held next club night, July 3rd, and Mr. F. J. Weaver, Wolverhampton, elected judges. Entries to be made night of show. Exhibits staged 6.30; show open 9; free admission. Ten 2s. 6d. cash specials, and one 10s. 6d. pair of trousers to measure, have been promised for competition at this show, while the secretary offers an oak smoking cabinet, value 20s., made by himself, for most points gained at this show and the young stock show in October. Members on our books nearly seventy; a record for this society for some years back. Colour-food question was dealt with. Decided to purchase in bulk, all profits to go to the society's funds.—J. H. Jones, Hon. Sec.

LOCHGELLY AND DIST. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, Kelso's, Main Street, June 1st, Mr. T. Wildridge presiding over a large turnout of members. All those that wanted colour feed handed in their names. Secretary was instructed to write to the various specialist clubs for their patronage. Collectors for the year elected. The following new members were then proposed: Messrs. Spalding, C. Shilbraid, J. B. Reid, W. Gray, J. Gray, C. Croy, J. Cairns, G. Douglas, P. Grant, J. Taylor, A. Mathieson, J. Beedie, A. Anderson. A discussion regarding a ramble then took place, and the Secretary was instructed to write Mr. Munro Ferguson, M.P., for permission to visit his estate. Next meeting, June 22nd, Victoria Bar, Church Street. Closing date for local members joining is July 31st; fee, 2s. 6d. Local district, Lochgelly, Lochore and Glencraig, Bowhill, Cardenden, Dundonald. Fanciers in those districts are earnestly requested to join.—W. Grewar, Hon. Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Meeting held June 3, about twenty members present. Arrangements were completed for the young bird show, June 22. 20 classes, including two open to members of local societies, in addition to the cup and medal competition. A nice list of specials are to be competed for. Mr. Ratcliff is presenting a tea service for most points. Mr. Bowers gives a special for the best bird; Mr. Pitchford one for best Norwich; Mr. Smith one for best Yorks; Mr. Walton one for best British; and Mr. Alcock one for best bird shown by a new member, so that members have every inducement to make this show even a better one than last year's effort. We were to have had a lecture on "Colour Feeding," by Mr. W. Bowyer, of Leek, but as he was unable to be present, the Secretary read a paper on the same subject, which appeared to interest those present. It is very desirable that all members should try to attend the next meeting, as then we shall decide where the annual open show will be held.—J. Pitchford, Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Meeting, June 4th, at headquarters, Rose and Crown Hotel, when over 60 members attended the table show of young birds bred by novices. Chairman, Mr. T. Dawn. Our novice members are very keen, proved by the number of birds staged. Yorks. naturally topped the bill in Class I. with 25 entries. Judge, Mr. T. Bishop, our genial secretary, who gave general satisfaction. In Class II., Norwich, the quality was there, but the numbers were not nearly so large. The writer had the honour of placing the cards, and had not a very difficult task. Mr. J. Memmott, like myself, had not a very difficult task in Class III., Crest and C.-B., though he, too, could not complain of quality. Dr. Deane, of Dewsbury, proved the winner, which was very pleasing, showing the interest he takes when he sends birds all the way from Dewsbury for a table show. A judging competition (novices only) also took place. The majority of the novices entered into this very keenly and would naturally gain a deal of knowledge. Winners: Yorks. section, Mr. J. Smith; Nor. section, Mr. G. Fletcher and Mr. Sisson tied, both placing the birds in the correct order; Crest and C.-B.: Mr. F. Smith. Our Chairman referred to a letter of condolence written by the secretary to Mrs. Taylor, of Gateshead, expressing sympathy at her great loss by the death of her husband, always a big supporter of the Sheffield O.S. Such fanciers are badly missed by societies; it is a pity there are not a good many more exhibitors of the calibre of the late Mr. Taylor. The next announcement from our Chairman was of a very pleasing nature, and that was the success that our society had attained by winning the £5 prize given by CAGE BIRDS for the society holding the greatest number of members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE for competition at our all-England show. This should be an inducement to secretaries of other societies and cause them to "buck up" and get a large list of their members to join the LEAGUE. Don't forget next meeting, July 2nd. A lecture on "Colour Feeding," by Mr. J. A. T. Woodall. This should draw a large crowd, coming, as it does, just at the commencement of the moulting season. Friends heartily invited.—J. A. T. Woodall, Press correspondent.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

Special meeting held June 8, at the College Inn, Mr. W. Brotherton presiding over a good attendance. Decided to have classes for nest feather show same as last year, with three open classes—1 Yorkshire, 1 Norwich, 1 British, with 8s., 4s., 2s. as prize money for a 1s. entrance fee; also to have a two weeks' advert in "Cage Birds." Mr. G. Browning promised to give us a lecture at our next meeting, to be held June 29, when all fanciers are invited.—B. Bailey, Sec.

NEWCASTLE NOVICE C.B.S.

Meeting held at Purvis's Cafe, Clayton Street, June 6. Mr. A. Gordon in the chair. Mr. H. Curtis was elected a member. It was proposed to hold the society as a club this year, and give the patronage to some society in the neighbourhood with the hope that other novice friends will join the club and make a good muster to ensure success. Some of the members present passed some useful remarks as to rearing and feeding, which were much enjoyed. All novice friends wishing to join the above society will be heartily made welcome; entrance fee 1s. and 2s. 6d. per annum. Meetings held first Thursday in each month, at 7.30.—T. W Lumsden, sec.

WALKLEY C.B.S.

Meeting in conjunction with table show, St. Philip's Mission Room, Westmorland Street, Mr. T. Ridal in the chair. A very crowded meeting on account of the show, visitors being well represented. We are making wonderful progress, new members being made every meeting night; 56 on the books now. It bids fair to rival the other societies yet. Special mention of the table show should be made. The officials offer their congratulations on the record created, novices particularly. This kind of show is quite new to Sheffield. Previous shows have been confined to one or two classes. We have 12 specials to be given for the highest and next highest in each of the five sections. Competition was very keen in most sections, novices being well divided, Mr. P. Chadwick leading in Yorks with 12; Nor., Mr. G. Abbott, 10; members' Nor., Mr. F. G. Cowley is well away with 24; members' Yorks., Mr. J. Thorpe leading with 15. The show in every way was voted a huge success. The business of nest feather show was next dealt with. The secs. will sit on June 17, at headquarters, from 8 to 9, to receive all entries. Fixed prize money, 3s., 2s., 1s., will be paid July meeting, at which is a lecture on colour-feeding by Mr. T. Hemming.—C. Tomlinson, sec.

WALLASEY C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, June 6th, at headquarters, Fairhaven Institute, Seaview Road, Liscard, a very good attendance of members being present. Mr. G. Benson occupied the chair. The subject for the evening was "The Question Box." The mode of procedure was as follows: Each member present wrote a question on paper, these being placed in a hat, and slips of paper containing the names of those present were placed in another hat. Then one paper from each was drawn. In every case an attempt was made to answer the given question, sometimes greatly to the amusement of those present, but in all cases most instructive and profitable. The following were some of the questions asked: "Does cinnamon blood improve the green bird as regards colour? What is the best age to show young birds? Is a Rook a Crow? Is sheeting-up necessary during moult? How to save young birds from dying after they leave the nest. How to deal with sweating hens. How to select a good Greenfinch. How to deal with young birds after they leave their parents, etc. A most enjoyable evening was brought to a close by a proposition to hold two more rambles, June 15th, 2.30 p.m.; and June 23rd, 10 a.m., meeting at headquarters. Five new members elected.—Thomas Edwards, Hon. Sec.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

A paper on "Fascinating Foreign Birds," by Mr. J. Edmunds (Swindon), attracted a room full of members and visitors on June 5. The ordinary business having been transacted, the chairman, Mr. Lewis, called upon Mr. Edmunds for his paper. Mr. Edmunds said he was somewhat of the nature of a hardy annual, this being the third year he had had the pleasure of meeting his fellow-members and talking about foreign birds. Before speaking of the birds proper, Mr. Edmunds gave some very useful tips upon various things, such as the wood he uses for cage making, also a special paint, and passed round samples of seed, etc. It was a mistaken notion, he said, to think that foreign birds were delicate, and needed a lot of coddling. He had always found them hardy, and sometimes hardier than ordinary British, and gave as an example an account of a number of Gouldian Finches he had flying in an open aviary through a severe winter, and although many roosted in an open flight in all sorts of weather, they were always fit and hardy. The essayist, having a soft spot in his heart for Lories, spoke at some length on this interesting family, describing the various species, their peculiarities, and the treatment necessary to ensure good health and show form. The next birds to receive attention were the Tanagers, and these were followed by several more insectivorous and fruit-eating species, then seed-eating species. A vote of thanks to Mr. Edmunds close a very instructive evening.—A. F. Treasure.

"EGGERTINE"

The Premier of all Egg Foods, for rearing Canaries, Mules, etc. Suitable alike for hard and soft-billed birds. Made (not from foreign preserved yolk of eggs and bakers' and confectioners' waste) but from New-laid English Eggs and other valuable ingredients, and used for the largest collection of Canaries in the world by one who knows what birds are and what is suitable. 1/3 and 2/6 tin, post free. If you are colour feeding you must have an egg food, and here "Eggertine" is the thing. Also sold in tins same price; readily prepared either as a hot red feed or deep orange yellow. Samples, two stamps. Please say which colour required.—

W. RUDD, The Bird Specialist, NORWICH.

Advance With The Times!

Better for you and better for your birds.

Use Stanley's Bird Foods, prepared by Mr. T. Stanley, winner "Cage Birds" competition 1912. Sold in tins at 1/3 and 2/6 each, post paid; guaranteed to contain half nut and half biscuit, and ready for the birds. Quite pure and always remains sweet, therefore cheaper than egg. Also put up with an admixture of choice seeds for birds just leaving the nest. Try these foods for your Softbills. Instructions for feeding with each tin. Try also my ready prepared colour food, sold at full strength; can be mixed with either of the above foods to reduce strength, to start birds before giving them full strength. The 2/6 size contains 2½ times the amount of 1/3 size. Dealers supplied. Also all kinds of nuts ready shelled at lowest prices: Address, "Stanley Bird Foods," 212, Rookery-rd., Handsworth, Birmingham.

of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 and 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 25 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, H. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner, showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Notice! The breeding of mealworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., or from any of our agents. HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world; they make the gamest Linnets ever carried to a contest for length, turns, and form, they stand alone, and for voice they have no equal; this class of birds has won the English Derby and all English championships, and the world's greatest contest, one Linnet being sold for £16. I have refused £11 for another Linnet just lately. All the recognised judges say they are equal to the German Roller. They are workingmen's prices, 1/-, 1/6, and a few extra gems, 2/-; all members of Linnet clubs send for these birds. Larks, singing with full voice, indoor or out, 2/6, 3/6; and a few that cannot be beat, 4/6; hundreds of British and foreign birds in stock; postcard before birds; only honest dealing done with me, so send to your old friend, Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four weeks trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

Arrival of Rare Indian and Other Birds.

By WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S.

On June 12th I had the opportunity of seeing a fine series of Indian and other Eastern species, recently landed by Mr. W. Frost, who has been abroad some months collecting them. Their number would have been much larger, but for the inclement weather encountered after leaving Port Said. Of the rare Red Sunbird (Æthopyga), which has never been imported alive previously, only one lived to reach English shores, and that only survived one or two days, and all I saw was its body, sufficient to indicate the exquisite beauty of the species, which is clad in scarlet, yellow, metallic green and purple. The majority of the birds are bespoke for the New York Zoo.

Among the birds, some 250 or more, are many rarities and very many really desirable species, of which I note the following:—

Robins.—Any Robin, wherever it hails from, is interesting; the traits and characteristics which have endeared the Redbreast to English hearts are more or less common to the whole group, and constitute them ideal birds for the aviculturist who has fair accommodation, for the various species cannot be kept together. Blue-headed Robin (Adelura cæruleocephala): About the same size, but a little slimmer, than the English Robin, its plumage is black, with a silvery grey-blue cap. Major Perrean imported this species in 1908, I think, the pair he brought over passing into the possession of H. D. Astley, Esq.—a beautiful and fascinating species. Brown-backed Indian Robin (Thamnobia cambaiensis): A beautiful and graceful species, reminding one of the Shama in its deportment and elegant form. It is 6 inches long and has a tail of 2⅞ inches. The male is dusky olive-brown above with the wings and tail black, which is also the colour of the lores, ear coverts and underparts. A white spot adorns each wing, and the centre of abdomen and under tail coverts are rich chestnut. The female is dusky brown with middle of abdomen and under tail coverts chestnut. Red-flanked Bush-Robin (Ianthia rufilata): Similar in size and form to the preceding species, but of much brighter plumage. The male is blue above, with the forehead, eye streak, shoulder patch and rump ultramarine; below it is white, washed on the breast with brown, flanks rufous. The female is brown with traces of blue on the shoulders and above the eye. A most desirable species. There were also specimens of the Loo-choo Robin (Erithacus komadori), which, we believe, pass into the possession of that well-known aviculturist, H. D. Astley, Esq., and the Japanese Redbreast (E. akahige)

Short-Billed Minivet (Pericrocotus brevirostris): Several specimens of this lovely species were safely landed. It is blue-black above and flaming scarlet below. The female is mostly grey above, with patches or spots of yellow on forehead, wings, rump and tail beneath yellow.

Ashy Wood-Sparrow (Artamus fuscus): I do not think this species has been previously imported alive, it is similar to the Masked and White-eye browed, in form, size and the lovely bloom on its plumage. The general hue of the plumage is ashy-grey, with a slight wash of rufous on the upper back; the lores are black, and the under parts ashy-white. In a state of nature they live entirely upon insects.

Redstarts: The collection included four lovely species, the Blue-fronted, Indian, Plumbeous and White-capped. All are beautiful as well as interesting. I have kept the Plumbeous. It did well out of doors all the year round in one of my aviaries for several years. I had better remark here that all the foregoing species would thrive on some good insectile mixture, and a liberal supply of live insects—fruit should also be given to such species as will take it.

Flycatchers: I noticed three species (there may have been others, but some of the cages were rather high up). The Flycatchers have a Robin-like demeanour and appearance which make them fascinating cage or aviary birds, to say nothing of the beautiful hues of their plumage. The species were: The Verditer, the Blue-throated and the Rufous-bellied Niltava.

Shrikes: Some very interesting species and excellent specimens—Rufous-backed (Lanius erythronotus), Brown (L. cristatus), Black-headed (L. nigriceps), Indian Great Grey (L. lahtora); also the Cuckoo-Shrike (Graculus macii).

Fruitsuckers and Bulbuls.—Of the former beautiful birds only the Gold-fronted (Chloropsis aurifrous) and Hardwick's (C. hardwicki) were represented, but the latter were in true pairs and one can only hope that one pair at least may remain in this country with some aviculturist able to give them breeding accommodation. The Fruitsuckers are unequalled as cage pets. Diet: Ripe fruit, insectile mixture, milk sop and live insects. All the Bulhuls are interesting, and, moreover, usually do well in captivity. Several rare species were included: Brown-eared (Hæmixos flavala), Japanese (Hypsipetes amaurotis), and the Indian Black-crested Yellow (Rubigula flavivcntris). Diet: Seed, insectile mixture and live insects; also fruit for such as will take it.

There were many other very interesting species, of which I can only give a list: Pigmy and Golden-backed Woodpeckers; Black-headed and Yellow-headed Wagtails; Pagoda and Malabar Starlings; Pied and Gold-crested Mynahs; Ruby-throats (in true pairs); Black-headed and Maroon Orioles; Chestnut-bellied Nuthatch; White-bellied Drongo; King Crow; Lanceolated Jays; Wandering Tree-Pies; Blue-winged Sivas Persian Nightingales; Tickell's Ouzel, Blue and Chestnut-bellied Rock Thrushes; Black-throated Pipit; Golden-eyed Babbler; Pied Wood-chat; Yellow-cheeked Marsh, Grey and Green-backed Tits; Indian Skylarks (Alauda galgula); Black-billed Finch Larks; Jerdon's Accentor; Crested and Calandra Larks; Hair-crested and Eastern Meadow Buntings; Yellow-throated and Cinnamon Sparrows; Himalayan Goldfinches; Sikkhim Siskins, India Green Barbets; Rain and Little Button Quail; Buff-backed Herons and Pratincoles. Mr. Frost is to be congratulated on having gathered together and safely landed so many rare and interesting species, and to be sympathised with over the many rare and beautiful birds he lost during the last stage of the voyage.

To Prevent Feather Plucking.

When young birds are on hard seed and turned into the flight, the only trouble the fancier has to encounter is feather-plucking. The old method of curing this was to tie pieces of twine or cord in the cages to keep them busy nibbling at them. A better way is to procure some blades of grass (or hay) and hang these up. This keeps them from the mischievous habit, and is also a good green food.—Edward Evans (Penyrheol).

Creosote for Red Mite.

[Winner of Half-crown Prize.]

I have been very much troubled with red mite, but have at last discovered what I consider absolutely the best, easiest and cheapest way of obviating them. All that is necessary is to paint the nest box or basket with creosote, and then hang it outside for two or three days before using. You will never be troubled with red mite, and the birds do not take any notice of the creosote.—Richard Barron (35, Eleanor Street, Wigan).

Young Birds and the Moult.

[Winner of Half-crown Prize.]

If you see any young after leaving the parents go "thick" or the least bit soft, mix at once a few drops of Scott's Emulsion with their egg-food, and you'll lose very few before they are through the moult. But the best way is to be on the safe side, and stick to the old adage that "Prevention is better than cure." Mix a few drops two or three times a week with their soft food, from the time of taking them away from the parents right through the moult.—F. Barron, 84, Chestnut Street, Ashington, Northumberland.

Feeding Linnets for Song.

I have found the following best for keeping Linnets in full song and condition. Stock mixture: Add ¼lb. of spanish canary seed to 1lb. of English rape. Special Mixture: 1oz. each of dandelion, lettuce, thistle, cornflower seeds, and ½-oz. each of maw, inga, gold of pleasure, and linseed. Mix all the special seeds together, and give half a teaspoonful 3 times a week. During the moulting season keep the special seeds from them; then add 2oz. of linseed to the stock mixture.—Geo. Reed (35, Newcastle Street, Brandon Colliery, Durham).

Epsom Salts Helps Hens to Feed.

Hens will sometimes feed the young till they are a week old or thereabouts; then they will starve them. First take the young away and feed them yourself a while; then get a bottle—an 8-ounce medicine bottle is the best—place a pennyworth of Epsom salts in the bottle; fill up with warm water, shake till dissolved, then let cool. Fill the drinking fountain a quarter-full first day; if that does not do, half fill it the next day. You can safely put the young back afterwards. She will take every care of them and feed till they can care for themselves.—A. W. Fullwood (Wolverhampton).

Nests for Hybrid Breeding.

[Winner of Half-crown Prize.]

After trying various nesting places for Bullfinches and other Finches, I find the following is the safest and best. Get a small German wicker cage, and with small tacks fix all round the sides and ends some small pieces of heather or other twigs. Do not put them on with string or the birds are likely to get their legs caught. Then place in the bottom of the cage some dried twitch grass, that can be got from any field and press well down. This is a fine thing to keep the hens from "sweating," and there will be found very little difficulty in getting them to go to nest.—B. Garner (Bannold, Waterbeach, Cambs.)

SOME OF OUR MEMBERS BACKWARD.

A MAGNIFICENT OFFER FROM GLASGOW.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. G. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. Cushny, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; MAURICE AMSLER, Esq., M.B., Eton; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., M.A., Baron's Court; E. BAKER, Esq., Cowes; M. THOMSON, Esq., Dunedin, New Zealand.

Over-due Subscriptions.

I have had to send out some three hundred postcards reminding members that their renewal subscriptions are over-due. This means time and money, which could be spent to a better purpose, and I have to ask members, as a personal favour, to be kind enough to send along their renewal fees without waiting for me to apply for them. If they are in doubt as to the date upon which these fall due there is still no object in delay, for the renewal receipts are dated to cover one year from the proper date, without regard to the day upon which the renewals may happen to be paid. Further, in the competition for our medals, which I know will be very popular during the forthcoming season, only paid members of Cage Birds League will be entitled to participate. Members should, therefore, in their own interests, make sure that they are in the list of paid members before the show season commences. It has given me great pleasure to note the spirit of good-fellowship which exists among us, as is evidenced by the tone of the letters I am receiving daily. Practically everyone of these voices the brotherly feeling which animates our organisation. The following letter from our member, Mr. Downing, of Manchester, is a type of the many. It is not possible to answer these individually, but I hope that it is quite understood that all the good wishes are thoroughly appreciated and cordially reciprocated by your secretary.

"I enclose P.O., in payment of the renewal of my subscription as a member of our only League in the bird world, wishing it luck, and the best of everything, including yourself in the lot."

A Member's Good Wishes.

I hope the League is going strong. My pendant has aroused some enquiry among friends, and I hope it helps both paper and League. With continued good wishes to "C.B."—Dan McArthur.

A Word for Mr. Peck.

Sir,—On opening my Cage Birds last week, I was very pleased indeed to see that Mr. Peck has been awarded first prize for the recruiting competition for Cage Birds League. There is not a man works harder for anything he undertakes than our old friend Mr. Peck. Whether it be in organising a show for a poor man's benefit or taking round a list for subscriptions for hospitals, or dressing himself up in fancy costume to benefit carnivals, or anything you like to mention. He is one of the best-hearted chaps I have ever met in the Fancy. As long as I have known him he has been a true fancier, and I am sure every member of Cage Birds League will agree with me in thanking Mr. Peck for the good work which he has done for our cause.—J. F. Shiers.

A Generous Offer to Glaswegians.

Mr. J. Stevenson, local hon. sec. for Glasgow to Cage Birds League, whose address is 38, McNeil St., South Side, Glasgow, makes an offer which is as original as it is generous. In a letter to me dated 3rd inst. Mr. Stevenson said: "If anyone in Glasgow will send me three Bird lover's Coupons properly filled up, I will add three to them and procure their Associate Badges. This is open to any one of either sex in Glasgow." I wrote to Mr. Stevenson asking him if he appreciated the magnitude of his grand offer, and he has replied that he is assured, as the result of ten days' "scouting," that he can get at least a hundred supplementary coupons, and he asks me to state that he will guarantee to get for the first fifty readers sending him three coupons the necessary three remaining coupons properly signed. In confirming his offer, Mr. Stevenson writes as follows:—

"To the first fifty persons in Glasgow sending me three coupons each filled in properly, I will give the remaining three coupons needed, filled up, and I will produce their badge for them. Trusting I shall be able to add fifty new associates to the League, and as many more if I can get them, which I hope and trust I can. I would take it as a great favour if members of our good old Cage Birds League would rally round and promise to sign a coupon for me, and so help to add another Associate to the already swelling numbers. I know all this will take a little expense in writing and postage, but as a member of (and more so, local Hon. Sec. for Glasgow) Cage Birds League, I think it is but part of my duty to do as much as I can for the paper that has given me so much help in the past and does as much for others as well as myself in the present. And, let me tell you, sir, that I feel real happy when about the market I get a glimpse of someone wearing the "C.B." League badge. Now and then I wish I could see more of them being worn, but perhaps the day is not far distant when one will see every bird-lover wearing the badge of "C.B.L."

Let Good Example Guide You.

It only remains for every Glasgow reader to send Mr. Stevenson three signed coupons from this or any other issue. It is, of course, unnecessary for me to say that I am proud that our League numbers among its members such enthusiasts as Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Peck, who is referred to in the letter from our member, Mr. Shiers, which I am glad to publish. There is no question as to Cage Birds League being a power for good while it has members such as these to help it in its work to establish a world-wide brotherhood of bird-lovers.

A Noted South-Country Fancier's Hints on Breeding Norwich Plainheads.

A Lecture delivered on June 6th by Mr. J. Hodder, before the Hornsey, Wood Green and District C.B.S.

Gentlemen,—In taking up the breeding of Canaries of any description, the first thing to take into consideration is suitable cages for the particular variety you are about to start with. The breeding cages for the Norwich Plainheads, in my opinion, should be 20in. long, 14in. high, and 10in. from front to back. This gives the birds room to move about and carry out their duties in comfort. While speaking of cages, I might mention that during the winter months it is imperative that the hens especially should be kept in large flights, the larger the better, so that they may be able to exercise themselves well and gain in health and vigour by the time the breeding season comes round. The cock birds can also be kept together during the winter months, provided they are not quarrelsome, but they must be separated in the early spring time, as they invariably turn quarrelsome.

Don't Fly Too High at First.

To a beginner—i.e., one about to start breeding Norwich Plainheads—I would say: "Don't pay too high a price for your stock birds," as if you pay a very high price and you should happen to have poor results, it will tend to dishearten you, but lay your money out carefully. Pay about 30s. to 40s. per pair; for that sum you will be able to procure decent birds for stock purposes. Of course, show birds run to very high prices. I like the Norwich Plainhead because he is a bird of such grand type. I mean a good show specimen. He is also a bird of glorious colour and a real good one always carries such superb quality of feather. It does the eyesight good to see a first-class yellow standing like a ball of fire on his perch; and a real good buff, what a pleasing bird to look upon, with his silky feathering and glistening meal on the surface, like frozen snow with the sun shining upon it, and then that beautiful under-colour bursting up through the frosting! I say to a true fancier such a sight makes the heart glad, especially if the show season is at hand.

Show Bird to Show Bird not Advocated,

In pairing, I do not trouble to pair two show birds; the best results are not always obtained by pairing show birds. I never hesitate to pair up a small hen provided I know how she has been bred. Small hens that are very tight in feather and of good type and quality, if paired to cocks a bit long or even a bit rough, will often breed some nice birds. I once had one of these small hens—a yellow—in fact, so small that some fanciers would scarcely look at her. I paired her to a big cock, and this pair bred me a most lovely buff cock that did a good share of winning, even during his first year beating many old birds. If you find your stock losing in colour, get a good yellow green cock, and he will give you enough green blood to last for years if carefully worked through all your stock. Use the bronze green, not the grassy green, if you are aiming at increasing colour. Do not overdo the green; if you use too much you will have too large a percentage of greens, and so you will defeat your object—i.e., to breed a good clear yellow that is all ablaze with colour, which is not a very easy task. Whenever possible I pair a ticked or marked bird to a clear, which keeps the green evenly distributed throughout the whole stud, and by this means I do not get too many greens.

Assisting the Colour Food.

Colour feeding will have little effect in giving good sound deep colouring unless you breed for colour in the way I have described. If the colour is bred into the birds there will be little difficulty in bringing it out when colour feeding commences and the moult is in progress. I have had birds come through the moult a glorious colour, after having been fed on alternate days with the colour food, and I have seen birds that have been crammed with it daily come through the moult a very poor colour; in fact, altogether unfit for the show bench, hence, I repeat, the necessity for breeding to get colour.

While the breeding operations are in progress I feed my stock birds liberally, and indeed for some weeks before I give the cocks some tit-bit to bring them on. I do not feed the hens so liberally as the cocks before pairing up, as I find the hens, if we are not careful, will get fat by the time we pair up, and you can get no good from a hen that is too fat. She will not lay, and is, in fact, absolutely useless as a breeder while she remains in a fat condition. So always watch your hens as the season approaches to see they do not become too fat. The singing of the cocks, as a rule, has the effect of bringing the hens into condition. When they are first paired up I give them sixteen drops of chemical food in their drinking water during the whole of the first week, and I have found this to be conducive to having the eggs well fertilised. Give them plenty of good flint and shell grit in vessels provided for the purpose, and use coarse sawdust in the cage bottom. If a hen has a tendency to lay soft eggs, give her the shells of fowls' eggs baked and broken up small, and an old piece of mortar in the corner of the cage is often found useful, as she pecks at it, and the lime has a tendency to assist the formation of shell.

"Bucking Up" Slack Feeders.

If hens become slack in feeding the young after the first few days, as many do, try a little Glauber salts in the drinking water, and, in addition to the egg food, in another vessel, give some milk sop with maw seed sprinkled over it. I have known hens feed well on such a food as milk sop and best German rape seed, the latter having been soaked in cold water for about eight hours. Put in a sieve and let all the water run out of it, and then place in a clean cloth for a short time before giving to the birds. Give also ripe apple early in the season, or watercress later on. By resorting to these means, hens are often induced to feed when otherwise they would allow the young to die.

For nesting diarrhœa try a little prepared chalk in the soft food or three drops of chlorodyne in the drinking water, and stop all green food until the trouble is over. The trouble is often brought on by giving green food in too large quantities, so give sparingly and avoid the trouble if you can. Never give green food until the young are three or four days old, and not then if the weather is cold. Sometimes I find it best to leave the cock with the hen throughout, but everything depends on circumstances. Some hens will not sit with the cock bird in the cage, and sometimes he is too mischievous to be left there. I have known some cock birds which would eat all the eggs they could get hold of, but I am glad to say these are rare exceptions.

When the Cock Bird can Help,

As a general rule, I find it best to leave the hen alone with her brood until they are ten or fourteen days old, but I have had best success in rearing young by introducing the cock when the young are that age—i.e., if the cock turns out a feeder and most cocks I find do. By doing this you gain a great advantage, because the majority of hens want to go to nest again when the young are about three weeks old, and she starts plucking them and neglecting them, with the result that you will lose the whole nest unless the cock is there to continue the feeding. I have often had to remove the nest with young into a nursery cage away from a hen that plucks, and give her a fresh nest, and leave the cock to rear the young through the wires of the cage; but as soon as she has laid her full complement of eggs I take the cock and young away to a cage by themselves and leave him to attend to them until they can look after themselves. Indeed, my experience is that I should rear few birds if I were not to resort to these measures.

Why the Young Birds Die.

We hear a good deal of young birds dying at about five weeks old, and in the years that are gone, especially the first few years I was breeding Norwich Plainheads, I lost many valuable birds at about that age. Now I am fully convinced that giving them hemp seed in unlimited quantities has something to do with it, but by far the greater evil is giving them water to drink all day long. If you watch your young birds, you will find they are very fond of drinking, and they drink so much that internal troubles are set up, and they waste away and die off in a very short time. I am perfectly certain that young birds are best without water until they are about eight or nine weeks old—that is, if they are given moisture in the form of milk sop made fresh twice every day. This milk sop can be prepared by soaking the bread in boiling water; squeeze out all the water, then pour boiling milk on the bread. Allow same to get cold, when sprinkle a little fine white sugar on the top of it, also a little of the best maw seed. The latter counteracts the relaxing tendency of the sop. You can also put into the cage the egg food just as they were receiving it from their parents before they started looking after themselves. This milk sop treatment is continued until they are about ten weeks old; they are then generally fairly safe.

When to Close Down.

Do not continue breeding after the middle of July. As your last nests get finished off, put the old birds in large flights and give them rest, and look after them well, as they need your care more especially then, after the hard work of rearing broods through the season. If you pay attention to this matter, few birds will die during the most trying ordeal of the moult. Clean out daily all cages in which young birds are kept, as if they pick up any stale food it will almost certainly prove fatal to them. I think now I will conclude, and if I have said anything that has in any way helped any young fancier, I shall be amply rewarded for having come here to-night.

Several questions were asked by Messrs. Griffin, Clay, Howie, any others, which were ably answered, and so a pleasant evening was brought to a close by a vote of thanks, proposed by Mr. Pomeroy, the chairman, and responded to by Mr. Hodder.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

LONDON C.B.A.

Meeting held June 12, at the Feathers, Gt. Chapel Street, Westminster, S.W., the President, Mr. R. L. Crisp, in the chair. Mr. Mugford gave a report of the last Federation meeting. Decided to support a Federation show on condition that it be held after Christmas. Mr. Brumbridge, Wembley, was nominated for membership. Mr. Crisp opened a discussion on colour feeding. He called attention to the importance of having all birds in the best of condition before placing on colour food. His own method of mixing colour food was as follows: To each 6lbs. of tasteless pepper, he added 1lb. of hot and a little almond oil, white sugar, brandy and saffron. He also gave a liberal supply of maw seed. Messrs. Dewhurst, Smith, Mugford, Boxall, and Mrs. Litchfield joined in the debate.—Mugford and Knight, Secs.

Have been very pleased indeed with the results of my recent adverts. in "CAGE BIRDS," and entirely satisfied. "C.B." is THE paper for cage birds.—F. J. Whibley (Maidstone).

I have been well satisfied with my advert. in "CAGE BIRDS." I have sold nearly all my surplus stock, which has been nearly 100 birds, writes W. H. Phipps, Isleworth.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same.

Our Nest Feather Show will be held on July 13, writes Mr. F. Houldsworth, Secretary Dalton O.B.A. Mr. J. Wagstaff (Barrow) will judge.

Ealing and Hanwell F.S., writes Mr. Bamber, Sec., will hold an evening show (all sections) at St. John's Memorial Hall, West Ealing, on June 26th, at 7.30.

Mr. Joseph Thomson, Newtongrange, and Mr. Geo. Brown, Leith, will judge our show here on October 19, writes Mr. J. McHolme, Sec. Haddington C.B.S.

Owing to the resignation of Mr. F. Aynscough, late Secretary of Nelson and Dis. C. and C.B.S., all communicants should address letters to me, writes Mr. J. Speak, present Secretary, 11, Princess Street, Nelson.

The following gentlemen have been elected as judges at the Midland Roller C.C. next annual contest on October 31st and November 1st: Messrs. J. Netherwood (Chorley), G. Warcing (Bury), and Max Jacquemin (Wolverhampton), writes Mr. T. J. Smith, the Hon. Sec.

We have engaged Mr. John Gallacher (Bellshill), to judge Norwich Canaries, and Mr. R. Davidson (Mossend) Borders at our Young Bird Show, held in the lesser Town Hall on July 6, at 5 p.m., writes Mr. G. Marlin, Secretary Hamilton (C.O.) O.S. Fanciers wishing to become members and show can join on or before July 6; membership fee 2s. 6d. We have some very handsome specials.

I have been elected Hon. Secretary of the Harrogate Cage Bird Society, writes Mr. G. H. Barnwell, 20, College Road. The late Secretary, Mr. W. E. Fergusson, is acting as Hon. Treasurer. I trust fanciers will come up in good numbers at our open show on November 30. We have one of the best rooms in Yorkshire for a cage bird show, and have engaged the well-known judge, "Pa Mundell."

Owing to the death of Mr. Smith, I have been appointed Secretary pro. tem. of the Scotch Fancy National Derby S.A., writes Mr. A. M. Baird (23, Neilston Road, Paisley), and communications re membership and all other matters should be addressed to me. A special meeting will be held in the Grand National Halls, Main Street, on June 25, at 8 p.m., business very important.

We have engaged Mr. J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh) to judge Canaries, and Mr. Mason (Peebles) Mules, British and Foreign, at our annual open show on October 26, writes Mr. James Sloan, Secretary Ayr and Dist. C.B.C. We are holding our first nest feather show on 26th June, in the Academy Hall. Mr. C. C. Irvine will judge, and I trust members will give him a good entry. The exhibits are to be staged at 7.30 p.m.

We can recommend bird-keepers troubled with birds suffering from diarrhœa to give a trial to the "Diarrhœa Powder" being advertised in our columns by the Hoy Specialities Co. (Chemists), of Kelty, Fife (boxes 7d. and 1s.). Remedies for birds form a feature of this company's business, and the powder is guaranteed quite safe to use, and to effectively cure diarrhœa whatever the cause (chills, stale food, etc.). "Asthma Drops" are also sold by this firm.

We have engaged the Stranton Schools for Hartlepools C.B.S. nest feather show on June 26, write Messrs. Woodhead and Ryman, Hon. Secs. Mr. Arthur Wake, of Middlesbro, judge. Visitors welcomed. We have secured St. George's Hall for our open show on October 26th. There is no finer room for a show in the North of England. 1,000 exhibits can easily be staged. It is well lighted and free from draughts. Messrs. Battye and Maddison will adjudicate, and all our members are looking forward with confidence that last year's record will be broken.

The following societies have applied for the patronage of the Yorkshire County B.B. and M.C., writes Mr. Lane, Sec.; we have two more open dates, and should be glad of application before next meeting: Oct. 12, Leeds; Nov. 1, 2, Sheffield; 8, 9, Halifax; 16, Bradford East; 23, Horton, Good Intent; 27, Whitby; 22 and 23, Doncaster; Dec. 6, 7 and 9, Bradford National; 26, Malton. Will all intending new members kindly notify Secretary so as to have their names before next morning? We should be pleased if the few members who have not paid their subscriptions would kindly do so. Meeting at Market Tavern, 7.30, June 29, all members earnestly invited to attend.

NOTICE.—A SPECIAL MEETING of members and intending members of the Scotch Fancy National Derby Association, will be held in the Grand National Halls, Main Street, Gorbals, Glasgow, on Tuesday, June 25th, at 8 p.m. Business important. A large attendance requested. R. Wright (Pres.), A. M. Baird (Sec. pro tem.).—Advt.

Our young bird show will be held on July 13, at headquarters, Earl Cathcart, Munster Sq., N.W., writes Mr. G. G. Stubbs, London and Counties A.C.B.

Mr. A. Lazarus (55, Old Compton Street, London, W.), writes asking us to request Mr. A. H. Campbell (late of Harrow Hill) to kindly communicate his present address.

Barnsley and Dis. C.B.S. first feather show will be held June 29th in the large Club Room of the Clarence Hotel, writes Mr. F. C. Sims, the Secretary. Judge, Mr. W. Rapson; 11 classes provided. Birds to be staged by 3 o'clock. Local fanciers and friends invited.

The Ilford and County F. and F.S. intend making a big affair of their annual show in November, writes Mr. J. H. Priestman. They are negotiating for the hire of the Skating Rink, a well-lighted and spacious building. Will secretaries of specialist clubs desirous of holding their annual club show in the London district please communicate as early as possible with me at 56, Sunnyside Road, Ilford?

We have received a very neat booklet of rules, fixtures, etc., from the hon. sec. of the Hornsey, Wood Green and District C.B.S., Mr. P. Brooks, 3, Trinity Road, Wood Green, who will be glad to hear from any fancier who would like to join. Interesting lectures, discussions, table, and other shows will be held and everything done to assist members in the hobby, especially the young beginners.

Ramsden's Pure Peppers. For a record of wins with birds fed on Ramsden's peppers, don't trust ex parte statements in advts., but refer to catalogues of leading cage bird shows, including Crystal Palace and Horticultural Hall, where Mr. Nason's exhibit was judged to be the hottest fed bird in the show of over 2,000 entries. This exhibit was fed solely on Ramsden's Pure Peppers. Buy no other, for Ramsden's are the best and cheapest of any pure peppers on the market.—Advt.

Quite a pleasant surprise was awaiting me last Friday dinner time when I got home, writes Mr. Fred Cooper, of Finedon. I thank you very much for the honour of placing my Hawfinch on the front page; also your artist for the splendid drawing of him. I have shown him 3 times, 2nd at Northampton, vhc Burton Latimer, and first and special (novice) Crystal Palace. The latter win was one of my ambitions, and I hope some day to win a first in open competition at the Palace. I wish your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, every success. I have obtained some splendid advice from it.

Crystal Palace Show Report, 1912.—These are only champion classes, where colour counts; everything in Norwich and Cinnamons. Note: I don't give Mule classes or Borders. Champion Norwich classes, clear yellow 1st, Thomas, delightful colour, etc Tick Yellows: 1st, Daives, wonderful colour, etc. Tick Buffs: 1st, Smeaton, rich colour, etc. Yellow Unflighted: 1st, 4th, Davies, lovely colour, etc. Unflighted Buffs: 1st, championship diploma, also special best in show, ideal specimen; took premier honours at all leading shows: Davies, also won N.P.C. challenge cup three years in succession. Yellow Hens: 1st, 3rd, Smeaton. Unflighted Yellow Hens: 1st, Smeaton, exquisite colour. Unflighted Buff Hens: 1st, Thomas, capital colour. These are out of the ten open champion classes. All the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prizes in Cinnamons were won by W. Dormer, E. Godley, and Mrs. Deacon. Every one of the above birds never saw nor ate any colour food only Sandiford's Royal Red. Can I give any more proof that it is the best in the world? See advertisement.—(Advt.)

Amidst the Roses.

A pair of Chaffinches have made their nest in a rambler rose trained over the ribs of an umbrella in a garden at Orpington, and the young birds are nearly ready to fly.

Holiday Apartments.

In sending an advertisement for insertion under this new heading, Mr. Wright, of Southport, says: "It is a splendid idea." Seaside and country readers who may have apartments to let should give this column a fair test. Rates: 18 words sixpence, and ½d. for each subsequent word. Six insertions at the price of five; 13 at price of 10 prepaid. The "Holiday Apartments" heading will be found after the 'Wanted' advertisements. We commend it to our readers. Send on an advertisement at once to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Mr. Burton (Brighton) writes: "As a regular and interested reader of CAGE BIRDS, I think your "Holiday Apartment" advertisements a good idea."

Our Front Page Photograph.

Referring to the photograph on our front page this week, Mr. E. A. Kemp (Yeovil) writes: My out-door aviary measures 15 ft. long 4ft wide and 6ft. high, with slanting roof, and house to sleep in, the latter shut off from the run by a sliding door. The situation is ideal, south-east, protected from rain and wind. The birds get the sunshine all day. Six feet of the roof is covered with glass skylights, and over the front, at night, I put up glass sliding shutters for protection. I have in it plenty of shrubs and hedge sticks, and the floor is covered with sand. The aviary is unheated, and all the birds have been out all the winter. It contains Cockatiels, Budgerigars, Bullfinches, Greenfinches, Java Sparrows, Linnets, a Pekin Robin and a Waxbill. I have had several young Budgerigars this year, and the Cockatiels are sitting on five eggs. I built this aviary myself without any help.

How Bird Breeders Are Faring in 1912.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others. The communications must in each case be accompanied by the sender's name and address.

Results in the Pudsey district, writes Mr. Raistrick, Sec., have on the whole been very poor, some of the members having bred very few indeed.

I have been pretty successful with first and second rounds, as I have at present something like 18 birds, and have still another round to go. I am very pleased to say that I have gained all my knowledge from our good old paper, CAGE BIRDS.—James Stevenson (Glasgow).

From information gathered at our meeting on Saturday, writes Mr. E. Cowling, Hon. Sec. Morpeth C.B.S., it would seem that our members are not doing so badly. Hall Bros. head the list with 63, comprising Nor., Cinn., Bord., and Yorks.; Seely Bros. come next with 44, Nor., Cinn., Bord., and Yorks.; T. Metford has 29, Nor.; B. Clark, 20, Nor. and Cinn.; R. Richardson, 19, Nor.; W. Summers, 11, Nor.; J. Nichol, 13, Nor.; Barron, 20, Nor. and Cinn.; Baker, 8, Nor. and Cinn.; Tomlinson, 20, Nor., Cinn., and Mules; T. Rigg, 13, Nor., Bord. and Yorks.; J. Dixon, Stationmaster, 40, Nor. and Bord. myself, 33, all Norwich.

In the Courts.

Boys Torture a Young Thrush.

Four Leek boys named Fred Dale, Harold Dale, Harry Knott, and Harry Johnson, were all charged under the Act for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (1911), with cruelty to a Thrush at the Waste, Buxton Road, on June 7.—H. Dale, the youngest boy, pleaded not guilty, but the others admitted the offence. It appeared from the statement of P.C. Sources that the boys were behaving in a suspicious manner, on account of which he hid among the shrubs, and shortly after saw them throwing stones at a Thrush which was on the ground. On coming out witness found that the bird, a young one, was tied by the leg to a tree, and its leg had been broken, and it had other injuries. He caught Fred Dale and Johnson, and they admitted taking several young birds from a nest. He saw Knott later, and he admitted tying the bird to the tree.—Chief Superintendent Hicklin said it was an offence to take the birds from the nest apart from the cruelty alleged.—The Bench decided to give H. Dale the benefit of the doubt, and the three others were ordered to pay between them the costs, 21s.—The Chairman explained that they had made themselves liable to a penalty of £25, as well as a period of six months' hard labour, and the Bench hoped this case would be taken as a warning to others, and that the present defendants would remember it for the rest of their lives.

The Thrush a "Noisy Animal."

Three Upper Holloway residents complained that J. W. Smith, of Miranda Road, kept noisy animals, "to wit, a Thrush and fowls," and the case was heard at North London Police Court on June 14. One of the Smith's neighbours said the Thrush was in a cage in the back garden, and commenced singing at 3.30 a.m. It disturbed her, and lodgers in the house complained bitterly. Another said the bird's singing prevented him getting "a wink of sleep." He said it was not exactly singing, but a kind of shrill whistle.—The owner of the Thrush said it was a lovely songster. It commenced singing at 5 a.m., and other Thrushes came and sang in the trees. He undertook to remove the bird to another part of the house, and the case was adjourned for three months.

Tiny Birds for Tiny Gardens.

By Miss E. G. Watts
(Hendon).

A charming article which came near winning first prize in our recent essay competition.

SMALL foreign Finches, in a home-made aviary, in a tiny, very tiny, back garden, have given me more pleasure in the last three years than I can well express. Cage-bird keeping has been my hobby for twenty-three years, but it was only three years ago that an opportunity presented itself of attaining my ideal, viz., an outdoor aviary in which to start bird breeding.

Now, Canaries, somehow, never took my fancy, chiefly, I think, on account of their colour! I am not fond of yellow; it may be silly, but the fact remains—yellow birds yellow flowers, yellow garments, yellow anythings, I cannot abide, but I do like other gay colours—the brighter the better; there is much that is dull in many of our lives, so that the brighter we deck our hobbies, why! the brighter their reflexions in us, for I am convinced that hobbies do tend to reflect themselves in ourselves, and if we indulge in a hobby that takes time, patience, perseverance, hopefulness, and sometimes even real unselfishness, then we are bound ourselves to grow in patience, perseverance, unselfishness. In my opinion, there is no hobby that requires a larger share of patience, perseverance, or the "hope that springs eternal" than foreign bird keeping. However "least said, soonest mended," and if the disappointments are many, so much the greater and sweeter are the triumphs when they come, and I always feel my birds are the "children of many prayers."

When I first started bird-keeping, I could obtain no books to help me, and when after some time I lighted on the 2nd vol. of "Gedney's Foreign Birds" in a second-hand shop in Booksellers' Row, I thought I was wonderfully lucky to secure the prize at the modest sum of 5s. Now, of course, all that is altered. We have a weekly penny-worth, worth a "King's ransom."

The Birds' Home Described.

My little aviary, which is a "lean-to," built against two sides of the house, one side facing S.W., the other W., boasts of a shelter shed, and two flights, and a lobby or safety door at entrance. In the shed, which has a cement floor, over which is strewn gritty sand, I keep all food vessels and the drinking fountain. The flights are half gravel and half grass, studded with small bushes and plants, and against the wall climbs a small-flowered white clematis. The first flight is covered with a glass roof. The bath, a large round shallow dish, is in the middle of grass plot. Just a word as to this same grass plot. It is best composed of the seedy, flowering description, as the seeds of these grasses are a helpful item in the dietary of the inmates. Mine is kept replenished by tufts from the sides of the field paths and roads in my locality, in the gathering of which, I think, I am sometimes taken for a lunatic at large. I have repeatedly seen people pass by and then look back, and I know they are thinking, "Poor soul!" But then, no enthusiast minds occasionally being looked upon as a "tame one" in the successful attainment of the object in hand.

"Edward" and "Alexandra."

In my aviary I keep Weavers, Whydahs, Combassous, Pintail Nonpareils, Aurora, Ruficauda, Masked and Long-tail Grass Finches, Gouldian Finches, and Cordon Bleus. The Cutthroats had to be banished for their murderous assaults on the nestlings of other and more valuable species. Of all these, my special fancy leans towards the Gouldians, with their lovely green backs, mauve chests and beautiful turquoise narrow band round their black or red faces. The Australians are all lovely, even the Grassfinches, of subdued colouring, with their soft quaker fawn and dove shades, so beautifully blended and yet so distinctly separated from the pure white and deep black. The Ruficaudas also with their delicate greens and reds, and fairy spots, which lead to the name "Starfinch." With the breeding of Gouldians, I have not yet met with success, chiefly owing to the fact that they do not commence nesting operations till September or October, when we often experience very cold spells, especially at night, and consequently egg-binding ensues, to which these birds are very liable. But with the breeding of Grass-finches I have been very successful, rearing many, although from my own experience I find these birds a little delicate to acclimatise, and at one time I lost one after another from congestion of the lungs and pneumonia, so I then determined to be wise and not try them again.

A Happy Restoration.

But one never is wise for long in one's hobby, and meeting one day with a pair at rather a low price in a certain dealer's shop, I bought them. It was just after our late King had been taken from our midst, and they were, of course, christened Edward and Alexandra. Edward died, and almost immediately afterwards Alexandra developed rapid pneumonia. Well! I "steamed" that bird for two days and a night, with little interval, and she recovered (and so did my spirits) but in a fortnight she was again laid low, and I gave her up that time, but once more that true friend, the "steam kettle" pulled her through. I then looked upon it as my bounden duty to procure her another husband, to complete her restoration to health and happiness, for the latter goes a long way sometimes to hasten the former. I was rewarded. "Albert," as the new-comer was named, turned up trumps, and these two reared brood after brood, until Alexandra succumbed to pneumonia once for all in the middle of the summer. Oh! the "cussedness" of the foreigners! I have a pair of Cordon Bleus, and they nested five times and hatched each time, this last summer, but failed to rear, owing to the cock bird's impatience; he was always wanting to commence a new nest. The cocks are very tiresome sometimes in this respect, and when it occurs it is best to put them aside and try others. I don't like separating the pair and leaving the hen to feed, as with foreigners I always find the cock bird the principal feeder. I have also reared Zebra Finches and Masked Grass Finches.

Most of these birds will stand cold well. I have before now registered 13 degrees of frost in my aviary. It is the damp which worries them (and their owner) but with reasonable care and watchfulness, if you be willing to catch and nurse up those with colds (the beginning of many evils) an ordinary amount of common sense will carry you through most of your troubles.

Not Fastidious over the Food.

In the matter of food, these little foreigners are not much trouble; fed once a day (with the addition in the breeding season of a mid-day meal of extra mealworms, ants' eggs, spiders, caterpillars, etc.) they require no further attention. The food I give is white and Indian millet, canary, and spray millet, with paddy rice for the Nonpariels. Osborne biscuits, made soft by scalding, mealworms and ants' eggs (live when obtainable). Cuttlefish bone is always kept hanging up, and daily I put a heap of the same scraped up with scraped chalk and crushed egg-shell on the floor, or crushed mortar.

Strict cleanliness is absolutely essential to the well-being of birds, as of humans, and birds are clean naturally. I have noticed with my Finches, that as soon as ever the young are able to leave the nest the whole family move their quarters to a clean husk. Plenty of roosting and nesting receptacles are necessary, as birds like a choice. Finally, there is an old, but true, saying, which applies well to "birdie" matters: "If you want a thing done, do it yourself." It sounds conceited, but it is one of my favourite proverbs, and generally works out well. Absolutely, finally, there is a piece of most excellent advice, which I should like to give my readers (if there be any), and it runs as follows:

"Read CAGE BIRDS, and inwardly digest it."

The Bullfinch's Proper Food in Confinement.

In confinement a mixture of about equal parts of canary, German rape, and teazle may be taken as the basis, and the addition thereto of any of the more oily seeds, such as sunflower, hemp or inga, must be both occasional and moderate, as, with the exception of the Siskin, I know of no bird more liable to accumulate fat than the Bullie. Fatty degeneration of the heart or liver, and apoplexy is the post-mortem verdict on the vast majority of pet Bullfinches, if served with a continuous supply of these oleaginous seeds. Of course, if he is allowed the range of a large aviary, the danger is largely minimised by the exercise, and a slightly more generous diet is quite safe, and, in winter especially, advisable under such condtions. In spring he should have tender dandelion leaves, and the buds of hawthorn. Later, the whitehead is much appreciated, and as the season advances his insectivorous tastes may be indulged by giving him an abundance of blight-infested branches or plants, and, in addition, all the wild seeds procurable—chickweed, sorrell, meadow-sweet, dock, etc. These impart a robustness which is necessary at that period, when he is to be made or marred, viz., the moulting season (and after). My reason for inserting "and after" is that a careful study of the Bullfinch has convinced me that he can, and does, derive colourative benefits by partaking of certain fruits, even after the completion of the moult, this being heterodox to the accepted idea that colour can only be affected by administration during the formation of feather, which idea has been deduced from the fact that capsicum has absolutely no effect after feathers have been developed.

An Object Lesson from Nature.

While watching a flock of Bullfinches, I noticed that the majority were immature, and in a partially moulted state, and the paleness of the young as compared with the adult cocks was very obvious. Knowing that those fruits which are colour-giving were not ripe, privet, bramble, mountain ash, elder, and dog rose, being very late in ripening in that high northern latitude (the corn harvest there was in October), I of course thought that these pale immature specimens would be of little use for exibition, even if caught later, and explained my reason for the supposition to a keeper who had never heard of colour feeding, but whose knowledge of wild birds, and of how the seasonable changes of colour (without a change of feather) occurred, showed his powers of observation. Strangely as it then seemed to me, he combated the idea that colour was impaired by the temporary deprivation. "Wait till they get the privets, brambles, and elders," he said, "and you will almost see the colour coming on them, and I defy you to get a pale breasted bird in the whole flock after November." I happened to be up on various occasions, and at various seasons, and saw the birds, and the result is that I am convinced that the Bullfinch can improve in colour after the feather has formed, and that the poet of old who wrote of the seasons, saying:

"Septembre bryngs ye fruitie feaste,

was not so far wrong as the modern ornithologist imagines. Understand I don't deprecate the giving of fruit during the moult, far from it. I only mean that the tone of colour in this species, can, like the bill and cere of a Blackbird, be improved by its assimilation even after that period.

The difficulty in getting fruit at the moulting season is often lamented by fanciers. I have seen a prominent exhibitor purchase black-currant jam, and extract the fruit, washing the surplus syrup off with warm water, and he was very grateful when I showed him how to preserve the currants in a manner which gave him a maximum of currants with the minimum of sugar and juice. Another fruit, obtainable at all seasons, and very acceptable to all frugivorous birds, is the cranberry. These berries are largely imported preserved in a liquor; they are obtainable from most bakers, and any doubts as to their colouring properties may be allayed by giving a cranberry tart to a child, the effect is at once convincing and ghastly.

The raspberry is valuable for the grubs with which many are infested; these are greedily devoured, but, judging by the excreta, the colour is not sufficiently concentrated in this fruit, something much darker being necessary as a colour-producing medium.

To Fix the Colour.

The addition of sulphate of iron to the drinking-water is said to fix these vegetable colours, which are very fugitive or evanescent, and the astringent nature of that valuable tonic should correct any undue looseness of the bowels which sometimes follows the fruity menu. Many fanciers overdo this, under the mistaken and stupid idea that if a little is good a double quantity must be twice as good, and I have seen water as heavy charged as Hartfell Spa given to the poor birds to quench their thirst. A piece the size of a split pea is quite sufficient for an ordinary two-ounce drinker, which, as in all cases where drugs are given, must be of glass.

An outside aviary with continual facility for bathing is the best in which to moult a Bullie, as, unlike the majority of Finches, he is easy to steady when required. Many fanciers lament this tractability, as it frequently results in the prizes being annexed by field-moulted specimens. I have see a Bullie entered on a schedule while it was enjoying its liberty on the banks of Jarrow, and only four hours elapsed between its capture and being awarded first. Therefore, I need not give any advice on steadying, rather, would I say, don't pet an exhibition specimen, as quite a few go down because of their being too tame. They were sluggish, and lacked that vivacity which adds to the beauty of, and is essential in an exhibition Britisher.

"The gem, however rare it be, requires
An added motion to reveal its fires."

The extreme of this tameness is shown in the "finger fighter," which assumes a position, griffon like, and preclusive of any attempt to judge its better qualities.

Questions and Answers.

DOUBTS AND DIFFICULTIES SOLVED BY SPECIALISTS

(For Rules see last week's "Cage Birds.")

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mule and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Wild Bird Life—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

INJURED FOOT (Beginner).—Bathe the foot for a few minutes daily in a warm solution of extract of wych hazel—a small teaspoonful of the extract in a saucerful of warm water. After bathing, dry carefully, and paint on foot with a feather a little of the pure undiluted extract, and allow it to dry on. If swelling does not disappear, or materially decrease, in a week, paint it once with tincture of iodine. Use perches of very varied thicknesses, or the foot may become much cramped when recovering from this injury. To get the greatest possible variety, shape each perch like a tapered penholder, ranging from rather thinner than a lead pencil at one end to treble this thickness at the other.

QUESTION OF NAME (Mrs. E. Cooper).—In giving the breed of these birds you should describe them as "first cross Roller-Yorkshire songsters." The colour would be properly described as variegated in all case where there is a fair amount of dark plumage. But colour is of little importance in these birds; it is vocal abilities that count. If trained solely under the Roller cock, assuming of course that he is a good free and pure singer, these youngsters should certainly make very good singers. Glad you have found "Canary Breeding for Beginners" so helpful.

A SPITEFUL BIRD (Won't Sing).—Your query is not very clear. I am not sure whether you mean that the bird is mated with a hen, or has been removed from one. If the former, its silence is nothing very uncommon. What makes you think it is spiteful when you go near its cage? Does it flutter wildly about, or merely try to peck at you? If the latter, it is simply the early symptoms of tameness, and the bird wants to make friends with you. Try two or three weeks of the treatment advised to "Graham, Norwich," and if bird is not then better, write again and give more explicit details.

SWOLLEN LEG (G. J. F.).—Feed the bird for a month as advised to "G. Jenkins," and after the initial aperient, which you only need give for two consecutive days, dissolve half a small citrate of lithia tablet, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepennypiece in the water each day for a week. Catch the bird and bathe the leg for a few minutes night and morning for a few days in a warm solution of extract of wych hazel—say a teaspoonful of the extract in a saucerful of warm water. Then dry gently and paint on a little of the undiluted extract with a feather. Report progress in a fortnight.

A LAZY NORWICH (G. Jenkins).—The bird which is continually sitting on perch is probably in an overfed condition. Limit its diet in quantity and quality for a month by giving a teaspoonful only of canary seed each day for three consecutive days, and each fourth day give half-a-teaspoonful of summer rape and the same quantity of crushed biscuit or sponge cake sprinkled with maw seed, withholding the canary seed on these days. Each day give a fairly liberal supply of green food, such as watercress, lettuce, plantain and shepherd's purse seed heads, groundsel heads, and dandelion. In the drinking water add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn every second day for a week, and in the next week add four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. Then repeat the two weeks' dosage in the same order.

COLOUR FEEDING IN OUTSIDE AVIARY (G. Heath).—It is not correct to tell you the birds will not live if colour fed in any outdoor aviary. If the birds have been bred outside and are a healthy robust stock, being outside will be all in their favour, as they will have the benefit of unlimited fresh air, and more natural treatment, which in itself is a good aid to good colour and condition of plumage. There should, however, be shelter from the sun available. Of course, you must not expect to get as high colour as when birds are dealt with separately or in couples. Supply a saucer of soft food with colour added daily during the moult, allowing a teaspoonful per bird each day. You will have to make some allowance also for the foreign birds, which will probably indulge sometimes in this addition to the bill of fare. If they do they will take no harm. You probably want a little more green blood in your stock to improve colour.

YOUNG BIRDS THICK (Nimho).—You should have said whether any diarrhœa is present. It is quite possible the birds may be about starting to moult, but I am inclined to think your feeding is at the root of the mischief. You should get a copy of Part V. of "Our Canaries," which would help you through any feeding difficulty. Keep the cage and perches as clean as possible, and strew the cage floor with clean gritty sand. See that all foods, water, and the vessels containing such are thoroughly sound, pure and fresh. Give a staple diet of plain canary with a sprinkling of summer rape on top each day. Every second day give a heaped teaspoonful of egg food, bread and milk or crushed biscuit among each four youngsters, and add a sprinkling of maw to this. On the alternate days give a rather smaller quantity of hemp, millet, crushed groats, in about equal parts to which has been added a sprinkling of teazle, inga, black rape, linseed, and chopped sunflower. Give a small quantity of green food about every second day until the moult commences, using only such non-succulent things as half-ripe plantain and shepherd's purse seed heads, dandelion seed heads, mouse-ear, and seedy common chickweed. Add ten drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for one day, and afterwards three drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and two of dilute sulphuric acid for one half of each day for a week. Continue giving birds that are ill a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw each day for a week or so. Always give the soft food in the morning—not at night.

GERMAN BARE (P. P. B.).—The bareness will not be remedied now until the moult, which should take place in a few weeks hence. To enable the bird to get through the moult in good plumage you must make your dietary a little more generous during the next few weeks. Feed as advised to "Graham, Norwich," for a month at least, and as soon as the bird commences to moult give a half-teaspoonful of soft food every second day for a month, and three times each week slightly dust it with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkle with soft sugar, and on the alternating days give a pinch of maw seed. Allow bird to bathe freely; see that it is not troubled with insect pests; and slightly anoint any quite bare patches with lanocyllin once a week until the moult begins.

CAUSE OF CLEAR EGGS (G. Hughes).—It is quite useless speculating as to the cause of clear eggs without some knowledge of the food and general treatment, age, and breed of the birds in question, and you give not the slightest information on any of these points. You might have seen a number of replies dealing with the matter during the last few weeks. If copy is available refer to replies to "No Luck," and "J. D. Brown," on May 25th, concerning some of the causes, and treat the birds for two or three weeks, the same as advised to "Graham, Norwich," in this issue.

TROUBLE WITH EYE (Amateur).—Assuming the bird is not likely to have hurt the eye with a jagged end of wire, or got some irritable substance in it from the cage or perches—such as some insecticide which you may have been applying a little too liberally—it is probably suffering with an inflamed eye. Pour ½ a pint of boiling water over a poppy head and let it infuse for ½ an hour, then strain the liquor and dissolve in it as much boracic acid as will cover a shilling. Bathe the eye for a few minutes morning and evening for a few days with a little of this decoction. Use fresh liquor each time and throw it away after use.

PARTICULARS OF FOOD (Miss F. Bird).—Thanks for further particulars about foods. You might certainly be more liberal with green food with every advantage. Use either chickweed, flower-buds of groundsel, or lettuce giving preference to them in the order named, and avoid dandelion altogether. As regards quantity give a spray about equivalent to a moderate sized dandelion leaf each day at the beginning, and increase the quantity gradually according to age, and number of brood up to say, the equivalent of four good sized dandelion leaves given each morning and half the quantity given again in the afternoon for a full brood of four or five chicks at a fortnight old. For the rest vary the soft food as suggested last week, and omit the sugar, or better still, use a home-made food consisting of equal parts egg, stale household bread crumbs and crushed sponge cake, sprinkled slightly with maw, and I think you will find most of your losses cease. You should get "Our Canaries" for the fullest possible information on the subject of feeding.

ANÆMIC and DROPSICAL (E. O. A.).—It is not so much the food that is eaten as that which is assimilated by the system that matters when the nourishment of the body is in question, so that, in a manner of speaking, it is quite possible for a bird to starve "in the midst of plenty." The hen was undoubtedly a weakling, physically and constitutionally, with no reserve of vitality, and therefore should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping (1/1); Narman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

the little extra strain of breeding was sufficient to break down her resistance and enable disease to step in and get the upper hand. Being late bred, there is a probability that the parents were also at a low ebb, and this would tend to endow the offspring with delicate constitutions, though neither anæmia nor dropsy are necessarily inherited from the parents. Still, weakness and lack of vitality lay the subject open to attack by all the ills bird flesh is heir to. Your system of management seems to be very good, and given a more robust hen you should be quite successful in other attempts. But do not attempt to breed with weaklings—it is a huge mistake. Good food, provided the digestive system could assimilate it, exercise, and pure, fresh air constantly under hygienic surroundings, would have been the best treatment for such a case.

MOPING HEN (John Smith).—It is utterly useless trying to breed with a bird in the condition you describe. You should separate her at once, and keep her separate until she is ready for mating, which will probably not be this season. Examine the cage well for red mites, and if these are discovered exterminate them. Also see whether the claws are considerably overgrown, and if so trim them back to a proper length. For the rest treat her the same as advised to "Graham, Norwich," for two or three weeks, but instead of the egg food, give a piece of bread and milk with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and lightly sprinkled with soft sugar, and give a pinch of the mixed maw, gold of pleasure and sesame seeds separately. You may place them in a little heap on the floor of the cage in a spot that does not get much soiled. Shall be glad to hear, in say, three week's hence what progress she has made.

SEEDS AND DIARRHŒA.—(M. H.).—The sample of canary seed is very small, and of poor quality. No. 1 summer rape is a good quality of seed, but is of a rather soft substance, which suggests it might have been stored in a damp place; or has this sample been soaked and allowed to get fairly dry again? No. 2 is practically the same as No. 1 except that it is dry, and consequently in better condition. I cannot say whether the two first-named seeds are the cause of the diarrhœa—there is nothing about them to positively suggest this—though it is quite possible they may be. Try to get a better sample of canary to use in conjunction with the No. 2 sample of rape, and reject No. 1 sample. The unusual thirst is due to the diarrhœa. Your feeding generally seems at fault. Give a staple of plain canary. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of rape and a few grains of hemp. On the alternate days give a similar quantity of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw. Give no succulent green food for the present. In the drinking water add a pinch of sulphate of soda and six drops of syrup of rhubarb for one day, and afterwards dissolve in it a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, ditto of sulphate of iron half as big, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid. Give this every second day for a week. Stick a piece of cuttlefish in wires. See that all foods, vessels, and water are perfectly clean, sound and fresh. You would do well to get a copy of "Canary Breeding for Beginners." These birds are probably useless for breeding.

BIRDS DYING (Miss Hewett).—Sorry your letter was much too late for reply in last issue. If another death occurs, I strongly advise you to send the body as per post-mortem rules to Mr. Yates for examination, and meantime introduce no fresh birds among your present stock until you are satisfied the trouble is not of septic origin. Treat the young as advised to "Anxious Cwm," in this issue, and the parents when not rearing young as suggested in the latter part of the same reply. Do not make the egg food moist at all, and see that neither this nor green food is supplied in sufficient quantity for stale scraps to accumulate on the cage floor. Under this treatment diarrhœa should not trouble them. If it appears add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence to the water for one day, and afterwards six drops of tincture of gentian, and four each of tincture of calumba, landanum, and dilute sulphuric acid for two or three days, if necessary, to check the looseness. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in the wires and strew cage floor with clean gritty sand.

WAS IT THE SAFFRON? (W. H. B.).—The chief value of saffron is to assist birds to break away freely with the moult, but if it was properly used and not given in excessive quantity there is certainly no reason for supposing it had anything whatever to do with the birds not breeding yet, and keeping out of condition. As a cure for colds or asthma, however, the saffron would be quite useless. I cannot tell without more particulars about the birds and their treatment hitherto what is wrong with them. Try the treatment advised to "Graham, Norwich," in this issue for two or three weeks, and if this does not bring them into condition write again and give the full particulars asked for referring also to this reply. I cannot hold out much hope of your getting anything from them this season.

YOUNG DYING (Anxious' Cwm).—Your feeding seems to be decidedly faulty, and is probably the cause of the young dying, by setting up severe diarrhœa. See that your hemp is round and good, and has a nice milky-white kernel when broken open, otherwise reject it and get another sample that answers this description, failing which, it is best to use none at all. When the young are separated from their parents, continue to give a little crumbly moist egg food daily, but keep it rather on the dry side, and sprinkle it with a little maw. Give also a supply of canary seed and separately, and strew in a little summer rape on the top, and each day give a teaspoonful of cracked, not smashed, hemp to each full brood, of say, four youngsters. Give a few seed-heads of shepherd's purse, half ripe stalks of plantain, or dandelion seed heads, now and again, but stop all other succulent greenstuff until the birds are well on dry seed. As soon as you see by the husks that the young are cracking canary freely gradually reduce the egg food in quantity and frequency, down to about half a teaspoonful per bird three times a week, and hemp to the same quantity twice a week and add a little mixed seed once or twice a week. Keep cages and food, and water vessels scrupulously clean. Strew cage with clean, gritty sand regularly. Stick a piece of cuttlefish in wires.

NORWICH HEN NOT BREEDING (Graham, Norwich).—Do you mean that the hen is still losing feather? If so, you must first of all look well into the bird's surroundings, and satisfy yourself that it is not exposed to cold draughts, rapid fluctuations, or damp. Your feeding also does not appear correct. Give a staple of plain canary, which must be always accessible. Every second day give separately, in addition, half a teaspoonful of egg food, well sprinkled with equal parts maw, gold of pleasure and sesame, and on the alternating days a similar quantity of a mixture of two parts each hemp, millet, and rape, one part each inga, teazle, and charlock, and a quarter part each of linseed and mustard. For green food give a liberal supply of dandelion—slightly under-ripe seed heads gathered fresh for preference—and seedy chickweed daily. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of buckthorn, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence, every second day for the week, and in the following week six drops of tincture of gentian and three of tincture of steel every second day. If anxious to mate you might try her again a fortnight or so hence, but I doubt her doing anything in that line this season. Query came to hand too late for reply in last issue.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

WHAT BIRD (South Parade, Belfast).—If they are a true pair there is every chance of them breeding as soon as they have settled down. Before I commit myself to name, can you give me any idea as to age? Are they in immature or adult plumage? Is the tail short or long? As regard size, are they stouter or longer than Budgerigars, or is the increase general? For another comparison, are they nearly as large as Cockatiels.

AN AILING PARROT (W.B.).—If there is severe diarrhœa, continue the opium and morphia at intervals, but it is better not to give this for lengthy periods. Of course, you must not give laxatives to scour the bird, but an occasional dose—one teaspoonful in two tablespoonsfuls of water—of Dinneford's magnesia, in lieu of the plain drinking water, will be of great assistance in pulling it round; as will also a regular course of chemical food in the drinking water, say half a teaspoonful daily. Cleanse or spray the nostrils with diluted glyco-thymoline, once or twice daily, till the running ceases; it will do not harm it a little is swallowed. Examine its tongue and if this is badly furred put a little honey and borax (ready mixed, from any chemist) on the tongue, or in its mouth, by the aid of a piece of stick, feather, or camel hair brush, whichever utensil is used it must be well cleansed each time before putting it into the bulk of the mixture. You can give a little boiled maize alternately with the sopped biscuit—the maize to be boiled till soft, all water drained away, and then lightly dusted with flowers of sulphur; it only keeps fresh one day. Moisten the biscuit with a syrup made with hot water, two tablespoonfuls, chemical food half teaspoonful, and sugar one teaspoonful. Keep a tin of canary and white millet seed (equal parts) and other of hemp, oats, and sunflower (equal parts) in the cage, and sprinkle a little grit over sand on cage tray. Keep cuttlebone in the cage, and keep it where it can get all the light and air possible, not being subjected to draughts or cold winds. On hot days put it out of doors in some sheltered position. Offer it a variety of fruit till you ascertain its taste; also shelled nuts. It will be a wise precaution to promptly remove the droppings and destroy them. You must not use a metal drinker when giving drugs. Newly imported Parrots are a more or less precarious purchase owing to the insanitary conditions of importation.

QUAIL FINCH (X.).—In "Foreign Birds for Beginners" I supplied the text, the publisher inserted the illustrations. This quaint little Finch is black, white, and brown, and the illustration indicates its general appearance fairly. In captivity it spends most of its time upon the ground, and it is a good practice to put a small patch of grass (similar to what is given to Larks) in the cage, renewing as necessary—also to grow canary seed, rape, millet, etc., in shallow saucers or small pots, and stand one of these in the cage—half a dozen pots last a long time if each only stops in the cage one day, and this enables them to be watered outside the cage. The grass can be supplied by the same method. Also supply canary, millet, spray millet, and occasionally a little crushed oats. If you have a garden any small spider, beetle, or any kind of maggot procurable will be appreciated; grit, cuttlebone, and water are, of course, essentials.

A SINGING FINCH (Novice).—Personally I should not consider the song of a Pekin Robin too loud for a room; to my mind the song is nearer that of the Blackcap than the Thrush; the talent of individual birds is very variable; this qualification applies to a greater or lesser degree to all the birds named in this reply. A Grey Singing Finch (cock) will please you, if you can get a good one; wait either till you can hear one sing, or only buy a guaranteed songster. The Green Singing Finch has a nice little song, and is a prettily coloured bird, but the same conditions apply as to the Grey; the latter has the superior song (though some males of should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, both species scarcely utter a note). The St. Helena Seed-eater closely resembles the Green Singing Finch, but is a little larger and brighter in colour, and is the better songster. This is not often obtainable, but is not costly, say about 15/-, and you would have to watch advertisements and seize first opportunity. All the above are hardy, and with the exception of the Pekin, all have songs more or less resembling the Canary, but softer and more pleasing to me, for they have the plaint, pathos, and abandon of wild unadulterated nature to give character to them.

WAXBILLS AND FINCHES (H.J.F.).—The birds will agree all right, but the eight pairs ought to have a cage with a floor area of 16 square feet, and a height of not less than two feet. 2.—Yes, but to do this the three pairs ought to share a cage not larger than named above, containing half a dozen nest receptacles—Hartz travelling cages, husks, and boxes—and well furnished with twiggy branches. 3.—Of course, the environment of a garden aviary, with growing trees and shrubs, is the best, but much can be done indoor by having a dozen pots or saucers containing growing grass, canary, millet, and rape seedlings, etc.; by changing them daily, all necessity of watering them in the cage would be avoided, and they would keep fresh a good while, as two or three would be sufficient in at a time. The back and ends of cage to be well lined with twiggy branches, heather sprays, etc., and the nest receptacles fixed behind these. "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1½ post free from our Manager, describes these birds rather fully, and you should get it.

A FEATHER PULLER (J. Murphy).—Stop giving tea sop at once, and do not give any sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever. Give one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia every fourth day, in lieu of the drinking water, so long as the voidings are not watery loose, when the latter occurs cease giving the magnesia, save for an occasional dose to keep the bowels moving freely. When not giving the magnesia put half a teaspoonful of bynophosphates in the daily supply of drinking water. Spray with quassia solution daily during genial weather, and give the bird all the light and air possible without draughts; on hot days put it outdoors in some sheltered position. Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, crust of bread or plain biscuit, grit and cuttlebone. Steep the crust or biscuit in water and byno-phosphates. Seed mixture: One quart each canary and white millet seed, one pint oats, half a pint each shelled nuts, paddy rice, hemp, maize, dari, and sunflower seeds, one gill each chillies and grit (not sand); well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Report progress a month hence.

SMALL FOREIGN SONGSTERS (Songster).—The Editor could not give me the space to describe the songs of all the birds you name. (1) All the Waxbills are better songsters than the Avadavat; by the way, the Avadavat is a Waxbill; perhaps the Grey (pink-cheek) and Gold-breasted are just about equal to it. (2) Barely, being little more than an occasional chirp. (3) Very similar to Cordon Bleu; my birds have only uttered stray notes—not any attempt at connected song. (4) Space will not permit me to describe songs separately, but they are a little stronger than Avadavats, and fully as sweet. I place them in order of merit: St. Helena, Orange-cheek, Pink-cheek, and Golden-breasted. (5) Very few, at this period only the call note is used as a rule. (6) Quite similar. (7) Scrappy and noisy, like a Weaver's. (8) Green Avadavat, any Foreign Siskin (but these I expect will cost 12/6 to 20/-, or more for cocks), Jacarini, Reddish, Bluish, Lined, and White-throated Finches, but cocks of these are not always on offer; you would have to wait your opportunity, and they would cost from 12s. 6d. upwards. Moreover, they are not showy, but they are handsome small birds. You might pick up a cock Alario Finch by watching adverts. from 7/6 to 10/6; this is a pretty bird, with a really good song.

SUPERB TANAGERS AND SNOW BUNTINGS (Old Subscriber).—Give the Tanager a varied supply of ripe fruit, as much as it will eat, also some good soft food mixture, and one or two mealworms or other insects per diem. If at any time there appears any signs of internal inflammation, give a little milksop. As regard the Snow Bunting repeat this query to our British bird expert next week; it is out of my province; in the meantime give a little soft food, a mixture of canary, hemp, oats, rape, and a little wild seed mixture, with two or three insects per diem.

BUDGERIGARS (C.E.J.).—I am afraid the Budgerigars could easily get through the wire netting, the mesh should not be larger than three-quarter inch, though it is probable for some time they would make no attempt to do so, and if yours was a country place I should say put them in, they would spend as much of their time at large as in the aviary, but in a town the cats would soon exterminate them. The specimen of seeding grass is the best kind to offer them, both in its present stage and when in a more advanced stage of ripeness, at the same time any kind of flowering grass may be offered that they will eat, also green cereals of all kinds with the seeds half ripe. There is no settled nesting time in this country, they usually cease nesting operations during the moult, nesting should be discouraged during this period—they will soon come on as soon as the moult is over; they should nest about late July.

AILING BUDGERIGARS (Musgrave).—The condition of your bird is largely due to insufficient wing exercise. It is a very tame bird, and if you can induce it to take a fly round the room occasionally it will benefit greatly therefrom; of course, you must see that windows are closed and the fire screened; it will return to its cage when in need of food. Bathe its joints with hot water (not hot enough to cause discomfort), partly dry with a cloth, and anoint with neat whisky. Give the chemical food also on rusk, and every fourth day put one third of a teaspoonful of Dinneford's magnesia in one ounce of water, and give this in lieu of the drinking water; give also once a week a few crushed oats; your diet is satisfactory. It should have clean cuttlebone continually in the cage. Report progress in two or three weeks; it will take time though for any radical change to take place; the trouble has become almost chronic through letting it run on for two years.

BUDGERIGARS NOT BREEDING (P.P.B.).—I should stand their cage out of doors for the summer, in some sheltered position, fixing something temporarily over the top, to make it waterproof, and fasten a canvas curtain before the front of cage at right angles. Give them the varied diet advised in our previous reply, and as much green food and flowering grass as they will eat; do not quiz into their nesting arrangements, and the birds should soon become thoroughly fit, and come into breeding condition. This you will readily know, for the cere of the cock will become brilliant blue, and that of the hen ruddy brown. Get our Nutshell, "Budgerigars," 2½d., post free, from our Manager; it will tell you all about them.

AFRICAN BIRDS (G. H. Hunt).—Your description is none too clear, and I can only give a tentative reply. (1) Will reply next week. (2) This is apparently the Yellow-rumped Serin, but as it is probably a young bird a further development of plumage may yet take place. (3) Altogether too vague. I am inclined to put it down as the Grey-necked Serin, or some near species. You must give me more minute descriptions if I am to give you a definite reply; there are fifty or more species that would fit your description as it stands. Will keep your query by me and await fuller details. Add millet and spray millet to your dietary.

HYBRID SILVERBILL AND BENGALESE (Thorne).—The Bengalese has crossed with most of the other Mannikins, and hybrids have been fairly freely produced; though at the moment I cannot call to mind an instance of this particular cross. I think it has occurred. The Silverbill is also very ready to cross with a near species when a mate of its own kind is not to hand; in the aviary Silverbills are quite free breeders. I should not be too curious, the old birds usually keep the crops well filled, and the young need plenty of nourishment too, for their development is so rapid. It will be interesting if you describe them when in mature plumage, and I trust both will live to reach that stage. Give plenty of green food, flowering grass, chickweed, groundsel etc.

THE COMMON QUAIL (H.S.).—(1) Briefly, the chin and throat of the male are white, with a black anchor shaped mark down the middle; his breast is rufous-buff with pale shaft streaks. The female has no black down the middle of the throat, and her chest is much spotted with brownish black. (2) Yes, and the present time is the season, at least many kinds of Quail have already one brood fending for themselves. The Californian Quail in my aviary have twelve chicks, which are now quite independent of their parents. The incubation period is 21 to 25 days, and the clutch usually numbers 8 to 12. (3) Yes, providing they have a covered shelter to retreat to when they desire, on the floor of which there should be plenty of dry sand, or a corner arranged containing a good depth of sand, say 4 inches. They should do well enough in the quarters provided; make a good sand bath at one corner, and at another put in some turfs and keep them watered to keep the grass fresh.

GOULDIAN FINCH IN BAD PLUMAGE (Gould). Very pleased to note there is an improvement; continue the treatment, which, coupled with some fine warm weather, enabling you to give them plenty of light and air, should soon make them quite well. The trouble arose, I should say, from a surfeit, combined with possible weakness, or some latent infection contracted during importation, but it should not trouble you again; once the trouble is past it would be a wise precaution to well cleanse your cages. Use a ten per cent. carbolic solution (chemist will supply), and then well swill with cold water, and leave to dry in open air. You had better take a mop camel-hair brush and paint the cages with the carbolic solution, taking care that no small holes, joints, or crevices, are missed. Treat your large cage thus at once, and as soon as it is well dry again (two days in open air will suffice), put your finest cock and best hen in it, and they should soon breed. In outdoor aviaries, some aviculturists have already reared two broods. For breeding in cages I only advise one pair to each cage whatever its size. Use a little healing ointment in similar cures in lieu of the vaseline, of which you put too much on; very little is required.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

MULES LEAVING THE NEST (Lucky Novice).—Pleased to hear of your success, and glad to know it has been attained by following my advice. Five Linnet Mules in one nest is excellent.—The great thing is not to encourage the hen Canary to get on with her next nest until the Mules are fairly on the way to supplying their own wants. Don't give her nesting material, on any account, until the youngsters are beginning to pick over the food. The latter should be placed on a "feeding board," one of the most useful appliances out (an illustration appeared in CAGE BIRDS of March 11th last). By using this, they get on food very quickly; they see the hen feeding from it, and soon begin to follow her example. When observed to do the latter, they can be shut off with a wired slide, through which the hen will continue to give them frequent "meals" (while building her next nest) until they cease to "cry" to her for food. Put a mixture of food on the board—egg-bread, well sprinkled with Plasmon oats (obtained from the grocer) and also some crushed canary, hemp and sunflower seeds, and maw seed, together with sprays of ripe seeding shepherd's purse. Note another answer given this week. Seeding shepherd's purse is very valuable; young birds delight in it.

THE FERTILITY OF EGGS (Miss Knowles).—To test eggs for fertility is a very easy matter. After they have been sat upon for six or seven days, hold them 'twixt finger and thumb up to a strong light (a well-lighted window, or a gas jet, etc). Or cut a hole about the size of a sixpence in a piece of cardboard, hold the egg to this hole, and the cardboard up to the light. If the light shows through them, they are unfertile; if quite dark (opaque) they are fertile. If "clear," the yolk can plainly be seen floating inside the shell as the egg is turned around. If the interior is not opaque, but is of a light brownish tint, then the egg is addled (or the development of the chick has for some reason or other stopped at an early stage). Sometimes there is a dark area at one end, and a light one at the other, which means that the contents have dried up (often as the result of a fracture of the shell, or a tiny hole in it). An experienced fancier can successfully test for fertility after the egg has been incubated two or three days; but to make absolutely certain, the testing is better left until about the sixth day. If the egg is opaque, but the chicks fails to hatch on the fourteenth day, one can easily tell whether it is living by placing the egg in a cup of comfortably warm water for a few moments; it will "wobble" about if the chick is alive.

HAND-REARING JAYS, MAGPIES, ETC. (A. Wood).—The leg weakness might have been due to an insufficiently nourishing diet, or to the "bedding" being allowed to get damp. You should have no trouble in hand-rearing either a Jay, Jackdaw, or Magpie. If you mix finely-minced hard-boiled egg with an equal quantity of very stale bread crumb, and moisten it with new milk when feeding, you should get along all right. If you get several young ones, however, you will find it cheaper to use thoroughly scalded and mashed-up puppy biscuits (of best quality), with which you can mix the egg in the proportion of three parts biscuit to one of egg. You can give the youngsters mealworms, by all means, and smallish garden worms, cut into suitable pieces, should also certainly be supplied. Also you can frequently chop up a piece of lean mutton or beef (mince it up finely) and give amongst the food; or a little tender cooked meat can be given. Personally, however, I fight shy of meat as much as possible (especially so for very young birds), for I am certain it upsets the stomach of most birds (sets up diarrhœa), especially when much is used raw. I prefer boiled or stewed rabbit flesh to all other, when obtainable. Mix a good big pinch of fine grit amongst the food now and again, or about half a teaspoonful of powdered cuttlefish bone. You can give the birds a drink of plain water after each meal, if you like. If any nestling should get a touch of diarrhœa (which is unlikely if you give the cuttlefish or grit) well mix a saltspoonful of prepared chalk powder (from any good chemist) amongst a portion of the food fed to it. Repeat after an interval, if it seems necessary. Take them from the nest when about 10 days old. Keep very clean and as warm and cosy as possible.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

THE BLACKCAP. (Small fancier).—I doubt whether you will get a cock Blackcap Warbler much cheaper than the price mentioned. I can only suggest that you send a few postcards to certain of the bird-dealers and enquire their lowest price. Or you might visit the shops down Bethnal Green Road and immediate neighbourhood.

TWO ITEMS. (W. J. Morgan).— 1: The Buntings eat practically only canary seed; they care very little for other seeds. They should have a little of a good insectile mixture (prepared in the usual way) frequently as a change, and this should have mixed with it a percentage of oatmeal, medium or coarse, or scrushed oats. They require also some live food—fresh ants' eggs are the ideal thing as long as they are obtainable. 2: As nesting materials for hen Finches, try hay cut into short lengths, the fibre from cheap door-mats (coker-nut fibre) treated in the same way, dried moss and grass, bents, tiny rootlets and twigs and cow-hair; some have a fondness for a few small, downy feathers, and even charpie. I have also found them partial to the cheap felt (grey) used to put under carpets; tease it out well. An old Blackbird, Linnet, or Greenfinch, etc., nest will provide useful material when pulled to pieces (bake in the oven first). Bullie hens are very keen on the coker-nut fibre; also hay and dried grasses. You have a "big family" of birds; I hope you breed something good.

A POSSIBLE MATING. (B. Henson).—I do not think it impossible to get hybrids from cock Bullfinch and hen Canary. I believe, in fact, both fertile eggs and young have been obtained from this mating. It is, of course, admittedly far more difficult this way than when the sexes are reversed.

CLUB & SOCIETY NOTICES

ONE notice of any forthcoming Society meeting inserted free. It should reach us not later than Tuesday morning's post. Specially printed Club Notice Postcards may be had free on application to our Manager. Secretaries should always use them.

YOUNG GOLDFINCHES. (W. O. C.).—The hen Canary will only eat and feed to the young the foods usually adopted by Canary breeders. If you can get some live ants' eggs and mix these well amongst the egg-food, however, your chances of rearing the young will be very much enhanced. Still, many hen Canaries have reared Goldfinches without the slightest trouble. Let her have plenty of seeding shepherd's purse and chickweed. I certainly do not advise you to colour-feed the youngsters.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

T. Parsons.—We shall be pleased to hear from you and to advise further if necessary.

A. Duerden.—We have on several occasions published articles on this subject, but shall be pleased to try and arrange for another to appear in a week or so's time.

D. McArthur.—Size of photograph is not really material (though quarter and half plates are best) so long as it is sharp and contains plenty of contrast (i.e., is not flat). We prefer an ordinary silver print; whether from film or glass negative does not matter.

Singing Contests.

NEWTOWN (Leeds).

Weekly contest, June 16, at Prince Albert Inn, when Mrs. M. A. Saynor gave four good prizes for quality; 22 birds entered. Judges, Messrs. J. Smith and A. Jeunings. 1, Whitfield; 2, Madden; 3, Richardson; 4, Binns.—E. Wood, Hon. Sec.

CASTLEFORD.

Weekly contest held at George and Dragon, Bridge Street. 47 good birds sang for four prizes. 1, 2, W. Nelson, 70 and 60; 3, 4, shared between A. Sweeting and B. Nelson, 54. Also on June 16, 28 birds entered in a three minute sing: 1, B. Nelson, 57; 2, J. Kirk, 56; 3, W. Dobson, 43. Sunday singing is always open to all, 5 seconds a break, first pair in the window at 1 p.m. We have one of the best rooms in the district and use slide instead of moving birds. Saturday is for members' sings; our next open Saturday sing is on July 6.—W. Dobson, Hon. Sec.

FELLING-ON-TYNE.

Linnet contest held at the Turf Hotel, June 8. Mr. Jefferson gave £1 5s. extra to entry money. There were 96 entries, and some splendid singing. There were 96 entries, and some splendid singing was heard before a crowded house. We had to divide owing to darkness. This was the best contest held in the North for years, all the best birds being there. Result: Messrs. Boyed (Durham), 2 lots; Furlung (Jarrow); 3, Wetherspoon (Durham), 4; Donald (Spennymoor), 1; Wich (Washington), 2; 2; Donald (Spennymoor), 1; Wich (Washington), 2; Ludo (Hartlepool), 1; Coal (Newcastle), 1. Judge, Mr. Maddison; timer, Mr. Darkie. Mr. Almour, Sec.

PONTEFRACT.

Members' contest, June 15, at Woodman Inn, when we had some very good singing: 1, S. Scott, 54 secs.; 2, Hinchcliff, 51; 3, C. Scott, 46. Open contest, June 16, when close on 20 birds sang. Winners, Scott, Hinchcliff, and Piper. Open contest every week-end.—W. Beard, Sec.

DURHAM.

A Linnet sing, held Station Hotel, Todhills, June 15; 56 birds competed, and some very good time was done. 1, McQuirk and Franks; 2, 4, Lanburn; 3, Wilson and Adams. Judge, Mr. Joe Gardener (Spennymoor); Secretary, J. Sill. Next contest, Black Horse, Elvet, Durham City, June 22, prize valued £2. Other good prizes. Judge, Mr. Gardner, Spennymoor. Start two prompt.—Geo. Reed, Sec.

SHEFFIELD.

Linnet singing, held Royal George, Brightside Lane, June 15, when Mr. C. Hill gave three special prizes, to be sung for 3 minutes time singing. 12 birds entered. 1, Driver, 71 secs.: 2, 3, Thompson, 55 and 52 secs.; Spottiswood, 36 secs. and 30 secs. Also June 16, when Mr. C. Hill gave 3 extra special prizes, to be sung for 3 minutes time singing; 18 birds entered, and some good singing was heard. 1, Driver, 88 secs; 2, 3, Thompson, 77 secs. and 63 secs.; Thompson, 62 secs. Contest every week end. Next contest June 22. First pair of birds hung at 3.—A. Thompson, Sec.

LEEDS.

Weekly contest for quality, held King's Head, Shannon Street, Leeds, June 15, when 20 birds sung for four prizes, given by Mr. Tillotson: 1, Stead; 2, Hollingworth; 3, Chadwick; 4, Wigfield. Extra contest same day, when 14 birds sung for 3 prizes. 1, 3, Stead; 2, Chadwick. Judges: S. Hardcastle and W. Naylor. Also June 16, when 24 birds sung for four good prizes, and some good singing was heard: 1, Bland; 2, Chadwick; 3, Stead; 4, shared by Johnson and Stead. Judges, S. Hardcastle, W. Naylor, and B. Sissons.—Walter Naylor, Hon. Sec.

SALFORD.

Open contest for quality and time, June 15, at the Boathouse Hotel; 38 birds entered from the following clubs: Leigh, Blackburn, Tyldesley, Westhoughton, and Oldham. Winners: Quality: 1, Topping, Blackburn; 2, Jones; 3, Brown; 4, Statham (all of Leigh). Time: 1, Kennedy, 96, Tyldesley; 2, Fairhurst, 67, Leigh; 3, Poole, 65, Leigh; 4, Woodward, 35, Westhuughton. Judges: W. Barnes, T. Statham; referee, J. McAllister; timekeepers, J. Woodward, R. Statham, J. Green; tappers, A. Stinson and S. Woodward; bird-keeper, Ben. Jones (Salford). It is agreed to give all clubs in the affiliation our views to benefit the small club. Will members attend headquarters, June 23, to discuss further the interest of the novice? Chair taken by Mr. Cootes at 7.30 prompt.—B. W. Lawton, Hon. Sec.

Is Aluminium Paint Harmless?

Sir,—I think Mr. R. Tayler's a very good tip for improving the appearance of old and rusty wire fronts, but I should like to ask if this aluminum paint he recommends is quite harmless if picked off by the birds. Thanking him in anticipation of a reply.

A Recipe for Egg-cake.

Sir,—I read with great interest Mr. E. Perry's letter on the above, and should think it to be a splendid recipe. Has Mr. E. Perry tried it when colour feeding his birds? Does it do even for that? I think I shall give it a trial this season. Mr. Perry will greatly oblige me if he will say if his egg-cake is a good medium for the giving of colour food.

The Wanderer's Home-coming!

Bullie Returns After Twelve Months.

Sir,—I do not know if you think this bird story worth publishing, but I can vouch for the truth of it—the lady lives near me, and told me the story a week ago.

This lady had kept a tame Bullfinch many years in a cage. One day he escaped, flew away, and was given up for lost. Quite a year after the Bullfinch flew in at the open window of the room he had quitted, was caught and put in the old cage with a Canary, its new occupant. Violent quarrels took place between the two, and nothing satisfied the Bullfinch till he again had his old cage to himself. The lady believes that the bird, which flew in at the window, was the same Bullfinch she lost—her old pet returned home after his wanderings.

A New Society for Arnold and Daybrook.

Sir,—A meeting was held in the British Schools, Arnold, June 15, and it was resolved to form a society, to be called the Arnold and Daybrook C.B.S. As most of the fanciers are novices, it was deemed advisable to confine it for the time to the parish of Arnold and Daybrook only. Of course, open classes will be provided as well for outside fanciers. Myself and the committee will do our best to help all those interested in cage birds, and try and make it a success with the great help we get from your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. If any fanciers are willing to become members, we shall be heartily pleased if they will apply to the sec. Next meeting June 22, at 3 p.m., British Schools.

The committee are Messrs. Extall, Dable, Teece, Hickling, Johnson, Aldridge; treasurer, Mr. Foster; sec., J. Teece.

Rearing Young Birds Without Egg-food.

Sir,—I ought to treat the first part of Mr. Stanley's letter with contempt, because he is saying something that is not true. My hand is against no man; I always strive to help a man upwards if possible. I fail to discover anything to suggest prejudice in my letter. I have just as much right to write about the virtues of egg food as he has about nut food. Now, Mr. Stanley, do you call it prejudice to describe truthfully the methods that have made me a successful breeder of the German Canary? The reason I wrote that letter was because I thought (and think yet) that the new beginner might be led astray by adopting new methods which we know as yet very little about. I have no desire to blow my own trumpet, but the man that is keener to give the novice advice, according to my own experience, I don't think exists. When I said it only took me three minutes to prepare my egg food, I didn't reckon the time it takes to boil eggs; my wife boils them while I am at work. Wheezing is caused, according to Mr. Stanley, by sudden changes taking place in the air. Now my bird-room faces North, and according to the thermometer changes take place every day, yet I hardly ever hear a wheezing bird. It is more likely caused by all wire cages and badly made box cages; these cages are always draughty, and in my opinion that's the main cause. Mr. Stanley's assertion that egg food begins to go rancid an hour after it is made is quite true, but a silly thing to say. When we begin to live, of course, we begin to die, but some of us top the century. My egg food keeps nice and sweet for 24 hours and that is long enough for me. To keep it nice and sweet in very hot weather I put the mug in a pail of cold water straight from the tap, and cover with a damp cloth. But egg food can be kept much longer if put in a bladder, tied up, and placed in a cool place. As for nuts, there is more nourishment and tissue forming properties in one new-laid egg than in 1lb. of any kind of nuts. Nuts are the natural food of monkeys, squirrels, and other animals that live in trees, and are only found in the vicinity of the haunts of these interesting animals. What is the use of Mr. Stanley blaming egg-food as the cause of septic fever when he has no proof that such is the case? My father has kept birds for over 40 years, and at one time bred a large number of Dutch Frills and Lizards, yet he has never seen a case of septic fever. The reason I only boil my eggs 5 mins. is because I think that boiling them longer takes the iron from the yolk, besides diminishing the nourishing properties of the egg somewhat. I like the yolk to be reddish-yellow, and not whitish as they are when boiled 15 or 20 mins., as my birds seem to relish it better, so I differ from experts in that respect. No two men in the country feed their birds exactly alike. We all have our fads; for instance, when a nest of young are newly hatched, I place between the wires a small leaf of dandelion, and if I find it gone when I visit the room again I am happy, because I know the young are mine, and I am not at all particular about giving egg food for a few hours. I shall now let the subject drop.

JOHN CANNING.

Can Mules Breed?

Young Reported from Hen Mule and Cock Greenfinch.

Sir,—I have a ben Linnet Mule paired to a cock Greenfinch, and she has two young. This is her third nest this year, the other eggs being clear. I thought I would write to you about it, as I have only read once before of young being got from a hen Mule.

W. HILLIER.

News Wanted.

Sir,—Mr. Govier on May 11 put in a letter that he was certain he would have young from a hen Canary and cock Mule. I haven't read anything since. I expect he just saw the cock Mule in the act of pairing with the hen and jumped to the conclusion that the eggs must be fertile. He had far better waited a few more days before writing you and made sure about their fertility. It is well known that a cock Mule when in condition is rank as possible, and will copulate with any hen that will "call" to him. But the act of mating doesn't always mean that any eggs laid must have chicks in them. I expect this is where Mr. Govier went wrong, like many others who count their chicks before they hatch!

PETER MCINTYRE.

Accomplished Many Years Ago.

Sir,—I am glad to see the letters in CAGE BIRDS on this subject, and that fanciers have been successful in producing young from the Mule. I have been a Mule breeder for over 25 years, and many an interesting problem I have solved. It is now over 25 years ago since I proved that Mules will breed. I by chance at that time put two Mules together in a small cage. They were dark, very dark, Goldfinch and Canary Mules which I had hand-reared, as the Canary died when they were 14 days old; so they were brother and sister. The hen laid two eggs on the cage bottom, which I placed (marked) under a hen Canary, which was sitting. She hatched these two eggs, which came from the Mules, but refused to feed the young. I wrote to a paper at that time recording the facts. I quite well remember being well laughed at for my "tale." as they called it. I have since then had fertile eggs from a Mule, but have never been able to raise one. There have been instances recorded of the mule (animal) having produced young, and why should not birds? If anyone has any Mules I should advise them to put them together, and try the experiment; if the eggs were not fertile, other eggs could be placed with them, such as Linnets, Goldfinches, or even Canaries, for I have found that Mules are very good feeders. Many a nest of Canaries I have had raised by the Goldfinch Mule. I remember I wrote to the late Dr. Green and told him. He said it was impossible, and I must be mistaken. Other so-called authorities said the same. I am glad that others have got further than yours humbly,

HYBRID.

A LADY'S INTERESTING EXPERIMENTS IN CANARY BREEDING.

Sir,—When I was trying with varying success to find a reliable substitute for egg food for Yorkshire Canaries, I found that robust youngsters could be reared on crushed arrowroot biscuit, made just crumbly moist by the addition of a little honey. Most hens take kindly to this mixture, but if I intend them to feed their young with it, I give it with a sprinkle of maw when pairing, so that the old birds are used to it long before the family arrive. In trying new foods, I always experiment on a pair of common Canaries, and carefully take notes of the result for future reference. I have never tried to feed a really fine pair of birds or their young on any egg substitutes, as I have not sufficient faith in their strengthening qualities to risk the chance of losing valuable birds which thrive quite satisfactorily on home-made egg cake. The old saying: "What is one man's meat is another man's poison" applies also to birds, and their likes and dislikes should be studied just as we do our own. Scalded puppy biscuits are often highly spoken of, but I have had no success at all with these, never being able to tempt a bird to eat them—one peck seems to be quite sufficient, even when scalded with milk. Milk sop squeezed fairly dry and scalded rape I have tried without egg food, but never continued alone for the whole time of feeding, as I always notice the young begin to go thin and scraggy by the third or fourth day, as though they were not getting sufficient nutriment. I have had several hens at different times which fed their young almost solely on cracked hemp seed; and one only which would touch nothing but canary seed and green food, and, strange to say, she reared fine birds on this plain diet, although daintaies were offered to her frequently. I always supply feeding hens with cracked hemp and a small quantity of seasonable green food from the time of the first egg being hatched. With green food, it is best to study the birds individual tastes, and watch the effect on their general health, and that of the young ones. As a staple seed diet I use one part best German rape to three parts best Spanish canary, with a small portion daily of either cole, linseed, niger, or groats for a treat. All seed is given in pots on the cage floors, which are well covered with silver sand and sprinkled with sharp grit, crushed egg shells, and burnt bones, with pieces of rock salt and cuttle fish hanging on the cage fronts. These pots do away with that favourite home of the red mite—the seed box. Fresh water is, of course, given daily, and baths before noon whenever the weather is fit, so that all plumage is sure to be dry before roosting time. In winter I use three large flight cages—one for the old hens, one for the old cocks, and the other for young birds. When the young cocks are noticed singing lustily, they are removed to box cages until sold. For the breeding season, double breeders are used, lime-washed in the old-fashioned way, and porcelain nest pans, lined with thin carpet felting, while moss and doe hair form the nesting material. I use no artificial heat in the bird room, but have a curtain fixed in front of the cages, from hooks in the ceiling. This curtain I can slide away during the daytime and cover them all up at night, so that I know my pets are quite snug and free from draughts, without the danger of gas or oil fumes. With this treatment I am fairly successful with bird breeding, and enjoy an interesting and profitable hobby. In my opinion the chief duty of one who keeps pets is to study their temperament, health, and happiness. Most of them will respond by showing the greatest affection for their owner, which should more than repay him for the little extra time taken.

MRS. EDWARDS.

Now, Northowram Fanciers, Why Not Wake Up?

Sir,—Owing to the non-attendance of members at our last two meetings, I am very sorry to say that we have decided to disband the society temporarily.

Two White House Sparrows.

Sir,—Seeing in your last issue that a White Sparrow has been observed near Dublin, I thought it would interest you and your readers to know that I have in my possession a couple of young pure white House Sparrows, which have been bred in this locality, and both from the same nest. They are now well on seed, and in good condition. By their habits they remind me of a pair of foreign Finches, as they are so very tame and cheeky, following one another about the aviary in exactly the same manner. These birds are bred from a pair of ordinary House Sparrows, and are two out of a nest of five, the other three young ones being of the ordinary colour.

When Wild Birds May and May Not be Caught.

Sir,—"Birdlet," I think, has misunderstood my letter re Chaffinches. Anybody can catch birds at the proper time of year, but as the laws of different counties differ, I should advise him to get in touch with them, as he is a catcher. I speak from experience, as in my time I have had to pay more than one fine. The wild bird law for any particular district can always be seen outside of the local police station, and inside of post offices, so there is no excuse for anybody. The main question he asks can easily be answered. "Any owner or occupier of land, or any person authorised by him is exempt in respect of all birds not on schedule"; that is to say, any owner of land can catch or authorise any person to catch certain birds on his land if he likes, but let him remember that is only at certain times in the year, so let that owner or owner's employe beware, whether on his own or his master's property or not. If he is caught bird-catching, destroying nests, or taking eggs in the close season, they will make him sit up for it. So you will see the penalty applies to all cases in the close season, and in all districts there are certain birds that you must not catch at any time, so whenever you catch, be sure to be on the safe side. You also stand a chance of a summons if you catch on land without asking permission. I hope I have now put this matter plain enough for the majority of catchers.

Societies at Newcastle.

Sir,—In your correspondence columns of last week I saw it stated that the Newcastle Novice Society had changed its name. This is not true; I wish to state particularly that this is the Newcastle Novice C.B.S., and I do not want any mistake whatever made or the principle of our society will be missed. New comers should note particularly also that novices can win as well as the committee, who will retire each year for other members. We have no connection with any other society in Newcastle. Our headquarters are at Mr. Purvis's Cafe, Clayton Street, opposite Bird Market, Newcastle, and my address is 7, St. Thomas Street, Newcastle, where all special prizes can be sent for the above society.

The Proposed New Society for Penygraig.

Trouble in the Rhondda Valley.

Sir,—Seeing a lettter in your valuable paper re the above, by Mr. Ivor M. Morgan, I should like to tell him that the Mid Rhondda and Dis. C.B.S. is not dead yet, and not likely to die. We are as strong now as ever, and seeing that Mr. Morgan is the President of the Mid Rhondda C.B.S., now that he is calling a meeting to form another society on our doorstep, I think he is throwing an insult in the faces of the members of the Mid Rhondda C.B.S., as people have been asking me what is the matter with your president and your society? I should like to ask Mr. Morgan: (1) Why have you, as President of the M.R.C.B.S., tried to form another society within half-a-mile? (2) Do you still wish to remain as president of the M.R.C.B.S.? If not, you evidently skipped rule 16 in our club rule book. Or have you never read the rules? (3) Have you any complaint to make against any member or members of our society? If so, come to the next meeting, and you will be welcome to make such. Now, Mr. Morgan, I wish you to understand I want a straightforward answer from you. You know that two societies so close together cannot prosper.

ARTHUR H. C. LEGG,
Hon. Sec. Mid Rhondda and Dis. C.B.S.

THE STOCK BOOK.

IT MAKES BIRD BREEDING EASY.

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

It simplifies the operations in the Birdroom and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character; Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

A noted fancier says of this book, "It makes bird-breeding easy."

Ring Ousel Pairs with Mistle Thrush.

A Query About "Trapping" Snails.

Sir,—I have a hen Mistle Thrush and a cock Ring Ousel in an outdoor aviary (with four other birds), who have mated, and who pair freely every day, but they make no attempt at nesting, no matter how I try to induce them, as a hybrid from the two birds would be most interesting. Can anyone give advice as to an easy way in which to catch snails out of a garden? R. V. WAGNER.

Eight Eggs in a Clutch.

Sir,—I have a hen Canary that has laid 8 eggs, and is sitting on them very well. I would like to know if any of your readers has had birds with 8 eggs, and if they have reared any youngsters from them. To prove that this is a fact, I may say that I have only two hens, and the other one has got three young ones. I have only had one nest, and out of four eggs I got four young ones, and three are still alive. This hen was only bred last year.

JOHN J. WILSON.

[Instances of 7, 8, and 10 eggs in a clutch have been recorded in CAGE BIRDS this season.—Editor.]

A Looking Glass for the Breeding Cage.

Sir,—This notion I have proved to be most useful during the breeding season, for it enables you to see right into the nest, no matter how high up the cage is, without having to disturb the birds. Take a piece of looking glass, not larger than three inches square, and fix it with four drawing pins, or tin tacks, at an angle in the top corner of the cage, above the nest, as shown in sketch WM. COOKE.

The Type of Present-day Norwich Plainheads.

Is the Value of the Head Exaggerated?

Sir,—I think "Sub Rosa" is going a bit too fast. He says there was a quotation in your journal from a Norwich daily paper decrying the Palace judges, which, sir, is not true. A quotation from the "Eastern Evening News" did appear in your journal some time back, which said quotation was not quite correct, and I wrote explaining same, which explanation you were kind enough to publish. I feel sure "Sub Rosa" could not have read the latter, or I think he would not have written as he has now done. As to my second-hand information, as he terms it, these fanciers were disappointed with some of the winners in the Norwich Plainhead cock classes as to type and quality. I may say they went to the Palace mostly to see a certain bird, and when they saw it (it was a first prize bird), one of them remarked that he would not have it in his bird room. But for "Sub Rosa's" information I may say it was none of those birds he mentions, and that those fanciers spoke well of some of them, more especially of the yellow hens. Therefore I think that even "Sub Rosa" will admit that Norwich fanciers know something; and I may also say that the description they gave as to the type of the winner in this class corresponded with the published report. "Sub Rosa" says Mr. Woollard seems to be the leader of this "little band of pessimists." Well, sir, if by giving my views as to the type and quality of the Norwich Plainhead to the members of a society at their request is being the leader, so it must be. "Sub Rosa" says Mr. Woollard must understand that the Norwich Plainhead has undergone a great change this last ten years. Certainly "Sub Rosa" is speaking the truth for once. It has undergone a change, but in some instances not altogether for the better. He says that in the N.P.C. standard 25 points are given for head and neck alone. Well, I suppose a society has a right to please themselves, but "Sub Rosa" can't make me believe that the N.P.C. would consent for a judge to place one of the Yorkshire type or of the pigeon pouter type in front of even a small typical Norwich. At the same time, did not fanciers know that a good head and neck are required until all these points were allowed for them by the N.P.C.? Some people seem to think all that is wanted on the show bench is head and neck, and that you might keep the other parts at home. "Sub Rosa" says some fanciers may have overlooked a few minor points in their eagerness for the head, and he admits that it is through so many points being allowed for same by the N.P.C. But what does he call minor points? Surely not type and quality. If so, what are we to distinguish one variety from another by? Neither can he mean short, compact, and well balanced wings and tail, which in my opinion are quite as hard or even harder to obtain than good head and neck. If not, then why is it so few are to be seen at even the best of the shows which "Sub Rosa" writes about? I would like to ask "Sub Rosa" which is the most unsightly, a bird with head and neck a bit small, but with wings and tail as I have just stated above, or one with good head and neck, but with bad wings and long hinge tail? Then, again, would "Sub Rosa" have us believe that the birds have all good heads that win under certain judges to-day—that is to say, good heads for Norwich Plainheads? Why, some of them are browed sufficiently (with body feather to match) that they would not disgrace themselves in the Crestbred classes. I am quite aware that we have some good judges, but I am also aware there are certain others who would place a bird first simply because it may have happened to win in moderate company under Mr. So and So, and the pity is that many fanciers who exhibit away from home don't or can't attend the shows to see for themselves. If they did, I am of opinion, they would select the judges they intended to show under, as no doubt some do that are able to visit the shows. "Sub Rosa" says he did not attend the Palace show, but that he had seen most of the winners before, and in stronger competition. Now, sir, this seems a bit funny, because if he did not see them at the Palace show, how can he say that he had seen them in stronger competition? Surely he doesn't mean to say that the competition was stronger simply because the classes might be bigger? In my opinion, it is the company the bird is in which makes the competition strong. A bird may romp home in a class of 40, but may have a hard job to get there in a very small class. In conclusion, I would like to ask "Sub Rosa" if he should have anything more to say to me personally to please find the courage to sign his name, and not hide behind a nom-de-plume, and also to bear in mind that just as he considers he has a right to his own opinion, there are several thousand breeders in Norwich who have the same right to their opinions. I am sure there is not one who would wish to see anything done which would be detrimental to the Norwich Plainhead. A. WOOLLARD.

Sir,—I could not follow Mr. Woollard's, or his fellow-clubites' remarks regarding the birds in question. I think, as "Sub Rosa" remarks, that if the Norwich breeders were to try and breed some like the birds in question, instead of censuring the judges, they would be doing more good to themselves and the Fancy at large. Are they doing much to uphold the good name that Norwich has held in the past as being the home of the champion Norwich Canary? Looking through some of the principal show catalogues, I do not see many exhibitors from Norwich or where many first and specials have gone down Norwich way. In conclusion, I venture to think they must not forget the fact that they have got to move with the times. I wish the Norwich breeders every success and a prolific season.

Hand-rearing Young Magpies: A Warning.

Sir,—These birds are certainly one of the easiest to hand-rear, and they may be fed on nearly anything. A case has just come under my ken, where a nest of young were brought and shown me which had been hand-fed for seven or eight days. All of them had been fine, strong birds, and had been well fed on "lights," raw meat, and barley meal, but all of them were badly affected with cramp in their legs. They could not stand up at all, and did look a sorry lot. All went like that in a single night. I could not at first account for it, but on making further enquiries how and where they were kept, the owner at last fetched me a large pail which he had kept them in, and on examining it and its contents I found the stench strong. There was a large lump of old carpet at the bottom, with sawdust on the top. They had not been cleaned out for a week, and the contents were sodden from the excrement, and this caused a dampness which had affected them in their legs. I recommended them to be put in a large box cage and kept out of doors to see if that would revive them, but I certainty think that they are now too far gone for any treatment. I should strongly advise anyone who goes in for hand-rearing these, or any birds, to keep them scrupulously clean, and above all, dry

OLDHAM C.B.A.

First feather show held June 15, at the Textile Dining Rooms, Shaw Road. Entries were not quite up to the usual standard owing to the bad luck which some of our fanciers have been having, but taking things all round we came out fine. Mr. Barras, Rochdale, placed the awards, and I am sure they gave satisfaction all round. (From the catalogue sent it appears that the principal winners were: Lizards: Steeple; Lancs.: Fitton, Nor.: Sharples, Furness, Clough, Hall; Yorks.: Wadsworth, Addison, Brooke; A.O.V.: Whyatt; Brit.: Steeple; best bird, G. Fitton; second best, J. Sharples.).—Jas. Cope, Sec.

LEYTON C.B.A.

First feather show, held Grays Park Hall, June 8. Owing to so many members having bad luck with the breeding, there was not the usual number of exhibits. The quality was very good, especially in Yorks. Mr. Bennett won special for best bird in show, and Mr. King special for runner up. There were some grand birds in the British classes, Mr. Pettet's Twite and Mr. Oliver's Hawfinch and Starling being particularly noticeable. Mr. J. Robson judged.

WARRINGTON C.B.S.

Nest feather show, held June 15. There was only a moderate entry owing to several of the members having done so badly, but a few very nice birds were staged, notably the yellow Border shown by Mr. J. Barnett, which ought to be heard of again. Mr. J. D. Leigh placed the awards to everyone's satisfaction. Yorks. Yell.: 1, sp, 2, Hardy; 3, Rice. Buff: 1, 2, Hardy; 3, Rice. Nor. NORTH MANCHESTER C.B.S.

Annual show held at the new quarters, Balmoral Hotel, June 15th, 1912. Entries numbered 76, a great improvement on last season, and quality was very good all round. The room in which the show was held for the first time is an exceptionally well lighted one of good dimensions, and eminently suited for the purpose. The offer of medals to be won for most points throughout season no doubt brought out more entries. We venture to advise the committee to put some open classes for our November show, and advertise it in "Cage Birds." We feel sure the entries would increase. Fine weather favoured the event, and the show was well patronised, and a few new members elected. The committee are expecting a balance on the right side. Specials were won by Messrs. J. Pike, J. Deakin, W. H. Tansey, in amateur section, and Messrs. F. Speakman, J. Robinson and J. T. Brown, in novice section; J. H. Woods securing special for best novice bird. Judging was in the hands of Mr. Berwick, who gave general satisfaction. (According to the catalogue sent, the principal winners were: Yorks., Pike; Bord., Coles; Novice Yorks., Speakman, Self, Brown, Robinson, Lowe, Brit., Firth, Ball, Robinson.)—W. H. Tansey.

CREWE O.S.

Nest feather show, held June 15, when some 80 to 90 exhibits turned up. There is a cup and medal competition for aggregate points during the year; there was a very close run by J. W. Lawton, T. L. Hancock, F. L. Cooper, and S. Potts, and much interest will be centred around the old show in consequence. Some of the younsters showed great promise, but we would like to have seen more of them. Let us hope the next round will be a greater success. The hybrid class was a good one, and the British birds very good specimens. Mr. E. Jaycott carried out his duties as secretary ably and had all in good order. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged and apparently gave every satisfaction.

NOR. YELL. (6): 1, 2, 3, Cooper, good trio. BUFF (6): 1, ", Cooper, former largest, fine head and well filled in from neck and shoulder; 3, Taylor, very cobby, like a good lot. ROYAL CORNWALL (Penzance).

The Royal Cornwall Show, held at Penzance on June 12 and 13, was a great success, both for entries and attendance, while the splendid weather helped the event to pass off in delightful fashion. The exhibits were good, comprising many really grand specimens, including some well-known winners. Seeing that the breeding season is on, the birds were all looking well, in fact, in lovely fettle. The committee did splendidly in looking after the welfare of the exhibits, especially the long distance birds, which had every attention on arrival and despatch. The cup for most points was won by Messrs. Rowe and Richards, with 86 points, and the special for best Canary in show by Mr. T. H. Boundy, with a grand yellow Yorkshire, while that for best bird other than Canary fell to Mr. F. Collins with his noted six-point Goldie Mule "Sunbeam." Special best British, Messrs. Stephens and Gaved, with a grand Chough, in lovely fettle. The stewards were all that could be desired, and did everything possible for the welfare of the birds. The Hon. Sec., Mr. Bodinnar got through his duties in a masterly manner and is a very popular official. Mr. Robson judged.

STIRLING AND DIS. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held June 1, in McDonald's Temperance Hotel, the new meeting-room. Mr. Bishop presided over a good attendance of fanciers. Prize cards were settled and a few new members added to our list. Next meeting July 6, to make arrangements for catalogue of forthcoming show.—W. Clubb, Sec.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held June 8, Mr. G. Barker in the chair. Fair attendance of members. Decided to hold a draw in connection with annual open show, and that the prizes be drawn for a fortnight before Christmas. Will members please let us know what they intend giving towards the same at next meeting. Agreed, that we ask the ladies who placed the cards in the industrial classes last year to act in the same capacity this year.—Lindley and Marsh.

PARTICK AND DISTRICT C.B.C.

Monthly meeting, held in Trades Halls, June 7, Mr. Park, President, in the chair. A fair attendance of members present. A letter from Mr. Bowman, secretary Glasgow and District C.B.C., re holding another open show, met with the approval of all present, and we agreed to give it our support if it should be held. Classification for annual show fixed; also judges for same elected. It was decided to have a drive to Campsey Glen on June 30. Tickets may be had from members of committee.—J. Henderson, Sec.

OPEN NORWICH PLAINHEAD C.C.

LONGTON C.B.S.

Monthly meeting Castle Inn, June 11, Mr. Lovatt in chair, before a large attendance of members. A grand list of specials is to be competed for; best Yell. Nor., Buff, Yell. Yorks., Buff, Brit., Mule or Hybrid, best young bird, most points gained by members joining since open show, 1911, most points in show, most points in Brit., etc., etc. There are 19 classes; 2 open classes for members of North Staff. societies, held at Swan Hotel. Members requested to attend special meeting July 25, when several important questions want deciding.—Geo. Lea, Corres. Sec.

GLASGOW (West End) C.B.C.

Monthly meeting held Co-operative Hall, St. George's Cross, June 14, Mr. C. Campbell presiding over a fair attendance. The Committee's recommendation of classes for the annual members' show was gone over and adopted, the total number being 69, an increase of three on last year. As this classification covers all that can be desired for a members' show, the committee trust that the members will made the show a record one. Decided to grant three specials from the club funds, at the First Feather show, viz., 5s. for most points open, 2s. 6d. for most points novice, and 2s. 6d. for best bird. Arrangements were completed for the ramble to Craigallian Estate on June 15. Members please note that the remainder of annual subscription for the year is now due.—W. Proudfoot, Sec. and Treas.

ENGLISH AND WELSH BORDER FANCY C.C.

The last two cups have been sent to the winners, Hopper Bros. and Dr. Bowes respectively. The first batch of medals will be sent out this week, and the rest as soon as possible. A large number of back subscriptions remain unpaid. I wish members would be more prompt in this matter; they would greatly assist the work of the Society. All societies wishing for our patronage should apply at once, as patronage will be allotted in July. The terms are that 7 classes be provided, to include all varieties of the Border, and that the judge be resident in England or Wales. The Border is now such a popular variety that no up-to-date show is complete without the "wee gems," and they are generally the best paying classes. Any breeder of the Border wishing to join should do so at once, and participate in the election of officers for next year. The new list of members will be compiled next month, and voting papers sent out to all who have intimated their intention of becoming members and to all old members who have paid their subscriptions. Subs. 2s. 6d. per annum. The medals for champions and novices will again be offered at each show. These medals are a special Club design and very beautiful specimens of the jewellers' art. All information from S. Hadwin, Sec., 56, Richmond Row, Liverpool.

Wilshaw, Hon. Sec.

NEWPORT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held headquarters June 13, a large number of members turning up, presided over by Mr. C. Richards. Unanimously decided to reduce annual subscription from 6s. to 4s., and the scope of the society to embrace all Monmouthshire. Any county members wishing to join will just be in time by joining now to compete for members' specials at annual show on November 6 and 7. Decided to have a club ramble on June 30. Any member or friend wishing to join us, I shall be pleased to supply him with all particulars. Three new members were enrolled.—John Hammett, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting and table show, held June 11, Mr. Crawhall presided. Decided to allot patronage at the second meeting in July. Societies please note that we require five classes in championship section and 3 in novice. The question of colour food and show cages was gone into. Members to let Mr. Crawhall know what quantities they will require, as soon as possible. Mr. Lane, Anfield Plain, was elected a member. Next table show fixed for July 3. Judge, Mr. R. Tindale. The table show was fairly well supported, and the quality was above the average. Mr. Crawhall judged novice and Messrs. Cattell and Scott the champion classes. CHAMPION, CLS.: 1, Dix; 2, 3, Crawhall; 4, Hutler. TKD. OR VARIEG.: 1, Crawhall; 2, Hutler; 3, Mather; 4, Dix. NOVICE, CLS.: 1, Smith; 2, Gracie; 3, Cattell; 4, Scott. TKD. LANCASHIRE AND LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held at Glossop, July 9th, at the Weavers' meeting room. We had a first rate turn up of members from Oldham, Manchester, Middleton, Rochdale, Rawtenstall, etc. Mr. Joe Hampshire was elected chairman. Chief business, show patronage. Decided we give Manchester and L.C.B.A. our full patronage. Decided we confirm Mr. Naden as judge of our sections at Sheffield O.S., to which show we have also given our patronage. It was left with secretary to arrange with a few other societies. We had great pleasure in once again welcoming as members Messrs. Barker, Clegg, and John Hamer, names recalling happy memories in the Lancashire and Lizard Fancy of the past, and hope to see them well to the front in the future. Next meeting at Rawtenstall, on July 21st, when Mrs. Rukin has promised to entertain all members attending to dinner and tea, Mr. S. R. Compston kindly promising to see we had sometime in the fowl line all being well. As this is the first meeting at Rawtenstall, I trust we shall have a good turn up. After the meeting a photograph was taken of the members and friends present by Mr. Batty, Glossop; copies can be had at 1s. each. The secretary was instructed to convey to Messrs. John Garner and W. P. Barnes a vote of sympathy in their severe illnesses.—John Rukin, Hon. Sec.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.A.

Meeting held June 13, the President, T. H. Harrison in the chair. Judge for June 27, Mr. J. G. Clarke; July 25, judge to be elected later. Young stock and annual show, October 24 and Jan. 8; Mr. G. Gardner. Decided to charge 2d. admission to young stock show. The June and July shows admission free. New members elected: Miss M. Heavens, Messrs. G. Corfe, W. C. Branch, L. C. Shergold, J. A. Cobb, J. Rudge, W. J. Watson, and A. Rogers. The conditions under which the Baron de Forest challenge cup should be competed for were voted upon. Decided that each section should compete for it once each year. The order was balloted for, the result being that the turn of cage birds will be in 1919 and 1920. The cup to be for best exhibit in the section. Mr. J. G. Simmonds kindly promised to present a medal to winners of the cup to commemorate the win. Re monthly shows, a resolution was carried that any entries received too late for insertion in catalogue be returned to sender, and that entries for all shows close first post Monday morning preceding the show. H. Day collection: Amount previously acknowledged, £1 5s.; since collected, Messrs. Harrison 2s. 6d., Lloyd 2s. 6d., Wellum 1s., Burton 1s. 3d., Stammers 1s. 6d. Exhibits sent in gift class by Messrs. Huggins, Collings, Checkfield, Rev. Soames, Reed, Austin, Sykes, Hawkes, Parker and Baker, were sold for £1 1s. 6d.; total £2 17s. 9d. Mr. H. Day is still unwell. Further donations will be gladly received, no matter how small, by W. Maxey, Hon. Sec, 76, James Place, Poplar, E.

SOUTH WALES AND MON. FED.

Second meeting, held at the Victoria Hotel, Pontypridd, June 15. There were 21 delegates present. Six societies were enrolled which had not been represented before, namely, Resolven, Pentrebach, Penrhiwceiber, Machen, Abertillery, and the Mid Rhondda C.B.S. There are now two Cage Bird Societies (Swansea and Mid Rhondda) and 18 other societies affiliated. This speaks well for the future career of the Federation, and the better working of societies during the show season. There are a few more societies in this area outside the Federation, at any rate, which have not yet applied for affiliation, and we make a special appeal to them to seriously consider their position. The fee which has been fixed is very small, 5s. annually, and we are sure that the little sacrifices during the year will be amply repaid at the end of the show season. It was resolved at the meeting that the affiliation fee should be sent to the Secretary, A. A. Gordon McLucas, 48, Rosser Street, Maesycoed, Pontypridd, on or before June 29th this year, that is, within 14 days. Rules were drafted, and an Executive Council elected, viz., Messrs. E. James (Treorchy), W. J. Davies (Treharris), who was also elected vice-chairman of Federation, A. Guppy (Cardiff), F. C. Williams (Swansea), Bevan (Mumbles), Brown (Pentrebach), Jones (Resolven), Davis (Penrhiwceiber), George (Swansea), Gascoyne (Llanelly), A. H. Legg (Mid Rhondda), D. Griffiths (Llanelly), and officers. After this year the officers and Executive Council will be nominated by the societies, nominations to be sent to the Secretary one month before annual meeting, on Whit Monday. The result of the ballot will be given at this annual meeting. Societies are also instructed to send in their dates in time for the annual meeting. Arrangements with judges, etc., should not be made until after that date, so that if two or more societies fix upon the same date, they can be altered with little inconvenience.—A. A. Gordon McLucas, Sec.

DARLINGTON C.B.S.

Meeting held May 20, at Labour Hall. Classification for first feather show was gone into, and it was agreed to have nine classes, as follow: 2 Yorks., 2 Nor., 1 A.O.V. Canary, Mule, or Hybrid, and four British. To be held headquarters, July 6. Birds staged at 3.—H. Todd, Hon. Sec.

CUMNOCK C.B.S.

Meeting held Co-op Hall, Auchlinleck, June 15, Mr. Hinuear in the chair. Judges appointed for show, November 30. Bord., Mr. Kirkhope, Sanquhar; remainder, Mr. Dewar, Edinburgh. Circulars read re closed rings. Decided that members please themselves. Question of ramble was discussed, but was dropped till another year.—J. Nutt, Sec.

BURSLEM C.B.S.

Meeting held June 13, at headquarters, Mr. R. Smith in chair. Business completed re nest feather show, June 29, (sixteen classes) four open to members societies in Stoke-on-Trent area. A special in each class. All members' specials are for points. Birds staged one o'clock. Mr. Theobald and S. Williams (Burslem) elected members.—L. James, Sec.

LIVERPOOL B.B.A.

Monthly meeting, held Oldham Hall, June 13, Mr. Handley in the chair. This was the first of our young night shows, and, judging from the number present, they look like being a success. The next is July 11, 20 classes, when all visitors are invited. Admission free. Birds staged 8 p.m. Five new members were nominated for membership. Will members note all points gained at these shows count for season specials. A number of remarks and questions were asked on Mr. Cutmore's lecture of the previous month, a lot of members having tried his method of feeding, etc., and they all appear to have had good results from same.—J. Lloyd, Assist. Sec.

DERBY C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held Derwent Hotel. Arrangements for first feather show were made. Schedules ready next meeting night. Members will go by brake to Melbourne, July 13, starting from Royal Hotel at 1.45. Return fare, 1s. 6d. It is hoped that as many ladies and gentlemen friends will go as wish to obtain an enjoyable day's outing. The beauties of Melbourne are too well known to need any description. Friends in Melbourne have promised to present some baskets of strawberries for specials. Will members wishing colour food see Mr. H. Bamsey, 7, Society Place Derby? Members requested to attend next meeting, as we have some important business in connection with open show in October.—Wharam and Bamsey, Secs.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Monthly meeting and table show, held June 13, at Wentworth Cafe, Pinstone Street, Mr. Jones, President, in the chair, the room being packed. Business was mostly in relation to nest feather show, Montgomery Hall, June 29. Several members promised specials for most points in each section most points in show, and most entries. Entries, headquarters, June 24, 8 to 9. Birds to be staged before 2 o'clock, instead of one o'clock, as printed in syllabus. Ramble fixed for July 13, to Edwinstowe. All those who desire to get colour food through the society should let the secretary know. Mr. J. Bestwick was elected a member. Next meeting July 4; a lecture given by Mr. W. Bingham on Colour Feeding. All fanciers are welcome.—J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting held June 10, at St. Marylebone Church Institute, 60, Paddington Street, Mr. W. Shepherd in the chair; Mr. H. W. Dickinson, Hon. Sec., and 25 members present. Two new members were nominated. A letter was read from the secretary of Cage Birds Federation re annual show, and after discussion it was decided to support same, suggestions being offered to the delegates to place before the committee of management. There was to have been a lecture on "Colour Feeding," but Mr. Sandiford unfortunately not being able to attend, Mr. J. Burton drew up a series of questions on the subject, and a very interesting discussion took place in answer to them. The chairman announced the presentation to the society of the very fine collection of wild seeds and berries collected by the late Mr. W. Page, which took 1st prize at L.C.B.A. show last year. A unanimous vote of thanks was passed to Mrs. Page for her kind gift. A vote of thanks to chairman concluded the meeting.—Fred Thynne, Assist. Hon. Sec.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Monthly meeting, held at headquarters, Sydenham Hotel, June 12. It was very pleasing to see Chairman Willmott occupying his usual place after two months absence. Three new names were submitted to ballot, Messrs. Andrews, Johnson and Dipple, and all elected. This makes the total full members on books 56. The Secretary went very fully into the business of the winter shows, presenting an estimate of the cost of running an open show. His estimate was that with the members subscribing at least 2s. 6d. each, a loss of £3 would result, with entries totalling 400. The position of the room for the show was not good, the only main line being the G. W. Rly. The members went into the matter very carefully, and it was finally decided that the society have the usual winter members' show on December 28, if the room could be obtained. The Chairman then spoke on the result, which he said to his mind was quite a proper one. This continual loss to the funds of the various societies through having open shows not only killed the spirit of a good fancier, but in many cases smashed the society up. It was far better to hold the useful members show with a capital judge, and see a profit, even if only £2 as last show. It had been said by one member that these continual members' shows would never bring members, but perhaps drive them from the society; he strongly disagreed with such a remark. It had proved in our society that the fine progress had brought members from all parts of Birmingham and district, as far as Castle Bromwich on the one side, and Solihull on the other. We had no better proof that fanciers could see we were catering in the right way, and that we should learn to walk before we started to run. (Applause.) The society was learning to walk in the correct style; good members and over £10 balance at the bank was a nice walking pace. When we had a run in the form of an open show exhibitors would see that the South Birmingham was catering on a scale never before offered to fanciers by a Birmingham society. It was left with the Secretary to get judges for the winter show, also if possible to obtain another room for the show, so as the children could come to same. The chairman in closing the meeting asked all those present to assist the novice in the coming young bird shows by lending cages. Please send plenty of entries, and don't forget the date, June 26th.—J. Sheppard, Sec., [illegible] Road.

Hand-feeding "Forceps."

Sent by W. H. Teat, Ancaster, near Grantham.

The accompanying sketch illustrates a useful idea for fanciers who hand-rear softbills, such as Thrushes, Larks, Blackbirds, etc. With this worms and other live food can be given through the cage wires, and thus save handling either bird or food. Obtain a stout piece of cage wire, about 10in. long. Bend this to the shape of the sketch. Then take a hammer and flatten out the ends, and finish off by filing the edges smooth to prevent injury to the bird when feeding. I might add I always use a Norwich show or similar cage when hand-rearing young birds, owing to the short distance from front to back, which is very desirable.—W. H. Teat.

No. 599.
A Method of Preventing Egg Smashing.

Sent by J. Stevenson, 38, McNeil Street, South Side, Glasgow.

My idea is to prevent birds breaking their eggs. Procure a glass jam or jelly jar and fill same with bran or meal. Next get a common felt nest and cut out a small hole in the bottom. Place nest-pan into nest-board in the usual manner, then place glass jar in position directly below nest-pan, so that when eggs are laid they will run right through hole in nest-pan into the glass jar. My reason for procuring a glass jar is that one can see when eggs are laid, without disturbing birds by pulling out jar, as you would have to do with an earthenware jar. Many eggs can be saved by this means that otherwise would be broken, as I have proved this season myself. The eggs thus laid can be given to a trusted hen to hatch. I trust this idea will be useful to some of the young beginners.—James Stevenson.

Fanciers Enjoying the Country.

ANFIELD, EVERTON AND DIST. C.B. SOCIETY ON RAMBLE.

The first ramble of the season took place June 2nd, our destination being Knowsley Park and Woods. Although the weather was very threatening, a very good company assembled. After examination of our special permit, signed by the Earl of Derby, we were duly ushered into this magnificent park and grounds. Sauntering along the main drive, we heard the songs of numerous species of birds. We were fortunate in having that well-known botanist and honorary member, Mr. Geo. Barker, with us, who is also one of the best known authorities on wild birds in this part of the country. Along a by-road we heard young calling out, but were unable to find them, being completely baffled. At last Mr. Harrison espied a very small hole in a stone wall, from whence he thought the sound came, and on moving a large stone, low and behold a nest of nine young Blue Tits, about 10 days old. It was a big surprise to most of us, not having seen so many in a nest before; not a few would like to experience the same luck in the bird room. In the woods Mr. Baker was in great demand. First one and then another wanted to know what this and that song was; Chaffinch, Lesser Redpoll, Greenfinch, Linnet, Thrnsh, Twite, etc. We now encounter numerous species of birds, amongst them the Willow Warbler, Chiff-Chaff, Spotted Flycatcher, Blackbird, Starling, Wren, and Reed Bunting. A halt was made, when our photographic artist espied a beautiful spot in which to "take" the merry party. This being accomplished, we are off again. Passing through the gardens, we had an "eye-opener." What a grand place! As we enter the woods again we come across nests of eggs aud young galore, a privilege not granted to many. Our friends, Barker and Wade named the various eggs, which included the Lapwing, Missel Thrush, Yellow Bunting, Hedge Sparrow, Blue Tit, Lesser Whitethroat, and other kinds too numerous to mention (we must not forget the pheasant and partridge eggs). The song on the trees above, as we moved quietly along, was almost deafening, but melodious withal. Then we enter a very large area of bushes and tall grasses, amongst which we notice plantain, shepherd's purse, sheeps sorrel, dock, knap weed, and lots of other kinds that British bird men are so fond of. It now commenced a drizzling rain, so we decided to quit this lovely place. Mr. Leatherbarrow invited us to the hotel in the beautiful little village of Knowsley, four miles away, but to the chagrin of all, we found when we arrived that it had only a six days' license. However, we received the comforting remark from our friend Leatherbarrow that it was only seven miles to the "Farmers Arms," Huyton! Well, there was nothing to do but to reel it off as quickly as possible. Ultimately we arrived, and were entertained to one of the most welcome lunches we have ever enjoyed. The party very soon cleared the tables of roast beef and dainties generously provided by Mr. Wright. Getting into the conveyances again, we arrived at headquarters at 8.30 p.m. Everyone had so thoroughly enjoyed themselves that they would not miss the next ramble, rain or no rain. We thank those members who made the journey from Wallasey (six miles) to join us.—R. B. Wright, Hon. Sec.

TORBAY O.S. SPEND A GREAT DAY AT NEWTON ABBOT.

Annual ramble, Juue 5, to Newton Abbot. We were met at Newton by Mr. F. Redwood and Mr. R. W. Webber, and started right away for Bradley Woods, famous for beauty, birds, etc. We entered the woods by Baker's Park, where Mr. Webber, who kindly consented to act as guide, knowiug almost every inch of ground for miles around, pointed out the Sand Martins flying low among the Swallows. It turned out the loveliest weather we have enjoyed for years past. Our first discovery was a Blackcap's nest containing four young. The next brood found were also Blackcaps, five young fledged. Many nests were easily found. Two broods of Greenfinches were seen feeding together in a field near Bradley Manor. Near here we entered a lane that leads to Ogwell Mill, and were joined by the keeper of Bradley Woods, Mr. T. H. Webber, a brother of R. W., and, unlike most keepers, our friend carried a camera. This was another of R. W.'s surprises, as this meant we were to have a free range. After making a call at the Mill House we crossed a meadow, and again entered the woods, where the keenness of the brothers Webber was a treat to observe, as they could imitate the call of so many birds and call them, so that we could see them. We heard the Wood Wren and Green Woodpecker, while the song of the Jenny Wren and Blackcaps was frequently heard. Broods of many kinds were seen, including Hawfinches, Bullfinches, Chaffinches, Greenfinches, Nuthatches, Robins, Hedge Sparrows, Tits, and Chiffchaffs. A row of four of the latter were huddled close together on a branch above our heads, and made a charming picture. These we should have missed had it not been for the distressing noise made by one of the parents. We traversed the whole length of the woods to Waybridge. Just near here the woods rose to a great height, and Mr. R. W. suggested a climb to the top, where the old ivy-covered stump was to be seen that last year contained three nests—a Bullfinch's, a Robin's, and an Owl's. Only R. W., Mr. J. Bastard, and myself undertook it, and I must confess that if there had been prizes for reaching the top, I should have secured third. We got to the old stump, but there was not a single nest this year. We came to the top of a limestone quarry, where R. W. pointed out where T. H. was lowered over to secure Kestrel's eggs a week earlier. We came across a few dead young birds, a very young cock Hawfinch, two Jackdaws, and a Blackbird, also the feathers of a young Blackbird, which reminded us of the Kestrel Hawk. We soon reached the bottom by the quarry, and noticed a large quantity of young teazle plants on our way down. This, R. W. reminded us, was splendid feed later on for Goldfinches, a brood of which had been successfully reared and flown in the kitchen garden of Monwell, where R. W. is employed as gardener. We now made tracks for the Mill House, as we were beginning to feel peckish. Our hostess, Mrs. Kennard, provided a splendid repast, Devonshire clotted cream being much in evidence; 15 sat down, including our genial chairman, Mr. A. N. Innes, and Mr. W. Hodge. After tea a couple of humorous songs were sung by Mr. Fred Gidley, one a most appropriate one, "We must go home to-night." This reminded us that it was time to be moving, so we quickly faced the camera; Mr. R. T. Webber exposed a couple of plates, and hopes to have a photo worthy of reproduction. The party now broke up, the younger members heading for the town of Newton Abbot, while the older ones accepted the keeper's invitation to visit Bradley House and grounds. Having passed the lodge, we turned in a side path to the kitchen garden, where we saw a Spotted Flycatcher sitting in her nest in the first wall tree (pear) inside the garden. We thought this exceptional for so shy a bird, as every time Mr. Webber goes from the lodge to the garden he passes quite close to this nest. We next went to the Hill field adjoining these grounds, where a most magnificent view of the woods and Dartmoor Hills is to be had. Time now compelled us to think of returning, and after one of the most enjoyable rambles we have ever had we reached Paignton about 9.30.—J. N. Jeffery, sec.

OBITUARY.

Mr. Wm. Plumbridge.

It is with sincere regret that we hear of the death of Mr. W. Plumbridge, the brother of the esteemed hon. sec. of the National B.B. and M.C. Mr. Wm. Plumbridge was not a very frequent exhibitor, being principally known as the owner of the celebrated Chough, once the property of Mr. Fulljames, and which afterwards belonged, we believe, to Mr. McQuiston, in whose ownership it continued its winning career. Certainly one of the best Choughs ever exhibited. Our friend who has passed away, and his brother, were inseparable chums as well as brothers, and we tender Mr. A. Plumbridge our heartfelt sympathy in his irreparable loss. Mr. Plumbridge's death followed a very serious operation.

Mr. S. Hamblyn (Southampton).

Southampton is the poorer to-day of a fancier whose knowledge of Canaries and Finches was almost unequalled, writes Mr. C. Parmiter. His heart suddenly collapsed, and thus ended the career of a man whose whole life had been given to the Fancy. Mr. S. Hamblyn's age was 71. Being the late secretary of the Ornithological Society, and having intimately known him for years, I speak with no little pride of his many achievements. His end came with terrible suddenness. I and my son-in-law went round about 3 o'clock on June 16 to have a look at the birds of another good fancier, Dr. Weeks. We had not been long there before our friend Mr. Hamblyn appeared, and up to 5 o'clock we inspected the birds and dogs, chatted merrily, and spent a jolly afternoon. We all left with a hearty good-bye; Mr. Hamblyn to all appeared in the best of health. He then went to a friend's house, where about 8 p.m. he suddenly sank from his chair to the floor. Medical aid was summoned, but the doctor's skill was of no avail. I mourn his loss, and sympathise with his wife and relatives; his memory is dear to me, having known him for nearly 30 years. [illegible] was very successful at Bournemouth and [illegible] mouth, also at the Palace, with a light variegated mule he bred himself, and which he gave to his wife some while since. Muling was his pet hobby, and I say it would be a difficult matter to find a man with such a knowledge of Finches as he possessed. He was always ready to help any show with entries, and was generous to a degree in his subscription to any bird society in the town requiring it. He also worked well for the success of them all. He leaves behind him a name that will live for many generations amongst the fanciers of Southampton, and elsewhere. Mr. Hamblyn was highly respected by all who knew him and particularly by the fanciers in the town. Our sympathies go out to his relatives in this their hour of mourning. He leaves behind him a wife, two sons, and a daughter (married), and I trust the sympathy here given may be some slight solace to them in this his sudden departure from amongst us.

SYMPATHY.

This remarkably tame Goldfinch, belonging to Miss Rogers, is the admiration of all who have seen it. The same bird and his fair mistress figured in the fine photograph, also taken by Mr. Rogers, which formed the frontispiece of our Birthday Number supplement.

WITH CAMERA AND PEN.

A NOTED GREENFINCH.

This splendid specimen of one of our commonest Finches has an excellent winning record, including seconds at the Crystal Palace and Horticultural Hall Shows. It is owned by Mr. P. H. Harris (Balham).

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

14 Days' Free Trial.

¶The most sanitary and up-to-date method ever invented.

START THE SEASON WELL.

In order to give every bird breeder an opportunity of testing the "Filup" Feeder, we are sending out all orders on 14 days' approval. If you were unfortunate last season in losing your young birds through your hens not feeding, now is your chance, to rear all birds hatched, at a very small outlay. It will repay you a hundred times over in a single season. Send P.O. value 1/1, and you will receive the "Filup" Feeder by return. If you are not satisfied send it back within 14 days, and we'll return your money.

If you are satisfied, keep it and tell your friends how to save their young birds.

The "Filup" Feeder was supplied last year to fanciers all over Great Britain, and also in India, Australia, etc., etc.

The "Filup" Feeder has saved and reared the best birds of many fanciers, and has been given many unsolicited testimonials.

Mr. G. L. SAMPSON, Hon. Secretary Stocksbridge and District Cage Bird Society, writes: "Enclosed please find P.O. value 3/3 for three of your 'Filup' Feeders. The one I had from you last year was a great success. All my best youngsters were reared with its aid. Two of those now ordered are for friends who saw mine in use last season."

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world. They make the gamest Linnets ever carried to a contest for length turns, and form; they stand alone, and for voice they have no equal. This class of bird have won the English Derby, and all English championships, and the world's greatest contest; one Linnet being sold for £16. I have refused £4 for a Linnet just lately. All the recognised judges say they are equal to the German Roller. Many thanks to Mr. Dobson, secretary, and members of the Castleford Linnet Club for having bought so many Linnets from me. I wish them all every success; also Leeds Linnet Clubs. They are at working-men's prices, 1/-, 1/6, and a few extra gems, 2/-; all members of Linnet Clubs send for these birds. I have the best Larks I have had for years, singing with full loud voice, indoors or out, 2/6 ,3/6, and one, a gem, that can't be beat, 4/6. They are all perfect in feather and singing a treat; hundreds of British and foreign birds in stock no waiting; postcard before birds. Only honest dealing done with me, so send to your old friend: Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

J. FENN, ISLEHAM

ON receipt of 1/6 I will send securely packed, with food and moisture, the largest and loudest singing cock Skylark ever seen or heard, like a Thrush, splendid shop attraction and show specimen; or with his new joiner-made cage, 4/6; approval willingly. Including free my valuable feeding secret, which keeps them in full song ten months out of twelve: Woods, Cross-st., Dunstable.

TO Lark fanciers: special select singing cock Skylark, splendid shop attraction, can be heard 200 yards; I will match him to sing any Lark in this country; he is a real loud contest bird, and been trained for that purpose; steady and a fine specimen of a real Dunstable Lark, 1/6, approval anywhere, Hear, and see, what you are buying; no fresh-caught rubbish; secret of feeding free. Hundreds of testimonials unsolicited: George Holt, Dunstable.

of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 and 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 25 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, H. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner, showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Noticed The breeding of mealworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., or from any of our agents. CHEAP, CHARMING FOREIGNERS.

Such, in short, are Budgerigars, which are among the most beautiful and lively of man's feathered pets. The breeding of "Budgies" is a work of patience, but, owing to the possibilities in the production of varieties, it is very profitable. Difficulties there are in the way, many and serious, but they can be overcome. Food, and the construction of cage and aviary are very important items. Full particulars as to proper feeding, caging and management in captivity, with hints on sexing, breeding, moulting and exhibiting will be found in "Nutshell" No. 13, "The Budgerigar," post free 2½, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London,

WAXBILLS. WAXBILLS.

Golden-breasted, Orange-checked, Grey and St. Helena Waxbills, favourites with foreign bird-keepers. One cannot fully describe the beauty of these little birds, which make a pretty spectacle disporting themselves in the aviary among the green plant life. They thrive best in an aviary, and this is easily and cheaply made if you follow the directions given by Wesley T. Page, in "Nutshell" No. 20, along with all the other hints necessary, if you would be successful in keeping and breeding these lively and vivacious pets; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

Wild-Bird Life.

Notes on the Nuthatch.

Many of our wild birds are to us familiar eryday objects. They are plentiful and unt the precincts of man's dwelling, so at our gardens are the homes of many ndsome and tuneful songsters. But to get closer acquaintance with what we may rm our rarest species, we have to wander er field or downland, to linger by hedge- w and quiet woodland, or spend an hour the water-side. Many birds we are accus- med to call rare simply because we so ldom see them; the species may be fairly mmon.

The Nuthatch is one of these, and while e writer was recently enjoying an hour or o in the woods, the sight of one induced m to watch it carefully. The Nuthatch an active little bird, and in many of its tions closely resembles the Tits; like the ttle wanderers, it is seldom to be und in the same place in consecutive sea- ns. It is a tree loving subject, for on them seeks most of its food. It explores every ack and crevice of the bark, sometimes rking from side to side, then perhaps in spiral course, occasionally head downwards, which position it appears quite as much at me as in any other. By careful manage- nt one can get quite close to this busy tle forager; he is not by any means shy, t at the same time sufficiently wary to ow when danger threatens.

Although in a sense a creeper, the Nut- tch seldom or never makes use of his tail a support in the same manner as do the eepers and Woodpeckers. Occasionally he aves the big branches and trunks and ex- ores the leaves and smaller twigs in search insects. In its nesting arrangements the uthatch differs from all other birds. The uple first select a suitable hole in a tree, d then proceed to plaster up the entrance til there is left only just sufficient room pass in. A nest recently located by the ater had had quite a large quantity of ay fixed at the entrance, as the original le was evidently much too large. In some ses the quantity of clay used is very small, d although used to lessen the entrance le, could apparently easily have been dis nsed with, but as generations of Nut- tches have been "plasterers," their scendants are naturally gifted in the same and are therefore unable to resist the mptation of dabbling with clay.

How Bird Breeders Are Faring in 1912.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others. The communications must in each case be accompanied by the sender's name and address.

Liverpool and Dist. Results.

Very fair—in fact, in several cases very good—results have been obtained, notably Mr. R. Algie (Bootle), who has reared over 150 young, about equal numbers of Greens and clear Yorks, a really good result, and yet another round to come. Mr. S. McNulty has also had a fair season, breeding some very promising green and clear Yorkies. Mr. Potter has bred forty odd young, and is well satisfied. Mr. J. Knight has had a rather bad season, having lost over sixty young. Mr. L. Hamilton is having a fair season, and has bred some very nice youngsters both in Greens and Clears. Mr. Lobb, one of the oldest of Bootle fanciers, is also doing very well in clear Yorkshires. Mr. Leatherbarrow has bred a nice lot of greens, also Mr. Rawstherne has done well. Mr. Holden has bred thirty young; Messrs. Jackson, 48; McLoughlin, 36; Eaton, 28; Hawkes, 40 (chiefly Norwich and Mules). Mr. T. Rowlands, of Green Yorkshire fame, has done well; a grand lot of youngsters this time. Mr. Benson has also had a good season; so has Mr. Alston, who has bred some spanking young Yorkies. Mr. Barker has done well, also Mr. Mallinson, and Mr. T. Edwards. Mr. Young has not done so well so far. Mr. Corbet has bred some really fine youngsters both in greens and clears. Mr. Jones is well pleased with his results. On the whole, the Birkenhead men have done well, so have the Garston fanciers. Some very fine Yorkshire greens have gone into the Garston district lately, so look out, you green men, for the right man has got them to put them out. The Warrington men report very good results; those that I have seen are very promising. Runcorn fanciers have done fairly well on the whole. Chester men have had a rattling good time to date. Ormskirk breeders are well satisfied, especially our friend Johnston, who seems to come up smiling every season. There are several fanciers in St. Helens and Widnes of my acquaintance who have bred some good young Yorkshires and Norwich. Prescott, another suburb, has had good luck amongst the Norwich. Southport fanciers—those that I have visited—have had satisfactory results. Mr C. Rumsby has done well—about thirty young, chiefly Norwich; and Mr. J. Southward, the lucky man again, comes up smiling. Mr. Malone, one of the Anfield and Everton champions, has bred some really good Yorks greens, close on forty youngsters. Mr. Folland has not done so well. Mr. Crow is satisfied in Nor. and Yorks, a nice lot. Mr. W. Bell has done well; he says he took my advice, as he lost several in the first round. Mr. Parsons has bred a nice lot of Yorks clears. Mr. Harrison has had a good season. Mr. T. Cutts is breeding some good ones, and plenty of them. Mr. W. Walker, of Norwich fame, is having a good season; he has his eye on the Anfield cup, it is said. Mr. McLoughlin is breeding some good ones—thirty youngsters here. Mr. Ritchie has 37 young; Mr. Whiteside cleared 40 first round, total to date 78. Mr. Kelly is best represented in British, and has bred a clear Mule; Mr. T. Plunkett about 40; Mr. Bright, 47; Mr. Thornley, 23; Mr. J. Cooper, 39; Mr. Leonard, 54; Mr. Foulkes, 35; Mr. Owens, 19; Mr. Taylor, 34; Mr. Wilkins, some fine British and Mules. Mr. Metcalf has done badly, feeding wrong, I should say. Mr. Bretherton is doing well; so is Mr. Steinhart; Mr. Cutmore is well satisfied, and Messrs. Hales, McDermott, Richardson, Handley, Walker, Eventry, and Draper have all done well. There are some fanciers who have done badly, but fortunately these are exceptions to the general rule.—R. B. Wright.

"CAGE BIRDS," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

"Billy" the Budgerigar: and his charming companions.

By MISS K. WEBB (Cambridge).

SINCE I wrote my article entitled "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," which appeared in CAGE BIRDS during 1910, I have given up keeping Cockatiels, partly because they were so wild, but chiefly because I found that though the hen laid a great many eggs she never succeeded in hatching out more than two young ones, owing I believe, to mice, which got into the aviary and frightened the birds, though I am thankful to say I have now got rid of these pests. My Budgerigars are still very flourishing and being told they were very easy to bring up by hand and tame, I took one from a family of seven, thinking that the parents would be glad of one less to feed. Oh! what a trouble it was! I had to take the husk from every seed, which I then crushed very small and mixed with biscuits. I fed "Billy," as I called him, about every two hours from the end of a quill and after the second time he took his food beautifully.

"Billy" soon grew to be very tame, but nothing would induce him to stay in a cage and he spent most of his time walking about the room or climbing all over me, playing with my eyeglass cord or trying to pull the buttons off my dress. On fine days when we sat in the garden he walked about and nibbled at the flowering grass. I frequently took him out in the country on my shoulder, even when I cycled. He would sit or go to sleep very happily on my wrist or arm. When I left him alone I used to put him in a wicker waste-paper basket with a perch across and a piece of card-board over the top to keep him in; he also spent the night in this in the bath-room which was just opposite my bed-room door. Waking one morning very early I heard a Thrush carolling in a tree quite close to the house and as I lay enjoying this feast of music, I heard what sounded like a young Thrush with a cold being taught to sing, as the new songster tried each note over once or twice in a very low tone almost to himself. As I listened I discovered it was "Billy" trying his powers of imitation and I am sure that after this if I had taken the trouble I could have taught him to talk.

Company Influences His Manners.

Unfortunately the aviary was very close to the house and "Billy" heard the other birds and was crazy to join them. One day we lost him; we left him alone in the garden for a short time and he disappeared. After searching and calling for a long time my mother and I were standing close to the aviary talking about him, when we heard a sound of fluttering wings and "Billy" alighted at our feet from the roof of the aviary. After this, as he always made for the aviary at every opportunity, we put him back with the others, as we thought it was unkind to keep him by himself and he soon got as wild as the rest. I am sure, however, that one Budgerigar kept alone would make a delightful pet.

The Cheekiest Birds Imaginable.

I then thought I would try some of the small Finches, so I set off to a bird-shop to make my selection, and at once fell in love with a pair of tiny Zebra Finches. They are the cheekiest little birds you can imagine and in that respect very like our own English Sparrow, but much prettier to look at. Finding also that Ribbon Finches or Cutthroats as they are frequently called (owing to a bright red mark across the throat of the cock which rather suggests that he has just committed suicide) were cheap and as hardy as the Zebra and that they could both be kept out of doors all the year round, I purchased a pair. The food for both kinds consists of canary seed, millet seed, both Indian and spray, green food and flowering grasses. Green food which is frosted, or which is soaked with rain, should not be given. The birds also require a lot of grit and cuttle-fish, and if a little black treacle is given in the drinking water when the birds show signs of mating it is said to be a preventative of egg-binding. I have not had so many cases amongst my Budgerigars since using it; about one table-spoonful to a quart of water. I also give plenty of old mortar rubbish to help to make the shell, and, of course, plenty of fresh water to drink and also to bathe in, which most birds much enjoy.

A Series of Evictions.

On arriving home with my newly acquired pets, I put them all into a cage in the garden, the cage being 2ft. 6in. x 2ft. 6in. x 1ft. 6ins., having before-hand put in two domed rusk nests fastened up at each top corner for them to nest or sleep in, one of which each pair took possession at once. For some days all went well. I put some building material into the cage and the Zebra Finches at once commenced operations. Mrs. Zebra sat in the nest, and her husband flew up with bits of wool, hay and horse hair which she soon reduced to order. To my surprise as soon as the Zebras had made themselves a snug little nest, their neighbours the Ribbon Finches took possession of it. Immediately these patient and kind little birds left the intruders in the finished nest and made themselves another in the basket at the other end of the cage. But no; the Cutthroats were not satisfied. Whichever nest the Zebras appropriated they were turned out of, and the poor little builders were so harried from pillar to post that at last I separated the birds and put the Ribbons into another cage by themselves where they did not attempt to build, though I gave them all the encouragement I could by means of tempting nesting material. They both spent most of their time sitting in the nest and, what was most disappointing, Mrs. Ribbon laid quite a number of eggs which were dropped on the floor of the cage, so, of course, broken. She finally laid an enormous double-yolked egg and I think must have ruptured a blood vessel in doing so, as there was a good deal of blood about the cage and she died a few hours afterwards.

Humpty Dumpties Have a Great Fall.

The Zebra Finches, as soon as they were left to their own devices, started housekeeping in earnest. Mrs. Zebra was frequently in the nest whilst her little husband sat below on the perch singing his little "penny tin whistle" sort of song. To my delight for several days she did not come off the nest at all except for a few minutes to feed, so I concluded she had started to sit, though as I could not see the bottom of the nest I was not able to make sure. For ten days all went well, but just when my hopes were at their highest, one morning to my disgust I found four little white eggs on the floor of the cage, each one with a bird in it almost ready to hatch out. When Zebra Finches are rearing young ones they should have a little soft-food given to them, but I gave egg and biscuit I am afraid before I should have done so, which I have since been told was very probably the reason that the eggs were turned out of the nest, as it was too stimulating for the hen. After this the little hen began to droop very much and to make a wheezy sort of noise, so I thought it was too damp to leave her outside any longer (it was then November). I brought them into the house, where they seemed to be exceedingly happy in their warmer quarters.

Fanciers Enjoying the Country.

A FORTUNATE SELECTION AT SOUTH SHIELDS.

A few of the committee on June 16 had their usual country drive to Ponteland, and were fortunate in their selection of the day. The weather was of the very best. Going by Benton and Killingworth into Gosforth Park, we fell across Mr. Permain with a camera to take the group, but I am afraid it was not so soft a job as he expected. The first time he had us ready a few in the back row complained about the smell of the "cigars" in front. The second time a great contest took place overhead in the tree between two Blackbirds. They poured forth their notes in such fierce stylo that you can almost see their voices in the background of the photo. Our destination was reached at two o'clock, and after doing full justice to the many good things provided at the "Blackbird Hotel," we took our way back through the fields. Bird life was at its best. We saw Larks in good numbers, and "Runners" by the score. After many wanderings through places of difficult access, we made tracks again for the hotel, and after having another good time we started on our return journey.—Wm. L. Smith, hon. sec.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE O.S.

Amongst Picturesque Scenery.

On Sunday, June 9th, the members of this Society had a most enjoyable outing in and around Styal. An hour before starting time thunder showers threatened the entire postponement and doubtless accounted for the poor muster. By car through Denton, Reddish, Stockport to Gatley occupied an hour, during which time we were lucky to be under cover from a very severe thunder-storm. Arrived at Gatley, however, everything looked like midsummer should do, and after refreshing we started on our walk to Styal. Lovely scenery, birds and nests galore fully took up our attention, and we reached the Old Ship Inn ready to do full justice to anything in the way of eatables put before us. A good substantial tea followed, when we evidently surprised the waitress by our repeated requests for "more." A good cigar provided by our chairman and a lounge about filled up an hour; then Mr. Foxall, acting as guide, we rambled through some of the most picturesque scenery I have ever been amongst. The sight of that ivy-covered mill lying down in the hollow was worth going a long way to see. All around the De Trafford estate we wandered. Blackbirds, Chaffinches, Greenfinches, Swallows, Hedge-sparrows, Plovers, Warblers and Linnets were all noticed. Our chairman earned our thanks by providing us with a most enjoyable trip. Next ramble to Glossop and Hadfield.—J. R. Colville, Secretary.

CLAPHAM C.B.A. MEMBERS IN AN IDEAL SPOT.

The annual ramble of the Clapham C.B.A. took place on Saturday last, June 8, to Ranmore Common. A small party of enthusiasts met on the train to Box Hill, and, arriving at that station, adjourned to the Railway Hotel, the official starting place, in the hope of meeting more of their friends who might have braved the dampness of the morning, but no others turned up, so we started off along the lane towards the Common. Just a few yards along, under the gutter of a cottage, a Martin's nest was noted, and scarcely a couple of yards away a splendid cock Chaffinch was busily hunting under the hedgerow. Although we kept very quiet in the hope of seeing him go back to his nest, he spotted us, and with a defiant "pink" he darted through the thick hedgerow and was lost to sight. A little farther along the party guide was just in time to spot three lovely young Thrushes hop out of their nest, and, calling the attention of the party to the fact, they were able to watch them fly from bush to bush into an adjoining meadow and safety. Turning to our left, and going up a rather stiff hill, we next heard the Cuckoo, and a little later on the Yellowhammer. Still climbing towards the top of the hill, an old Chaffinch's nest was discovered, and while examining this another young Thrush flew out of an adjoining bush. A little higher up we thought we heard the cry of young Greypates, but after keeping quiet for a short time and not being able to penetrate far into the undergrowth, owing to the sodden condition of same, we went on and were rewarded by hearing the Sedge Warbler, and a little later the Chiff Chaff. Our next find was a Linnet's nest containing four eggs just on the point of chipping out. Nearing the top of the hill, an exclamation came from one, "What's that?" And a Nightjar flew out and across the Common. Our next find was a Hedge Sparrow's nest containing two shells, which had evidently just been sucked by a Cuckoo. The view here of the surrounding hills and villages was greatly admired by all, and gathering some sweet-smelling honeysuckle, wild roses, and foxgloves, and chaffing our friend who was busily scraping some lichen and moss in the hope of coaxing a Chaffinch of his own to line her nest with it, and so making an enticing home for her expected family of Bramble-Chaffinch Hybrids, we passed on to the house, where a hot luncheon had been prepared, noting in the garden hedge a nest of the Robin, and a few yards away a Thrush's nest.

Like the old trombone player, we found that "When you're hungry there's nothing like a good blow out," and did ourselves right grandly with one of the best lunches we have ever partaken of. Now, after having a wash and brush up, "Old Sol" began to beam on us as we started off once more across the Common, which must be one of the finest haunts of the feathered tribe in the South of England. The warmth of the sun now began to cheer our feathered friends as well as ourselves, and we were rewarded for the dampness of the morning by hearing the Nightingale burst forth into full song, and although we tried to locate his nest, we were not successful as he flew from tree to tree further away. Throstles and Blackbirds now vied with each other in pouring forth their melody, with Chaffinches and Yellowhammers accompanying them, just half an hour's sunshine making the difference between the quietness of a desert and the melody of Nature's orchestra. Ah! what is that on the top of that tree piping out his song? A Whitethroat? No. There he goes further off to the next tree, and starts again, and does the same thing several times on our approach. We came to the conclusion he must be a Tree Pipit. Beating the bushes on our right, we saw half a dozen Blackbirds and Thrushes fly out, and in a little pool in a hollow we saw a Thrush bathing, flying afterwards into a bush to preen himself. Now turning into the woods, we heard a cock Pheasant, and a little farther along saw a partly built Wren's nest on the side of a root of an overturned tree. Next we saw several nests of the Jay and Magpie. Seeing one of the party busily prodding into the side of a ditch, we found he was looking for the nest of a Willow Warbler. We all got back under a tree for some minutes, and were rewarded by seeing the pair of old ones come on to the rail of the hedge, and the hen darted down and up again. Noting the spot, we found a nest of five strong youngsters just ready for ringing. All were rung and carefully put back into the nest, and the overhanging bramble bush put into its natural position as nearly as possible. Further along this hedge we saw a young Greenfinch and one of us getting near and disturbing him, several others flew off, Making our way across the Common again, we had tea, and afterwards strolled through the lanes to Dorking Station for home, all agreeing that, despite the wet morning, we had spent one of the most enjoyable days of our lives.—T. J. Hose.

THE ANNUAL "LANDMARK" OF THE DUNFERMLINE AND DISTRICT C.E.S.

The annual landmark of our society is surely the ramble; then for a few hours we enjoy open-air exercise and natural history instruction. Through the kindness of Henry Beveridge, Esq., of Pitreavie, we again made his estate our field of labour, and his kindness, I am sure, was again fully appreciated. Towards midday the atmosphere cleared, and by starting time it had broken out an ideal day. We numbered twenty when the roll was called. Mr. Osborne, head forester to Mr. Beveridge, acted as official guide to the following party:—Mr. J. and Master Rankine, D. Allister and sons, D. McCaven, B. Rice, J. Anderson, J. Warwick, A. Bowman, J. Alexander, H. Kemp, G. Rae, J. McLean, J. Lister, J. Duncan, and R. T. Campbell. The extreme right of the party were early fortunate in locating several grand nesters. The first nest reported was of the Lesser Redpoll, with a family of four, the excited little mother making quite a din while her home was under inspection. We have heard it said that the Yellowhammer does not nest off the ground, but friend Kemp proves this to be false, finding one in a bush; and afterwards several were found in like positions. The familiar "pink-pink" of the Chaffinch at this time of the year has a particular sharpness, no doubt warning his lady love of our approach. Still, his model nest catches the eye of the assistant secretary, the hen being busy incubating. Blackbirds and Thrushes were well forward, a nice nest of the latter containing three fully-fledged youngsters. "Did your hair stand on end?" I heard someone ask John McLean as a Pheasant rose with a scream and a whirr, leaving exposed to our view her clutch of twelve eggs. Just after we had been photographed Davie Allister was called upon to give details of a fallen giant—a mighty beech, chronicled to be the gallows used by Oliver Cromwell after the battle of Pitreavie (1645). The Masters Rankine were quite delighted to locate the nest of the Willow Wren with five eggs, the only one found. When the "Burgh Arms" was reached ample justice was done to a good tea served by Mr. Carr in a manner which left all satisfied. Until train time the company filled in the remainder of the evening in a social way under the chairmanship of Mr. J Rankine, songs being rendered by the majority of those present. Arriving back in Dunfermline at nine o'clock, all were satisfied that the day had been a great success.—R. T. Campbell, sec.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

WHAT THE NEW ASSOCIATE SCHEME MEANS.

A Word with Show Secretaries.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir B. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Ecclefechan; the Rev. C. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; C. E. RATTIGAN, Esq., London; C. Cushny, Esq., London; J. MACE, Esq., Sheffield; W. H. RAVEN, Esq., Nottingham; LACY RUMSEY, Esq., Oporto; MAURICE AMSLER, Esq., M.B., Eton; MALCOLM ROBERTS, Esq., M.A., Baron's Court; E. BAKER, Esq., Cowes; M. THOMSON, Esq., Dunedin, New Zealand.

Our Associate Scheme and Its Effects.

One of the most gratifying aspects of our newest idea of enrolling as Associate members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE those fanciers who are so circumstanced that even the annual subscription would be a tax on their limited resources is the appreciation with which it has been received by bird-lovers who are in humble circumstances, and for the benefit of whom the scheme was evolved. I am receiving by every post applications from readers who have conformed to the simple conditions of sending six signed coupons and a penny stamp, and practically every letter expresses the pleasure of the sender at having been afforded the opportunity of joining our League without being put to an annual expense, which, small as is it, is beyond the means of thousands of bird-lovers throughout our islands.

An Associate Member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE is a member of our LEAGUE for life. His badge is a permanent token that he belongs to a body of bird-lovers who are pledged not only to do everything in their power to administer to the comfort and happiness of their pets, but to induce others to do the same, and in becoming an Associate he gives not only his own written promise, but those of five of his friends.

Let us see what this means. It means that for every hundred Association names entered on the books of the LEAGUE there are six hundred bird-lovers who are keeping their birds properly, and who are pledged to spread the knowledge of the methods of humanitarian bird-keeping. Six hundred people, the great majority of whom have Parliamentary votes, and who will know how to use them in opposition to the oppressive legislation which the professional "humanitarians" have confessedly in view. Members of Parliament, and candidates at any Parliamentary election, will not be able to ignore the views of bird-lovers in obedience to the wishes of the moneyed faddists who would wipe the hobby of bird-keeping off from the face of the earth. And, better than all, for every hundred associate names there will be six hundred bird-keepers who are a living refutation of the hysterical claim of our opponents that bird-keeping is "an acted blasphemy."

Well may it be that for some months past the official organs of the so-called Humanitarians have ceased to publish their accustomed diatribes. This may be but before the storm, for there are powerful influences at work, although, for a time, they seem to be quiescent, but if and when the storm comes it will be found that there is a powerful organisation where a year ago was only helplessness, and this has been brought into being by CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE and CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE only. Following is an example of the many letters received, and I am sorry that I may not be afforded the space to quote from many others to the same effect.

Sir,—I am forwarding six coupons and a penny stamp so that I may become an Associate of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, which is doing so much good. I am pleased to think that our valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, has brought out a scheme for those who can't afford to pay the subscription, and who will be proud to belong to such a League. I am sure I wish CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE and CAGE BIRDS every success, also the ANNUAL, which is so valuable for 2d. to those who can't afford expensive books.—J. Rose, Whitwick.

How the Membership Certificates are being Appreciated.

A very large number of these coloured certificates have been sent out, and I am pleased to hear that they have given very great satisfaction. In acknowledging the receipt of three of the certificates, our esteemed Vice-President, Mrs. M. B. Partridge, writes as follows:—

Dear Sir,—Miss Goodman and Bobby and I are very delighted with our membership cards of the CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. It is impossible to tell you how much we admire them, and I must congratulate Mr. Norman very heartily on his very artistic work.—I am, yours faithfully,

M. B. PARTRIDGE.

Every member should possess one of these artistic cards of membership. They are printed in seven colours, and should form part of the decoration of the room of every member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. The price is one shilling only, post free. Members who are shop-keepers should especially make a point of framing one for hanging in their shop.

A Use for Spare Coupons.

I am pleased to be able to record that many members are responding to the appeal of Mr. Stevenson in our last issue, that they should aid him in his generous offer of finding three signed coupons for every Glasgow reader who will send him three out of the six necessary to qualify as an Associate member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. I have heard from a number of members that they are sending coupons to Mr. Stevenson, and doubtless many others have sent without writing to me. Mr. Stevenson's address is 38, McNeil St., South Side, Glasgow, as stated last week, and I hope readers who have spare coupons will send them to him direct.

Important to Show Secretaries.

In our issue of the 15th inst., I gave some details of our Medal Scheme, and the steps which should be taken by secretaries to ensure that full advantage accrued to their societies. The necessary procedure will be made clear beyond the possibility of a mistake if secretaries will please take for their guidance the following example: Mr. Notley, sec. of Hetton-le-Hole, C.B.S., writes "I have great pleasure in forwarding the following renewal subs. to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, the best organisation that has ever come to the bird-fancier in general. (Here follow the names of nine members of the Society who are members of the LEAGUE). These, along with one new member sent recently, will entitle us to two medals for our show." Hetton-le-Hole will consequently have two Silver Medals, or two Bronze, or one of each, to be allotted by the Committee in any way they may wish for competition among members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, whether or not they be members of the society itself. Later in the season a list will be published of all societies whose secretaries have claimed the medals to which they may be entitled, and the publication of this list should materially add to the entries of any of the shows concerned. Secretaries should cut out from our issue of June 15 the particulars of the Modal Scheme, and should especially note that they must claim the medals, for I have no other means of getting to know how many of the members of any society may be members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

Crisp judges Canaries, and Mr. C. Prior the remainder. We understand there is every prospect of an excellent display.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. G. Thurling.

We are sorry indeed to receive from Mr. C. W. Law, hon. sec, of the London and Provincial O.S. the note as follows: "I very much regret having to announce the death of one of our lady members, Mrs. Thurling, the wife of Mr. G. Thurling. A letter of condolence has been sent to Mr. Thurling on behalf of the committee and members of the L.P.O.S. who I am sure will sympathise with him in his loss."

Mr. Stubbs (Grimsby).

Just as we go to press, news reaches us of the demise of Mr. Stubbs, of Grimsby, a splendid fancier of the old school, and a great lover of the Norwich Plainhead. This stalwart of the Fancy will be much missed by the local bird lovers, for Mr. Stubbs was always ready to help those younger in the hobby and its way than himself. It is with sincere regret that we perform the sad duty of recording his death.

Crystal Palace Show Report, 1912.—These are only champion classes, where colour counts; everything in Norwich and Cinnamons. Note: I don't give Mule classes or Borders. Champion Norwich classes, clear yellow: 1st, Thomas, delightful colour, etc Tick Yellows: 1st, Daives, wonderful colour, etc. Tick Buffs: 1st, Smeaton, rich colour, etc. Yellow Unflighted: 1st, 4th, Davies, lovely colour, etc. Unflighted Buffs: 1st, championship diploma, also special best in show, ideal specimen; took premier honours at all leading shows: Davies, also won N.P.C. challenge cup three years in succession. Yellow Hens: 1st, 3rd, Smeaton. Unflighted Yellow Hens: 1st, Smeaton, exquisite colour. Unflighted Buff Hens: 1st, Thomas, capital colour. These are out of the ten open champion classes. All the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prizes in Cinnamons were won by W. Dorner, E. Godley, and Mrs. Deacon. Every one of the above birds never saw nor ate any colour food only Sandiford's Royal Red. Can I give any more proof that it is the best in the world? See advertisement.—(Advt.)

Considerable interest is being taken in a new advertising record in this week's issue of "Answers" (June 29). For the first time in the history of the British Press, the whole of the advertising pages of the entire issue of a weekly journal are filled with the advertisements of a single great firm. Messrs. Graves, of Sheffield, who are responsible for the venture, are once more demonstrating their faith in large scale advertising, and there is no doubt the novel experiment will attract great attention.

The Rev. H. A. Soames, of Bromley, who recently joined our society, writes Mr. H. Smith, 115, Merton Road, Wimbledon, S.W., hon. sec. of Wimbledon C.B.S., has kindly intimated his intention of presenting a silver challenge cup for most points gained by a member in Green Borders at young bird and annual shows. Cup to be won any three times. We are giving a class for this variety at our coming young bird show, July 8, and should any fancier wish to compete they may do so if they let me have nomination for membership on or before Monday next, July 1.

The June number of "Bird Notes," the organ of the Foreign Bird Club, opens with an article by Mr. Philip Gosse on his aviaries at Beaulieu. Dr. Hopkinson continues his account of "Birds of Gambia." Dr. J. Easton Scott contributes "Further Notes on the Breeding of Tanagers," Lady Pennant gives her experiences in the breeding of the Pope Cardinal, Mr. Wesley Page continues "Some Colony Birds," and begins a list of birds which have reared young in captivity in this country, Mr. H. D. Astley records his success in breeding for the first time in Great Britain the Queen Alexandra Parrakeet. Some interesting Nesting Notes, compiled by the Editor, complete a good issue.

To the last advertisement you put for me in "Cage Birds" I had 37 applications for Green Roller cock, and found some good people through the advert., real, true fanciers.—R. Haigh (Leeds).

Writing in reference to the Hirst Universal First Feather Show Mr. Dippie, the judge comments as follows:—The entries came up very well, considering the poor breeding results fanciers have had in the district. Norwich were not up to last year in merit, but the Yorks and Border classes contained some stylish youngsters which should be heard of in the near future. It seems a pity the committee does not see its way clear to add a Linnet class. The show arrangements were well looked after by the sec., Mr. Edwards, the treasurer, Mr. Floyd, and a good working committee.

The Sparrow's Revenge.

A painter who was destroying the nests of Sparrows in the cornice of a building in Lawrence, Ind., U.S.A., was it is said, attacked by a bird with such violence that he fell from the scaffolding and broke a leg.

Nightingale Comes to Town.

On May 18 I heard a Nightingale singing (from dawn till about four a.m.) within a stone's throw of the busy corner of the "Swan," Stockwell, writes Mr. M. A. Todhunter, to a contemporary. This is the third year I have heard him.

The Soldier's Pet Rook.

Private Haysom, of the Royal Naval College, Osborne, has made friends with a Rook which inhabits the grounds. At night the Rook sleeps in the trees which surround the college and has never been in captivity. It will not let anyone else touch it except Private Haysom, who has only to go to the trees and call when the bird comes down and perches on his shoulder. The Rook can pick his owner from out of a number of soldiers. Visitors to the State apartments may see this tame bird strutting about on the grass.

To Readers with Holiday Accommodation.

Now is the season when those who have holiday accommodation begin to reap a harvest. Our seaside and country readers who have this accommodation should give our "Holiday Apartments" column a fair trial. They are likely to find their advertisement a certain means of letting. Rates, 18 words, 6d.; and ½d. for each subsequent word; six insertions price of five; thirteen, price of ten. Send to the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London.

Canaries for Our Woodlands.

With letters from correspondents bewailing the absence of Swallows (writes Mr. M. Woodward, in the "Daily Express") comes one suggesting a way to increase the numbers of our song-birds:—"Would it not be possible," he writes, "to introduce another charming songster to our country lanes by putting the eggs of the Lizard or some other dark-feathered Canary into the nest of the Linnet—these birds having much in common, as their food, their feathers, size, and habits? No doubt in the nest the young ones would get along together, and the young Canaries would be taught to fend for themselves by their foster-parents. The persecution so promptly meted out by other birds to any brightly-hued Canaries which escape from their prisons makes the suggestion of introducing a dark-hued sort a doubly sound one. Wild-bred, dark-feathered Canaries should escape undue notice, and be able to feed themselves; and we know that the Canary will thrive when exposed to all types of our climate. If the suggested experiment succeeded, birds of brighter hue might be introduced by degrees. There seems no reason why we should not add Canaries to our woodlands."

REVIEW OF SCHEDULES.

Kenfig Hill and Dis. Poultry, Etc., Soc.—July 10, Talbot Institute. Judge, Mr. H. V. Prior, Maesteg. 4 open classes: 1 Yorks., 1 A.V. Can., 1 British, 1 Mule. Prizes, 8s., 4s., 2s. Fee, 1s. 6d. Ent. close July 3, to W. Price, Talgarth House.

Laxfield and Dist. Horticultural, Etc., Soc.—July 20. Judge, Mr. T. Abbott, Wymondham. 2 open classes. 1 Canary, 1 A.O. cage bird. Prizes, 2s. 6d., 1s. 6d., 1s., 1s. 6d. Fee, 6d. Ent. close July 13, to W. P. Hugman.

'PHOSTO'

THE MARVELLOUS

PHOSPHATIC FOOD

For Canaries and Cage Birds.

One of the Latest Opinions.

Hanworth, nr. Feltham, June 19th, 1912.

Dear Sirs,—

Please send me another tin of "Phosto" for Canaries, as I must say my hens are feeding fine on it. One that starved her first nest has brought up a grand lot this time since using it.

I have now a nest of 4, a few days old, and 11 others just feeding themselves, all reared with the help of "Phosto," and all looking splendid.

My first round without "Phosto" I only reared 3 out of 10.

Yours truly,

J. DIMES.

ASK YOUR DEALER FOR IT. If he does not yet stock it he very soon will, meanlme write direct.

In Tins, post free, on receipt of 1/-, 2/6, 4/6.

By T. Johnson (Stockport).

Our contributor holds that fanciers use pepper extravagantly, unnecessarily, and to the detriment rather than the benefit of the birds.

Forty Canaries Moult Red-hot on 1½ lbs. of Pepper.

SOME time ago, in a controversy on the colour feeding of British birds, I mentioned that I had colour-fed forty Canaries on two pounds of colour food. The following week a gentleman who might, or might not, be sceptically inclined, asked me to give my methods. As it was not the colour-feeding season, and being a bit pushed for time just then, I thought I would wait until a more opportune moment. At the outset, I would remind your readers that what is written hereafter must be taken as purely and simply my own experiences. It is not my wish to pose as an authority, nor is it my wish to try and ram my own opinions down other, and older, fanciers' throats.

By way of prelude, I will state my reasons for trying the experiments that have convinced me that fanciers generally cram too much pepper into their birds, a practice which, to my mind, is the cause of more trouble than is usually attributed to it. When we give our birds pepper, especially the hot pepper, we must understand that it is in the nature of a condiment, and any medical authority will tell us that condiments clog the liver, so that that necessary organ of the bird's body doesn't, and can't, do the work for which it was intended by nature.

Do you find them at the Shows?

A casual observer might not notice some birds when scrutinising the exhibits at a show, but let a fancier who is a close observer select one of those that are sitting aimlessly on the perch. If he will take particular notice, he will see that it is breathing slightly quicker than the normal, and most probably has a pendulum-like action of the tail. Let him take hold of the cage, and the bird becomes alert on the instant, and is as active as any in the class for a few seconds; but retire to a distance, and you notice the bird again sidle towards the back of the cage, and sit resting on the perch. Usually, such a bird as that I am describing is never really tight in feather, except for a second or two when moved. Contrast such a bird with one that is hopping about its cage and singing fit to "burst itself," as if with the joy of living. Some may argue that it is a matter of temperament. In odd cases you do find a lazy bird, but I have never yet seen a really healthy cock Canary that didn't sing, or that sat quietly on the perch from morning till night.

But, you say, even allowing that it is not temperament and that the bird is liverish, how is it that this other bird is thoroughly healthy and not affected in the same way, though both have had the same amount of colour food? That is easily disposed of. Constitutions are not alike in Canaries any more than in human beings, and what one Canary could take and thrive on might kill another. I believe, further, that though this liver disease may not be hereditary, yet the young bred from birds affected with it would be pre-disposed to the disease; that is, the young from those parents are more likely to become affected than those from really healthy stock.

I visited a fancier friend of mine last August, just when colour feeding was in full swing. He had less birds to feed than I had, yet he had got to the bottom of a 7-lb. tin of colour food; and when I tell you that he was using a quarter-lb. of hot Natal to each lb. of cool pepper, you may imagine the livers of some of the birds. He made each bird eat two teaspoonfuls a day. Of course, if he hadn't taken the seed away they wouldn't have eaten it. Are there any birds that would eat it in such quantity without being starved to it? I asked him if he didn't think he was giving too much pepper, and told him that I had only used just over a pound to my lot. He replied, "No! so and so" (mentioning a well-known exhibitor) "feeds his birds in just the same way, and what is good enough for him is good enough for me." I told him that I didn't care if they were Queen Anne's methods, they wouldn't convince me that it required all that pepper to properly colour a Canary, much less keep it in health. But so-and-so had said so, and my friend considered that it must be right. When he visited my rooms later on, however, he admitted that I had a better colour than he had. So, I ask, is there reason in cramming our birds?

The Economical Method Explained.

I will give you the methods that I have adopted and found to answer. To those who are sceptical, I can only say that out of 2½lbs. of cool pepper, I had upwards of a lb. left after feeding 40 birds. Those fanciers who use their tins of pounds may smile cynically; but I am quite content, for I hold that while I use less colour food, I have a healthier stock, and get quite as good a colour. Whether I am successful or not, I will leave those who saw my birds to judge.

I know it is not allowable to recommend any particular vendor's colour food; but I may say that I used only the best quality. I didn't use any hot pepper, nor did I add oil of any description. I simply used the cool pepper as it came from the vendor, except that I turned it on to a big dish and crushed all the hard lumps, afterwards packing it into an air-tight tin. Towards the end of June it is time to start the first round of youngsters on colour food. Commence by giving it to them in their soft food very weak; in fact, just coloured. When using egg-food for colour-feeding, always make it weak, say, about three parts bread to one of egg. Bear in mind that the birds at this stage don't really require the egg; it is only given to them as a medium to convey the pepper into their system, and the poorer it is, in reason, the better.

Gradually increase the quantity of the colour food till you get to the full strength, which is one teaspoonful of pepper to four of egg food, and a half-teaspoonful of sugar. When you get to full strength, limit the colour food to a good teaspoonful between three birds twice a week, until you see the colour showing on the wing butts, or when you see them dropping feathers, when they should have a good teaspoonful between three birds on two successive days. On the third day give a teaspoonful of rape seed. Repeat the process each three days right through the moult. There is no necessity to take away the seed. If the food is made palatable, and if the birds have been brought on to it gradually, I guarantee that they will not touch seed until the colour food is all eaten, and especially so if moulted in flights, or three birds in a cage.

As the season advances, the later hatched youngsters must be started on food in just the same way, and about the end of July the old birds will be one by one dropping into moult. They should be started before they begin to moult, that is, if they are not feeding young. I generally moult my old hens and youngsters in flights, but any promising birds I separate, and put them three in a double breeding cage. Put all the old cocks also in a separate flight, the larger the better, and any show specimens may be singled out when they have moulted all their body feathers. Let your birds have the bath every day while moulting. Don't be led away with the idea prevalent with some fanciers that bathing it not good for them when moulting. On the contrary, it helps them to shed their plumage, puts a gloss on, makes them stronger, and keeps their feet clean. And don't coddle them; give them plenty of fresh air while moulting. Remember that July, August and September are three of the hottest months in the year, and plenty of fresh air and exercise during that time will ensure them strength to battle with the colder months to follow.

I believe in letting nature take its course as a rule, but should you have one or two stuck in the moult, procure some marigold flowers from the chemist or herbalist, scald them, and put a little in their drinking water every day until you see the feathers tumble off almost all at once, which is the happiest state possible in a moult. As regards shading the birds while moulting, I think it is essential in a show bird; but why cover those you are keeping for stock, or those that are for sale? My experience is that those birds which are uncovered are more lively, and I like any that I am keeping for stock to have as much exercise as possible. My mode of procedure is to locate any intended for show, or any possible show birds, in one corner of the room, where they can be covered, and the others I leave quite bare.

When Nearing the End,

Some fanciers advise a reduction in the strength of the colour-food when the birds have finished the moult, with the exception of the head, giving as their reason that if the same strength is kept up, the birds moult a deeper colour on the head. My opinion is that the difference in colour really exists only in the imagination of those fanciers. Certainly I have never noticed any; and, even if there were a slight difference, I fail to see where it would detract from the beauty of the bird. Indeed, if anything, I think it would enhance its beauty. I never reduce the strength of my colour food. If a bird is just on the point of finishing, I may reduce the quantity, not for the reasons given above, but as a gradual "weaning off" process.

Most fanciers give a crystal of sulphate of iron in the drinking water towards the end of the moult, to fix the colour. Whether iron has that power or not may be controversial, but in any case it certainly tones up the system after the trying time of the moult. Therefore the iron should be given, either crystals, or in the form of the tincture, two or three drops in a two ounce glass. What I think is of more importance than iron is sulphate, or carbonate, of soda, right through the moult—in fact the year round. A small crystal the size of a grain of Indian corn, or, if used in the powdered form, as much as will lie on a threepenny piece, two or three times a week, will keep the birds' livers in working condition, thereby obviating the necessity for much toning up.

Should you notice any bird down in condition, or ill, during the moult isolate it at once and give a dose of salts for one day, and afterwards, until well, 10 drops of tincture of steel and 6 drops of sulphuric acid; and feed on milk sop for a few days. Don't give any colour food while it is ill. You need have no fear that because the bird is taken off food for a week or so it will come patchy, because it will probably stop casting feathers while it is ailing. And even were one to come a bit patchy, a live bird, even a patchy one, is better than a dead one. Give green food every day during the moult. It is just as necessary to a bird's health while moulting as at any other time of the year. Mine rarely miss a day, having either shepherd's purse, groundsel, or chickweed, and I have never seen any ill effects from its use, in fact, the contrary is my experience.

The Tiniest of all British Birds.

By MATTHEW BARR.

Tiny commenced to sit on the eggs day after day. Gold Crest was so attentive, and brought her the choicest insects and the juiciest caterpillars that he could find. In the middle of May the little chicks made their appearance, and both the parents were busy all day long finding food for eleven hungry mouths. But still Gold Crest sang his song as he carried food to his young family, which had grown day by day, and were now nearly covered with feathers, rewarding the parents for all their care and toil. One day Strong Bill, the Carrion Crow from the rocky hill-side, was foraging for his own family, and he happened to alight by chance on the very tree in which Gold Crest and Tiny had their home. His roving and cruel eyes discovered the nest, although it was well concealed. He was an old robber, and knew where to search and find. Soon he dropped down beside it, and, in spite of all the pleadings and protestings of the little birds, he picked their family up one by one and carried them off to feed his own ungainly brood.

Profiting by Past Mistakes.

A few journeys and the tragedy was over, the Crow in the most heartless and cruel manner even tearing out the lining of the nest and leaving it hanging over the outside, making a total wreck of their tidy little home. It was a sad blow to all their fond hopes. Many days passed before they left the spot, often visiting their nest and mourning over their loss. But time even makes the birds, like humans, forget their troubles, and their thoughts turned again to nest building. They were very careful this time, and after much anxious research they fixed their choice on a very low branch of another spruce tree about five feet from the ground. They commenced to build their new home very near to the point; a very cosy spot, tho new growth on the tree making the branch still more feathery and giving better protection. They did not take half the time to build the second one that they did the first; they were in a bigger hurry. They did not embellish it in the same manner, and Gold Crest gave more assistance.

Tiny only managed to lay seven eggs this time; the extra strain on her body had exhausted her energies a good deal. Perhaps this was just as well; they would find plenty of trouble to rear their second family, as the season was advancing. When the little birds burst their frail prison they were fed assiduously by their parents, and nothing disturbed their home this time. They grew amazingly. One bright, sunny day, when their family was nearly fledged, Gold Crest and Tiny tempted them to try and use their wings in flight, going near to the nest and displaying titbits of the nicest food and encouraging them with the most loving and confiding chirps, till one, more courageous than the rest, ventured on to the side of the nest, then to the neighbouring branch, the rest of the nestlings following. They kept returning at nightfall to the shelter of their nursery for a few nights, till they got stronger on the wing, and were able to range after their parents all over the wood. Late in autumn, when the ground was carpeted with fallen leaves, Gold Crest and his family began to wander over the country, going farther and farther to the South. But, on the bidding of Spring, they turned themselves homewards, for they were children of the North country.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

TRANSFERRING EGGS (E. D. Legget).—You do not say whether the good feeding hen has shown any desire to go to nest again, or, if she still solicits the attentions of her mate. If she does, there is, of course, a great chance that she will herself lay another clutch of eggs, but if she does not do as suggested, you have certainly done right to give her a dummy egg. This will keep her broody, and you may then, with every confidence, give her the clutch of eggs laid by the other hen to hatch and rear. When you transfer the eggs I would advise you to give the St. Andreasburg hen a dummy egg or two to keep her broody also, and thereby have an additional chance of getting the young reared. Should the common hen lay another clutch, I would still advise you to transfer the two clutches, giving the St. Andreasburg eggs to the common hen, and vice versa.

SLOW NESTERS (Puzzled).—I hardly think your birds are likely to be overfat, but you should easily be able to ascertain this by catching them and seeing whether they are plump and firm in the hand, or more flabby and emaciated. Your feeding seems to have erred more on the side of spareness than generosity, and their position "right side by side of the window" seems rather ominous. Are they exposed to draught from the window? Clearly, they are thoroughly out of condition, and not likely to breed until a decided improvement occurs. See detailed reply to "Graham, Norwich," last week, and treat both pairs as advised therein for a few weeks. Also give the gentian and steel tonic for a fortnight instead of a week. The length of time a hen takes to build her nest depends upon the urgency of her need for it. A healthy active hen in a nice forward condition will complete her nest and produce the first egg within a week of being introduced to the cock; others may hold you in suspense for a month or even more; whilst such examples as yours will spin out the agony for months at a stretch, and often fail to do anything at the end.

CANARY ILL (L.N.).—Limit the diet to the following for a month: Staple food, plain canary only; every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, separately, and on the alternate days a pinch of a mixture of equal parts maw, gold of pleasure, and sesame. Every day for a fortnight, and every second day for another fortnight after, give a piece of stale bread the size of a hazel nut soaked in cold milk, drained, two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and dusted over with fine soft sugar. Keep cage strewn with clean gritty sand, and give a plantain stalk about every second day, but give no other green food until bowels are quite normal again. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for one day, and afterwards dissolve in it a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, ditto of sulphate of iron half as big, and add six drops of dilute sulphuric acid. Give this every second day for a fortnight.

DIARRHŒA IN YOUNG (W.H.).—There is something wrong in your feeding, or in the quality of the food. Do you give any green food to the young when they are on their own? Examine your hemp seed and see if the kernel is sound and good, and reject it if it is not. At six weeks old you should not be giving "a little canary seed," but the birds should have access to an unlimited supply as the staple item of their diet. Begin now to give a staple of good sound canary. Each day place a small quantity of summer rape on top of the canary, allowing, say, a teaspoonful for every three birds. In a separate pan give a heaped teaspoonful of egg-food sprinkled with maw seed to every three birds. In making the egg-food for the young add to same quantity of Osborne biscuit you now use, two arrowroot biscuits to each egg used. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of scalded rape per bird, and on two other days a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, teazle, and broken groats. Give no green food for the next two or three weeks unless it be a half ripe dandelion head or plantain stalk occasionally. Keep cage, perches, and seed and water vessels (especially the latter) scrupulously clean, and strew cage with clean gritty sand. For those that are ill, in addition to above give a morsel of bread and milk dusted with carbonate of bismuth daily for a few days, and a quarter teaspoonful of maw seed for each bird.

CANARY WITH ASTHMA (Taburnum).—You should see that the bird is kept under strictly hygienic conditions, and free from draughts or serious fluctuations of temperature, and try the treatment advised to "C. J. Munday" for a few weeks. A 1911 bird ought not to be troubled with such a complaint, much less beyond cure. As regards your chief question, the bird is absolutely harmless both to other birds and humans.

YOUNG GOING BLIND (C. S. G.).—The bird is unfortunately afflicted with cataract and nothing you can do will prove of the slightest use in preventing the progress of blindness. There is no practicable cure for the trouble in birds. The bird will probably continue to find its way about, and its food and water, and to live a fairly comfortable life, though I expect this depends to some extent upon the size, arrangements, and other inmates of the "large aviary." If he seems to get in difficulties, cage him alone, and give food and water inside cage until he has learnt its geography. You give no particulars about your feeding, so I cannot say whether this is in any fault, but probably it is not.

UNSATISFACTORY (Novice F. W. C.).—(1).—I cannot possibly tell what is the cause of the hen always "keeping its mouth open" without some data to go upon. It might only occur when you go near the cage, and be due to nervousness, or stage fright. Please write again and give some particulars about her, where and how kept, and how fed. (2) Assuming these are a true pair, they have not yet been in proper breeding condition. Possibly your feeding and treatment generally is at fault. Treat them as advised to "Graham, Norwich," last week. If this does not induce them to settle down quickly you can do no more with them this season. Does the cock sing at all?

ABNORMAL LAYING (Disappointed).—It is extremely unlikely that this hen will do anything at breeding this season, and you can do little or nothing to alter the outlook. The ovary and oviduct are both clearly in an unhealthy and abnormal condition, which is the cause of the very small clutches, and the large abnormally shaped egg. Allow her to sit her full time on the one egg, and if nothing comes of it, separate her, feed for a fortnight on plain canary, and a liberal supply of green food only, and in the first week add six drops of dandelion juice and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence to the water every second day, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. Then turn her into a good-sized flight and give her plenty of exercise between now and next spring. Candidly you must not expect much of her, and you would do well to get another healthy young hen. It is useless treating her for egg-binding, which is not really the trouble.

COCK CEASED SINGING (Miss L. Nicholls).—Examine the cage well for the presence of red mites, also the bird itself to see if it is troubled with grey lice. In either case clear out these pests, and allow the bird to bathe freely in settled weather. Keep cage floor strewn with clean gritty sand. For a fortnight limit its diet to plain canary only, supplemented with a liberal and varied supply of green food—chickweed, groundsel, flower buds, lettuce, watercress, and dandelion, either leaves or seed heads. In the drinking water add six drops of dandelion juice and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the next week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. The bird may probably begin to moult by the end of this treatment, when you should put it on ordinary moulting diet. In any case, it would doubtless moult before it resumes singing.

A CHOKING NOISE (J. H. B.).—I suspect it is troubled with chronic bronchitis, most likely due to exposure to cold draughts, or extremes of heat and cold. It is never a wise policy to breed with such birds. The first step towards cure is to remove causes. See that bird is kept in a fairly equable temperature, quite free from draughts, damp, and impure air. Give half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry, and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed three times a week for a month. Add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts to the water for two days, and afterwards give 20 drops of the following mixture, which any chemist will supply, two days in every three for a fortnight. Mixture: Two drams each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one dram each of ipecac. wine and chlorodyne, and eight grains of iodide of potassium.

MOULTING (Rex).—I'm afraid you have lost your chance of colour feeding the bird this season. It is probable the bird has gone through a complete moult, and will not now moult again this year. You ought to have put him on colour at once and encouraged the moult to go through quickly as soon as he commenced, as you might have seen advised in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. Keep him now in a nice cosy position free from draughts and fluctuations. Give a little soft food, with colour, and a quarter teaspoonful of maw seed daily. Twice a week give a pinch of linseed, and on two other days half a teaspoonful of a mixture of inga, teazle, millet, and black rape. Staple, plain canary seed. In the water add 20 drops of whisky and six of syrup of saffron every second day for a fortnight. You may give a piece of cuttlefish to peck at, and a few marigold or nasturtium blooms, or an occasional plantain stalk. Allow it a bath daily if it wants one. Treatment is not designed to stop the moult, but to attempt to get it through completely from now, as unless this is done you will stand little chance of getting it colour fed this year.

CRESTS AND FEEDERS (C. Hunt).—(1) Compared with such breeds as Border or Norwich the Crest, as a whole, can scarcely be termed a very hardy breed. This is a question, however, which depends upon the strain and the birds' upbringing more than anything else. Different strains vary considerably in this respect, and some are quite as hardy as any highly cultivated strain of Norwich or Yorkshire. (2 and 3) This again is wholly a matter of strain. I have had Crests and Crestbreds which made as good parents and reared their own young as well as the commonest of Canaries could manage the business, and you may find a fair number of such Crests and Crestbreds. On the other hand it must be admitted that a very large number of this breed make indifferent parents, and cannot always be trusted to rear their own young. In breeding Crests it is most important to run also a few pairs of feeders in order to be provided for emergencies. (4) "Feeders" is a term applied to hens, or "pairs," which are kept and bred principally with the object of acting as foster parents to the young of more highly bred and valuable birds. Any robust breed of known good feeding qualities may be used in this way, but Borders, Rollers, and common Norwich are most frequently so used.

FAT AS GEESE (W. T. B.).—Most likely the condition you describe is due to excessive fatness. The fact that only these two birds are so affected though fed the same as the rest means nothing more than birds, as other creatures, vary greatly in their appetites and disposition. One may grow excessively fat upon what would almost starve another. Put the birds in a fair sized cage where they can get good exercise, and limit the quantity as well as the quality of their food. Allow the Canary a small teaspoonful only of canary seed each day, every third day reduce this amount by one-half, and make up the same quantity with black rape. Give a liberal allowance of green food daily, chiefly lettuce, flower buds of groundsel and dandelion. Allow the mule the same quantity of his usual seed mixture minus the hemp, and three times a week drop out the summer rape also. Give him the same varied supply of green food. In the drinking water add six drops of syrup of buckthorn, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the following week 20 drops of chemical food every second day. Then miss a week and repeat the two weeks' treatment in the same order. You will have to persevere with the above treatment for a lengthened period.

YOUNG DYING (R. Rennie).—You omit to say when you removed the cock for the second brood, or whether you have removed him at all this time. When removed it should be at the commencement of incubation—not the end. Another thing you do say that you gave no green food with previous broods, so it is quite "on the cards" that this alone will make all the difference between success and failure for you. Follow the general instructions given in "Canary Breeding for Beginners," and include the following variations. The day before young are due to hatch add as much sulphate of soda to the drinking water as will cover a sixpence, and leave this on all day, and for the following two or three days repeat this dose, but leave it on only half of each day, then replace with fresh water. If the hen later on flags in feeding, repeat the dose at once for a day or two. If you use home-made egg-food, you should not add any moisture at all to it; there is quite sufficient moisture in the egg. When young are hatched give a small teaspoonful of egg food in the morning and afternoon of first day. Continue this supply fresh twice or thrice daily, and in gradually increasing quantities as the young grow. On the second day give one small spray of chickweed, groundsel, or other available greenstuff; next day double the quantity, and afterwards give a little fresh each morning and afternoon. On the fifth or sixth day add a small teaspoonful of scalded or soaked rape each day, and if hen is not quite so keen on the egg food, add a little crushed sponge cake and maw seed to it. On the eight or tenth day—not earlier—begin to give a teaspoonful of hemp morning and afternoon. In this way you may keep the hen's interest keen and then get the young reared.

TWO HENS (Beginners).—Are you quite satisfied that the young of the first hen did not "gape" for food, or did the hen feed them for a day or two and then cease? In any case if she goes to nest again (which I do not advise you to encourage, seeing that she has already hatched out three broods), give a morsel of bread and milk when next young are hatched, in addition to the usual egg food, and start from the beginning to add equal parts of bread crumbs to the egg and sprinkle it with maw, and give half-a-teaspoonful of soaked rape daily; also give a scrap of green food from the beginning. For hand rearing moisten the usual egg food to a soft paste, and give as much as the birds will readily gape for every hour from dawn to dusk. When they get about a fortnight or so old the intervals may be lengthened to nearly two hours. At about four "feeds" at different times of the day add a little finely minced fresh green food to the egg food and well mix. Whilst birds are very young it is best to moisten the food in the mouth, so that it may not be given to birds quite cold, or you might moisten just enough for one feeding time and use a drop or two of warm water for the job. I am afraid the second hen will do nothing this season. You can only continue the feeding up for a little longer, adding two finely minced mealworms to the egg food each time, and add four drops each of tinctures of gentian, calumba, and steel every second day for a fortnight or so.

SEVEN IN ONE (Yorkshire Greens).—(1) This query alone is really too large a subject to treat properly here. What you really want is Part V. of "Our Canaries" or "Canary Breeding for Beginners." (2) The food you name is very good, but as a complete substitute for egg food I should not personally wholly rely upon it. If you do so it must, therefore, be at your own risk. The condition food you name I have never used. (3) Have not seen any of this so cannot pass any opinion. (4) If you want cocks to sing, cage separately, otherwise groups in flights will agree if not overcrowded. Moult stock birds in flights; show birds in couples in single cages. Ten birds might be kept in 5ft. flights with good attention to cleanliness. (5) Offer a bath daily when moulting if weather is good, and twice a week during the winter. (6) It does not matter a rap where canary seed is grown as long as it is plump, sound and sweet. Tons of so-called Spanish seed never was at sunny Spain. (7) Just please your own fancy about these novel perches and brackets. Simply plain ordinary articles serve my purpose well enough. Next please!

AN OCCASIONAL COUGH (C. J. Munday).—I imagine the few birds affected, as you describe, which are merely symptoms of a slight cold, are just those that are naturally somewhat susceptible to colds or chills, and it is most likely that if it was not really the result of occasional draughts caused by suddenly bringing into use all the available means of ventilation during the mild weather that would occur about the time you mention it would occur from the birds bathing vigorously and saturating their plumage. Keep the place well ventilated, especially when the weather gets very warm, but manage it without causing considerable draught. Give the birds affected half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed, and add 20 drops of whiskey, five each of oxymel of squills and ipecac. wine, and two of eucalyptus oil, to the water and shake well together. Give these items daily until symptoms disappear, which should be in a very few days. As regards ventilation, you do not mention size of window nor whether there is any other means of ingress for air. If the place is well lit, try a small exit for foul air in each end at the highest part before putting in a skylight.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

WHAT PARROT (Chorister).—It is difficult to speak with absolute certainty, as the bird may be young and develop other colours later. If the colours remain about as they are, or the colour areas merely grow larger and more intense, then it is a Double-fronted or Le Vaillaint's Amazon, and I think there is little doubt upon the point. The talent of your bird is an interesting fact, as the majority of this species are not very responsive, though there is no apparent reason for this, as its first cousin, the Blue-fronted Amazon, is a good talker or mimic.

ROSEATE COCKATOO (R. Atley).—New purchasers should never be associated with established stock till all danger of infection is past. Give it five drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the beak from a quill, or on plain cake or crust of bread, whichever it will take. As soon as this has taken effect, give three or four doses of tincture of opium—two drops, with say 10 to 12 hours between each dose. Also give byno-phosphates in the drinking water. If you give fuller details—you merely state a fact and leave me to guess cause—I may be able to assist you further.

AVIARY FOR COCKATIELS (N.E.W.).—You do not state whether it is an in or outdoor aviary. If the former, it would suffice, though giving none too much exercise; but for outside it would need to be as large again, not merely to accommodate the birds, but to supply exercise to ward off the effects of cold during the winter months. I should also advise the whole front to be open wire netting, with a wood and glass (mostly glass) shutter for night and winter use; line the back of it with twiggy branches (pea sticks), and put up a couple of small barrels as nest receptacles, and you should have luck. By as large again, I mean doubling the floor area—that is, make it say 3ft. wide (deep), and a little higher if possible; you could then put in a pair of Budgerigars with them.

WAXBILLS (W. Avbill).—You should get our Nutshell "Waxbills," 2½d., post free, from our Manager, it will tell you more than I can put into this reply. Diet: Canary, white millet and millet sprays, greenfood (lettuce and seeding garden weeds according to season). During the moult put on a course of byno-phosphates (must not use a metal drinker), and occasionally a dose (half teaspoonful to one ounce of water) of Dinneford's Magnesia. The sexes are similar in most cases, but cock is usually (by comparison) the larger, slimmer, and brighter coloured bird of the two. Watch your birds and study the distinctions of proved pairs, and your eye will soon become trained, though it is almost impossible to sex an odd specimen. Yes, several pairs can be kept together, but Waxbills are active little birds, and your cage should have a foot frontage for each pair, and the perching accommodation consist of twiggy branches only. For only one pair the cage should not be less than 18 by 11 by 12 inches high. Supply bath daily, and keep cuttle-bone in cage. They are hardy little birds, once they have got over the prostration following immeriation, but while getting all the light and air possible, must not be subjected to draught. Note other replies.

GREY PARROT (Edgar L.).—Thanks for your appreciative remarks; pleased to note such a good result, as baldness is often very obstinate, not yielding readily to treatment. (1) Supply two mixtures, one canary seed (2), white millet (1); and the other to consist of oats, hemp, maize, paddy rice, and sunflower seed in equal parts, and grit (not sand) half part. Well mix the two mixtures and keep a tin of each in the cage. My starving method is as follows: to daily replenish the seed tins, not throwing leavings away, but to blow away husks and waste, and make up the balance with fresh supply, then, providing supply does not give out, the birds get no more till next day. Any one item persistently refused may be left out, but not so as to let it diet itself on hemp and sunflower alone, such being too oily and heating a diet, and leading to ultimate feather picking in the majority of cases. (2) There is no accounting for this, but it will undoubtedly do so this is obvious from the list you give, which could only have been acquired over a longish period. At present it is apparently happy and contented with its present stock of wisdom, and shows this off, but it will catch on to the new, sooner or later. (3) These values are governed by the folk one comes across; some will give double what you did for a really talented talker in good condition when they have heard it display its talents, and if you wanted to part, you should have no difficulty in getting half as much again as you gave for it, or, if you come across the right party, more than double. I should offer fruit almost daily; the habit will be acquired. Very few Parrots perpetually refuse apple, especially the cores; also plain biscuit, stale crust. Offer green food freely, they extract much from it, though it appears mostly waste—lettuce, flowering grass, seeding groundsel, chickweed, etc. Hope the bird will continue to do well: it should do.

BREEDING IN CAGES (Finchet).—Foreign Finches need more cage room than Canaries to induce them to breed, and they take longer to settle down, but the season lasts longer, and is later, terminating only with the moult. The minimum cage for each pair should be a "double-breeder," with the partition removed. (1) The following have all reared young in cages: Zebra, Ribbon (Cutthroat), and Crimson Finches, White Java Sparrows, Bengalese, Long-tailed Grassfinches, Silverbills, Bronze Mannikins and Diamond Sparrows (Finches). (2) None of the above, while not dumb, have any song, such as we speak of with the Canary. (3) Except those named, about 3s. 6d. to 10s. 6d. pair, and are usually on the market. Long-tailed Grassfinches, 25s. pair; Crimson Finches and Diamond Sparrows not now sufficiently on offer to fix price; wait opportunity and snap up, say 30s. pair upwards. Yes, but the seeds vary a little, canary, white and spray millet forming the main dietary.

INDOOR AVIARY (F. Ash).—This is a rather common occurrence with caged birds of this group, chiefly arising from lack of exercise and occupation. Cage the two birds separately, and keep them so till they are in full feather again. See that they get all light and air possible without draught, liberal supplies of green food, daily bath, and bynophosphates, half teaspoonful to one ounce of water, daily in the drinking water. Diet the other birds (those in indoor aviary) on similar lines for a time, and take every stiff and formal perch out of the aviary, and replace with twiggy branches, placing these sufficiently far apart that they cannot hop from one to the other, but must fly. Do not neglect grit; a little should be sprinkled over sand on aviary floor, and clean cuttlebone should be continually about. Some of the latter crushed to the size of millet, and mingled with the seed, is excellent. Keep bowels moving freely my an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia.

AMAZON AND GREY (O. Munday).—It is more or less natural for this calling with young birds, though it also shows a discontent with something—its food probably. As it is a young bird, in addition to seed give some boiled maize daily—it only keeps fresh one day; boil till soft, strain off water, and lightly dust with flowers of sulphur. Also give a little of the following sop: stale crust of household bread, sprinkle with sugar, and 10 to 12 drops of bynophosphates, and as much boiling water as it will absorb. Keep up the supply of seed mixture, fruit, and cuttlebone. Offer water several times daily, and ultimately leave it in cage. It will grow out of its timidity in time, if you give it quiet, kind, and caressing attention. A Grey Parrot should ultimately talk, and I am surprised yours has not done so to some extent. There is no royal road to teach them, but quiet and caressing attention counts for a great deal. Keep it where it will have company, hear conversation, etc., yet not where movements are such as to alarm it (observation will soon reveal this). It will note more than is apparent, and should soon respond. Also teach it by constant repetition of words and short phrases, not a mixture together, but one word or one short phrase till this is learned, then follow up with another. Parrot's bowels should be kept moving freely, yet not really loose. A teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water occasionally is the best for this purpose.

COCKATOO WITH SWELLING (W.D.E.).—It rather points to the swelling arising from some internal trouble, yet while the bird keeps apparently well and cheerful you are justified in attempting to treat it yourself, though if you have a local vet. who is at all interested in birds, it would be well to let him see it. Your diet is not as wholesome as it might be—too much of a "bit of everything"; wean it from the bread and milk, and let such items as toast and butter and rice pudding be in strictly limited quantities. Still, at the present time the change must not be sudden; gradually get it on to seed mixture, ripe fruit, plain biscuit, and nuts. As it has been used to having sops with you, you can give it stale crusts moistened with either bynophosphate or Chemical Food and water. Foment the swollen parts with a decoction of Camomile flowers, using this as hot as you can, without occasioning the bird discomfort. As it is accustomed to milk-sop, you must continue it at present, and till the bowels have been well relieved, stir into it one teaspoonful of tasteless castor oil to each two tablespoonfuls of sop, daily, till full relief has been given; when this has taken place keep the bowels moving freely, not really loose, by occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—one epoonful to the ounce of water in lieu of the plain drinking water, as required. When not giving the Magnesia, put half a teaspoonful of byno-phosphates into the usual supply of drinking water, but you must not use a metal drinker while giving drugs. If there should be any change in the character of the swelling, or the bird become worse, write again at once, otherwise report progress a fortnight hence. After fomenting, dab dry with a soft towel and keep strictly out of draught, though it should get light and air.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

IDENTITY OF BIRDS (P. C. Hopkinson).—The bird you have is not a Blackcap Warbler, but a Great (or Ox-eye Tit), which is in some localities termed the "Blackcap." It is a very common species. If you made it clear that you wanted a Blackcap Warbler, then you have been defrauded, and the seller has brought himself within reach of the law by obtaining money under false pretences.

THE CASE OF A GREENFINCH (Greenie).—It very often happens a cock Greenfinch seems to "play about" more with the nesting material than does even the hen Canary. And it frequently happens also, unfortunately, that he pulls the nest to pieces as fast as the hen tries to build, in which case one needs to construct a nest when the hen is due to sit—a simple thing with the aid of a little cow-hair or the like. Such a cock bird should be shut off every night when the hen is laying, which she will do on the lining of the nest-pan. A Greenie that plucks the hens even when nesting material is at hand and "strews the cage with feathers," and goes so far as to break one of their legs, would get short shrift from me, and it speaks well for your patience and forbearance that you should trouble to ask me what you should do with him. Do you mean, however, that you have got him with several Canaries (possibly both cocks and hens) in a smallish cage? If so, I am afraid you are trying his temper too highly. He should be by himself; or he and his mate have a cage to themselves. There should be no difficulty in sexing a Greenfinch.

A LARK FOOD (Fred Shore).—This would be a good food of its class if the husks were sifted out of the meal. You can't expect a bird to digest what is practically straw.

ABOUT THE LINNET (Catcher and Net-maker, Warrington).—I am somewhat at a loss to understand your phrase "neat information," but I think you will find the two points you mention dealt with fully in the "Nutshell booklet upon the Linnet (2½d. post free from CAGE BIRDS office).

A SORRY EXPERIENCE (Sheer).—I regret to hear of your unfortunate experience. I presume you hardly need me to tell you that hybrids cannot be expected while you have cocks and hens of the same species together. After considering the facts disclosed in your letter, I feel sure that your best course would be to remove all hens, except the Bullies and the Greenies, and leave in the cock Linnet and two cock Goldies. If you could add another cock Linnet it would be best to do so. There is still good time for hybrids to be produced. You do not state size of aviary; I am assuming it to be of fair proportions.

HARD LINES ON THE ROOK (Elm.).—I think it hard lines for any Rook to have to grow up on moistened barley meal, and in my opinion this is the cause of your bird's weakness. He should also have the opportunity of getting about a bit and "stretching his legs." Far better substitute a good brand of dog meal; this should be thoroughly scalded. The beetles would be good and can be supplemented by garden worms (cut up if necessary), small snails and slugs, small cubes of lightly cooked meat, etc. I think the bird would soon improve if well fed, especially if a small teaspoonful of emulsion of cod liver oil and hypophosphates (combined) were well stirred amongst the soft food daily for 10 to 14 days.

DISPENSING WITH CLOTHING (Bald).—It may be due to insects, which flourish amazingly in the hot weather, unless kept rigorously under; and unfortunately many bird-keepers never seem to suspect the presence of either the red-mite or the grey bird-louse. Should many of the latter be present, they will be found running over the hand if the bird is held for a minute or so; the presence of redmite can be detected by examination of the cage. For full details of treatment, consult either the "Nutshell" booklet on the "Diseases of Birds", or the pages of CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL. It would seem to be the work of insects, seeing that both birds are affected in like manner. Have they opportunity of bathing freely?

TWO "SNEEZERS" (Novice).—It is not a good plan, by any means, to keep birds in a room which is very hot by day and cold by night. One invites bronchial troubles by so doing. I strongly recommend you to turn both affected birds into the outdoor aviary at once. A spell in such a place is usually the very thing to cut short an attack of "wheezing;" and this applies equally to "wheezing" due to over-fatness, as to that symptomatic of bronchial disorder. Your menu seems much too generous for a Bullfinch kept in a cage; "plenty of crushed hemp and sunflower" ought to give him a figure as comely as that of any fat lady we ever planked down our pennies to admire.

A REAL TERROR (J. Holland).—"Done in" two cocks, has she! A sort of feathered suffragette, I imagine. I should think the best male partner of this lady would be a vigorous cock Greenfinch; he might knock a little sense into her. She would surely just suit the bird mentioned by my correspondent, "Greenie." Many birds will peck at one's fingers, or "go for" one with outspread wings—generally birds that have been petted, though Mules are very prone to fall into the habit. You must not keep two cock Mules in the same small cage. There will be a fight to a finish if you do. A Mule kept as a songster generally does very well in the usual oblong type of drawing-room cage. Try the following seed-mixture: Canary and teazle 3 parts each, hemp and summer rape 1 part each, by measure.

YOUNG GOLDIE MULES (Disappointed).—I cannot say, of course, whether alteration of the diet would have induced the hen to rear the young; but to my way of thinking the menu put before her was not good, but lacking in variety. I give all my hens, from the first day of hatching, canary seed in one vessel and summer rape in another vessel, with about a teaspoonful (according to number of young) of cracked hemp. I increase the latter as the youngsters grow, and add cracked sunflower or Plasmon oats or coarse oatmeal. Some hens like one thing, some another, and they should be "humoured" in this respect, if it is necessary. I don't think it essential to give plain yolk of egg: in fact I find hens eat it better if a little crushed sweet biscuit is added. With regard to the giving of greenfood, this depends upon the kind available; if I am using stalks of ripe seeding shepherds purse I give a little practically from the first, quickly increasing the quantity. I am very fond of this, and very successful with it, while the hens consume it greedily. Chickweed comes next in my estimation. If a hen "goes off" egg-food, I mix equal parts sweet biscuit and Plasmon oats and thoroughly moisten it with milk that has been boiled—this will rear as fine, lusty birds as ever were reared by egg.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

A Novice.—Septic Fever.

E. Hattersley.—Death occurred from Impaction of the bowels, with a mass of undigested food. Unfortunately you had no warning, or a simple aperient would have remedied matters.

R. J. E. Fountain.—Post mortem examination was rendered impossible owing to putrefactive changes. Send me another bird, should you lose one, and as soon after death as possible.

John Hill.—You must seek the cause in the food; it is evident this is somewhere at fault, for you to have lost four, showing similar symptoms. Looseness of the bowels is indicative of irritation of the mucous lining. Give Infusion Caryoph Co., 3 drops in the drinking water night and morning, and every alternate day a few drops of aromatic sulphuric acid.

J. H. Wells.—Inflammation of the bowels, probably arising from some irritant or ptomaine substance, taken in with the food. Parrishes' Chemical Food is contra-indicated in a case of this kind. A few drops of laudanum would have been better, as it was evident from your description that the bird suffered uneasiness from bowel irritation, latterly leading to inflammation.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

R. Hillier.—Your communication hardly strikes us as coming within the scope of our "Timely Hints" competition.

Carrick.—Nets vary in size and shape according to the birds one wishes to catch, and the conditions under which they are to be used. Your best plan would be to consult the illustrated price list of one or other of the net-makers advertising in our columns, from whom either materials or complete nets can be obtained.

Miss D. Alston.—We presume that the enamel has had time to set hard, in which case it will not harm the birds. A great number of bird-keepers use enamelled cages. No "special kind" of enamel is used; any good brand will do.

Correspondence.

Eighteen Eggs in Three Nests.

Sir,—In answer to John J. Wilson, I have a hen Canary which has been sitting on eight eggs. This was her first nest this season, and she brought up seven young out of the eight eggs. Her second nest, which was of six eggs, resulted in six young. Her third nest is of four eggs, which she is sitting on at the present time. A. F. WAGSTAFF.

The Rolling Notes of a Bird Organ.

Sir,—I should be very pleased if one of my brother fanciers would let me know how the rolling notes are produced in a bird organ, such a one as is illustrated in that grand book, "Our Canaries." I quite understand how the wind is produced for the playing of the organ, but I want to know how the notes are produced. I may say that I find "Our Canaries" and "Cage Bird Hybrids" the very best books published on their particular subjects.

Aluminium Paint for Cage Fronts.

Reader Says it is Quite Harmless.

Sir,—In reply to J. Hunt, in last week's CAGE BIRDS, I have used aluminium paint for my wire fronts for about two years, and my birds have never taken any harm with it. I am at present breeding Canaries in cages, the fronts of which are done over with it. I used the same breeding cages last year, and I have never had a bird die in them. I am at present doing my flight fronts over with it. I have always used the Falcon brand; it dries with a nice hard surface, and does not come off very easily when once on.

R. TAYLER.

"Trapping" Snails.

Sir,—In reply to R. V. Wagner; an easy way to catch snails is to cut up a raw potato in slices and place in garden. You will soon have plenty. Examine night and morning. I may say I have caught hundreds in this way.

"KINMORE."

Sir,—Your correspondent, Mr. Wagner, wants advice as to an easy way of catching snails. Having a large garden, and being troubled with snails, my method is to water the garden fifteen minutes before it goes dark, and as soon as it has gone dark search the ground with a light (cycle lamp preferred). My results have been: 100 three nights in succession; 50 the fourth night.

A. COOPER.

Rearing Young Birds Without Egg-food.

Sir,—Replying to Mr. Canning's letter, I would point out that nut food is being adopted by fanciers who have had long experience in breeding high-class Canaries, such as Crests and Yorkshires. As to Mr. Canning's remarks about the new beginner these are superfluous. What I complain about is that he should arrogate to himself the ability to assume the role of judge and jury and pass judgment, when, according to his own admission, he has not tried my method. His attitude is preposterous. I claim that nut food is a much more natural food for rearing birds than egg-food, and that it has one great advantage that it will not turn bad in the breeding cage if supplied in sufficient quantity to last the birds the whole day. Mr. Canning forgets that many young fanciers who are not married are precluded from trying their hand at bird breeding through having no one to attend to the birds' wants during their absence at business, because to leave them a day's supply of egg-food would be fatal. I quote below from "Cage Bird Hybrids," by that far-sighted expert, Mr. Chas. Houlton. On page 13 he say: "I am not an advocate for ordinary bread and egg-food, as it ferments and goes sour too soon in hot weather, besides continually causing fatalities through diarrhœa. I am of opinion that eggs can be displaced by various meals and biscuit mixtures with advantage that would certainly make more natural foods." For my part I am content with the good counsel contained in the above words, written by one who is acknowledged to be one of the greatest authorities living on the subject. Finally Mr. Canning makes one very great mistake (I think through ignorance). He says one egg is the equivalent of 1lb. of nuts in nourishing and tissue forming properties. Mr. Canning would see his mistake if he tried to do a hard day's work with nothing more to sustain him than one egg, and then tried the same test with one pound of nut food. I do not want to prolong this correspondence, as Mr. Canning is satisfied, but I do say this, that it will take a cleverer man than Mr. Canning to get me back to 'egg-feeding, and I have the consolation of knowing there are many others of the same opinion T. STANLEY.

SIR,—I AM in agreement with Mr. John Canning's method of feeding, but am going to give Mr. Stanley's method a trial also. I use very little egg-food in feeding my young, and give green-food night and morning, wet or fine, from the day young are hatched. One egg does my birds two or three days for five pair, with an average of two in each nest. The young I find are more robust and healthy. I never had a hen neglect her young through this method. I notice when giving green food to a pair of birds how the cock will feed; also how often a hen Canary will feed her young in half-an-hour, after giving a leaf of dandelion or a sprig of groundsel. Surely there are various methods of feeding birds, but none to come up to nature, and whatever nature provides I give, as I have an abundant supply hereabouts, and want for nothing. But I am still at "school," and I will give Mr. Stanley's method a thorough trial.

F. G. BALL.

A Novice's Good Fortune.

Sir,—I have been to see a fancier's pair of birds here which have seven young ten days old. The hen laid eight eggs, but one got broken. He is just a beginner, so I think he is making rapid progress. Is this a record for a novice? It was a pretty sight to see the young, I can assure you. I wish CAGE BIRDS the success it so well deserves.

Edinburgh Breeder's Second Greenfinch-Chaffinch Hybrid.

Foster-mother Lets it Die.

Sir,—Six years ago I intimated to you my first success in producing the Greenfinch-Chaffinch Hybrid, which did not survive. On Wednesday of last week I again had a nice healthy bird hatch, but unfortunately the foster-mother turned out to be a sweater and non-feeder, so it died yesterday (June 23).

The Cause of Eggs "Drying Up."

Is This True?

Sir,—After reading the article by Mr. Claude St. John in CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, entiled "The Difficulties of Bird Breeding," I showed that part of it which deals with eggs drying up to an old fancier, at the same time telling him of my experience with such eggs this year. He told me that the cause is turning of of the eggs by hand, and keeping the eggs in bran, which he said not only assisted evaporation, but also hardened the inner lining of the eggs, which caused the dying of the young in shell. He also stated that the nest-pans absorbed an enormous quantity of moisture, and he advocated the use of nest linings until young were hatched. He also told me to place my eggs, when taken from the hen, in a slightly moist atmosphere in dry weather, to retard evaporation, as the air of a bird-room is very dry. I would like to ask Mr. Claude St. John or any other fancier if this is true.

F. G. BALL.

Some Rare Hybrids in Store.

Clear Linnet Mule 14 Days Old.

Sir,—I am pleased to tell you that I have one clear Linnet Mule, and one almost clear, a fortnight old. I believe also that I have three full eggs from Chaffinch cock and Bullfinch hen, and 2 eggs from a Chaffinch cock and Greenfinch hen, while a Bramblefinch cock and Greenfinch hen are pairing up together. My friend, Mr. Gibbons, secretary of Wolverhampton C.B.S., has put 2 of the Bullfinch eggs under one of his Canaries, as my hens are not very reliable feeders, and he has got some good hens. I may say I have been trying for these Hybrids for five seasons, but this is the greatest success so far. I have also a Chaffinch cock paired to a Canary that is just laying, and their actions look like bringing success. I hope expectations will be realised, but if not this year, shall try again next.

The Type of the Present-day Norwich Plainhead

Action of Fanciers of Norwich Opens Interesting Discussion.

Sir,—In your issue of June 22nd, under the above heading, "Novice" seems to run away with the idea that there are no good birds bred in Norwich to-day. He says, upon looking through some of the principal show catalogues he doesn't see many exhibitors from Norwich. Well, sir, I suppose Norwich fanciers have their reasons for not exhibiting away. And I would like to tell "Novice" that the Fancy in Norwich is composed of working men who breed to sell, and that many good birds year by year are bred and pass away from Norwich into the hands of others. I hardly care to answer people who are ashamed to sign their name, as in my opinion in most instances of this kind they are only prejudiced people who would not like their names to be known if they were beaten in a fair argument.

A. WOOLLARD.

Sir,—The writer who signs himself "J. E. N." in the "Eastern Evening News" seems to have been "going it" as fast as your humble, when he has to be corrected by Mr. Woollard. Here are a handful of fanciers who go to the Palace, and, on Mr. Woollard's admission, mostly to see one bird, and when that bird doesn't suit them they are not content with saying that they wouldn't have it in their room (sour grapes!), but they must hold a meeting with Mr. Woollard as adviser in chief, protesting and suggesting the incompetency of the whole of our judges. As for that one bird, couldn't Mr. Woollard tell us which it is? Mr. Woollard needn't have informed me that it isn't one of the birds I mentioned in my last letter, became all excepting one were absent, which perhaps accounts for my saying that I had seen them in stronger competition. I agree with him that it is the company a bird is in and not the numbers which make the competition strong. I could have mentioned several other absent birds in my last that are almost perfect, but I didn't want to give too many free advertisements. Mr. Woollard admits that I am speaking the truth for once when I say there has been a change in the Norwich Plainhead this last ten years. When, however, he likens the winners in the Norwich Plainhead classes to Yorkshires, and the "pigeon pouter" type (he might have been patriotic and instanced the Norwich Cropper), he knows he is guilty of gross exaggeration, and I always think that when a man exaggerates so much he has a very poor case. He says that well balanced wings and tail are much harder to get than good head and neck. We shall have to agree to differ about that, because in good bird rooms bad wing and tail carriage are very scarce; and when he talks of bad wings and long hinge tails winning, I fear he has not visited many real good shows. What on earth has a man's name to do with his opinions? Mr. Woollard would be no wiser were I to sign my name. My individuality would still be a blank to him; so where's the use? It is not a question of courage, sir, but of modesty. There are some fanciers who object to be always in the limelight; or perhaps it is that I am like some authors who write over pen names because they know that if the public knew their identity they would never be read, and as I do want a few besides Mr. W. and myself to follow this controversy, I will still sign myself

SUB ROSA.

Big Money at Norwich.

Sir,—As one interested in the above, I was somewhat surprised at the criticism of your correspondent, "Sub Rosa," on the action taken by the breeders in Norwich, especially as he himself was one of the first to complain. In his letter to your paper of April 6 he opens by saying. "I have visited a good many shows this and last season, and it is surprising to see the difference in type of the birds that our judges select to award the special for best Norwich." Now, he is not keeping to his argument, but seems to be only trying to show that the breeders in Norwich have not got any good birds, and trying to give them plenty of advice. Now, sir, as yet there is no Stud Book for Norwich Canaries, so although "Sub Rosa" quotes many names of winners, he seems at a loss to know who bred them, and asks if we have seen them in the flesh. Well, perhaps the Norwich breeders have, as the chances are 99 to 100 that some of the winners at the Palace were bred by some of the working-men breeders in Norwich. Now, sir, "Sub Rosa," in your journal of June 15, says that he only complained of two birds that had been winning all over the country, which in his opinion should be kept in the stock room. Is "Sub Rosa" a pessimist? Not he, but only like the breeders in Norwich trying to learn what they are to breed for. I might say that perhaps the breeders in Norwich do not send their birds to different shows for the above reasons, and we pessimists find it better to sell our birds at home. Just a word to "Novice." The club in Norwich, whose membership is nearly seven hundred, are holding a meeting this week (Friday) to discuss this question. He might pick up a wrinkle or two if he was there. Amongst the members are men who have sold plenty of Norwich birds up to £20 each. They include such as Mr. Mackley (sold one for £70), Drake, refused £20; Revell, £15; Sadd, Stark, Woollard, etc., and a working man, Mr. Scott, who had a yellow Norwich Plainhead claimed at a local show for ten pounds. I would advise "Novice" to go and do likewise. I would also recommend "Novice" to visit our local shows (like several of the leading winners in England), which start in October, as it would be a good lesson for him, and if he has the ambition, which I think he has, he might be able to secure some winners.

F. CULLINGTON.

Sir,—It is to be hoped that "Sub Rosa" is a gentleman who will be able to teach us breeders of the Norwich Plainhead something to our advantage. I am sorry to say I cannot see anything in his letter which is of much advantage to me at present. I should like to inform this gentleman that included in Mr. Woollard's little "band of pessimists" are such breeders as Mr. Jacob Mackley (that well-known judge and breeder of the Norwich Plainhead), Mr. W. Freestone (chairman of the Norwich All-England C.B.A.), Mr. F. Cullington, and other well-known Norwich fanciers When such excellent judges as these begin to find fault, I really do not know how our unknown correspondent "Sub Rosa" can possibly say that "the judges are moving with the times and the breeders are standing still." I will admit that during the last fifteen, or even ten, years, the Norwich Plainheads have undergone a tremendous change, but I see no reason why this change should be detrimental to the beauty and type of the bird. Admitting that head and neck are two of the most difficult points to obtain, generally speaking this matter can be and is made easy by the introduction of the Crest-bred. Once this cross has been introduced (and it has been), you will immediately get the long, coarse-feathered, beetle-browed, and long-tailed bird, which is the chief cause of our complaint. If my friend "Sub Rosa" wants corroboration of what I say, I recommend to his notice a lecture given by Mr. W. Robinson to the members of the Ardwick and Manchester C.B.A., in which he (Mr. Robinson) stated: "Take the majority of exhibits, they are far away from the standard; they are more like Lancashires or Crest-breds. The type of the Norwich is going fast. They are too long, no depth or width, or show faulty wing carriage, etc." This does not appear to me as if the judges are moving with the times when judging for Norwich properties, because if they were to absolutely stick to that for which they are asked to judge, breeders who own such birds as these would know that it would be useless to exhibit such apologies for a Norwich. At the meeting held at the United Bird Breeding Society's headquarters, one of our best judges and breeders in Norwich mentioned that two birds which he should say were judged by the same judge, and both for Norwich properties, were as opposite to one another, as far as points were concerned, as it was possible to be. One, he said, was as good a specimen as one could wish to see, but the other, which also obtained a first in another class, was admittedly big, with a good broad head, but when he had said that he could say no more for its good points. In his opinion this bird had sufficient feathers for two birds (and showed them), was beetle-browed, and long. I guess by the trend of our friend's letter that he thinks we grumblers of Norwich are grumbling because of not being able to win; but such is not the case. We do not mind losing when whacked. I can assure "Sub Rosa" there are as good a lot of sportsmen in Norwich in the bird breeding fancy as anywhere I know, but our ambition is not to make a new standard, but to stick to that standard laid down a few years ago, and which is still in existence. In conclusion, I do hope our friend will not give all the credit to Norwich breeders for "grumbling" abilities. I should like to recommend "Sub Rosa's" letter in CAGE BIRDS of April 6.

THE STOCK BOOK.

IT MAKES BIRD BREEDING EASY.

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

It simplifies the operations in the Birdroom and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character: Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

An Appeal to Help a Fancier.

Sir,—A fancier well known amongst us and in the Fancy has just had the misfortune to have his bicycle stolen whilst looking at advertisements in the library. He is out of employment, and as he at times has many miles to go for the sake of getting a shilling or so, and not having the means to pay train or tram fares, the bicycle will be greatly missed. I wonder if any brother fanciers would like to help him to get another cycle? Any donations sent to me will be greatly appreciated and be acknowledged through CAGE BIRDS. This is a genuine and deserving case, so I hope fanciers will join in and help.

A Well-known Dulwich Fancier's Misfortune.

Sir,—I feel sure that many of your readers, and fanciers generally, will be sorry to hear that Mr. J. B. Waterman, of Dulwich, whose health has been failing him for some time, has been ordered by his doctor to undergo an operation for the throat and ear, and has gone into Guy's Hospital for that purpose. Everyone, I am sure, will hope that the operation will be entirely successful, and that he will soon be restored to health and strength again. Mr. Waterman, whose enthusiasm in the birdy world is well known, has of late been unable to give any attention to them, but there is no doubt that when his health is restored he will go on with them again with his old-time enthusiasm. Yorkshires are his favourites. He has always been a staunch supporter of the Dulwich and Peckham from the first night of its formation, and is very much respected by all our members. He has a smile and a pleasant word for everyone. W. HODSON.

A Happy Family.

Canaries Thriving and Breeding in an Outdoor Aviary at Wimbledon.

Sir,—Canary breeding in cages is now quite the accepted method among fanciers, so much so that one seldom has an opportunity of seeing it carried on to any extent in any other way. Mr. Wetenhall, of Wimbledon, has other views, and in his splendid aviaries has some fifty or sixty birds flying loose, nesting and breeding in their own sweet way. They are built in quite an artistic manner, and are so arranged that one portion can be shut off from the others if found necessary, although the owner prefers to let his pets have the free range of the whole building, two-thirds of which is covered in, and the remainder left open to the air, sunshine and rain. The birds thrive amazingly, and many young ones were flying about, and old birds sitting and rearing second broods when I paid him a visit. Huge branches of furze are fastened to the walls, and in these the birds nest readily, and make quite artistic homes. One of the great troubles in these outdoor aviaries is the difficulty of keeping out mice, but Mr. Wetenhall has solved the problem by continuing the exterior walls some distance from the ground before the commencement of the wire netting, and then huge sheets of glass are placed outside the wire to a height of about 30 inches. Should any persevering rodent manage to effect an entrance, however, he would find nothing to eat, for the food boxes are placed upon large glass vessels, which he would be unable to climb. Mr. Wetenhall is a true lover of birds, and although he visits the shows in the winter, has no ambition to become an exhibitor. He is quite content to attend to his flock of Canary pets, and in watching their actions and nesting habits. The pleasure he derives from them more than compensates him for any trouble. H. NORMAN.

Colour-food as an Aid to Mule Breeding.

Sir,—I have tried the following method in muling with phenomenal success. I paired up a house-moulted cock Goldfinch and hen Canary early in March, and gave the pair colour food daily. Result: 5 young ones hatched by the end of April, all variegated and very rich in colour. I consider I have proved that by pairing early and giving colour-feed moderately all through the breeding season, the young Mules were born with the red colour in their blood, and were far superior in colour accordingly, and also that the parents are more prolific.

The Cuckoo's Fondness for the Tit-lark.

Sir,—Being a constant reader of your valuable paper, and interested in wild bird life, I should like to record that on June 2nd I found a Tit Lark's nest with three ordinary eggs and one I at first thought abnormal. It was twice the size, and the same colour, with one exception, not so dark. I then guessed it was the egg of a Cuckoo, so I paid a visit on the 5th, and sure enough there was Mister Cuckoo, with his wide mouth. The mystery of it was the fate of the other youngsters, who were missing, and the Cuckoo was not old enough to push them out. I paid another visit on the 16th. He was there still, feathered nicely. Coming away from the nest about forty yards, strange to say I discovered still another Tit-lark's nest, with three eggs and a Cuckoo's egg in it.

STANLEY LASPER.

The Fancy in Manchester.

Sir,—I see last week's issue contains the announcement of a Manchester Society being defunct. Why, Mr. late Secretary, whitewash the reason and say through lack of support? There were some good fanciers in South Manchester, but the pity of it is they were generally insulted by the other kind when they did attend a meeting, so naturally they stayed away. The others could not agree, and carry the society on, so of course the "light went out." Like you, Mr. Editor, I hope in the future to hear of its revival (on, however, a new basis, viz., be fanciers and help one another). Now about another society, the North Manchester C.B.S. Where is our genial Mr. Jack Davey? I always understood he was secretary; at least, he has not resigned. Who, then, is the new secretary? However, Jack, do not let beginners trample on you—your members do not wish it, and we don't want another society going "defunct" through lack of support. I must compliment Mr. Davey on the success of his first feather show. He managed it perfectly with the help of his assistant, Mr. Colley, and staff.

FANCIER.

The Problem of Non-feeding and Sweating Hens.

Well-known Liverpool Fancier Offers a Solution,

Sir,—Recent visits paid to bird breeders in my neighbourhood who have done badly in rearing the young have shown me that evidently there is something wrong with the feeding. I should like to point out that those who are feeding on puppy biscuits and egg only are making a big mistake, as the biscuits by themselves and egg set up various disorders. Biscuits only will scour the young birds, especially so in weaning them off. Adopt this plan, namely, half biscuit, crushed and scalded, half cod liver oil food, to an egg. Also give a very small quantity of crushed hemp and rolled or crushed oats each day; for a change a little soaked rape. I venture to say that then breeders will seldom, if ever, lose a young bird. Throw some crushed oats on the bottom of the cages; this prevents the young from picking up too much sand, and too much sand sets up inflammation, and they are soon "off home." Follow this little advice, and you will have better results for your labour. Sweating and non-feeding hens are to be found in almost every room. Sweating hens, I believe, can be cured; at least, that is my experience. Give fresh water every day, and put a piece (the size of a good big pea) of sulphate of soda in every day. By this means you will keep the hen very cool, and it will compel her to frequently come off the nest and prevent her also from wanting to pair again too soon—that is, before she has fully reared the young. It will also stimulate the liver, which in sweating hens is always very sluggish. Sluggishness is nearly always the cause of a hen not feeding, also I find that if you give the hen something she likes she will feed much better. Try this: Egg food mixed as previously described, whole hemp (take care this is sweet and sound; taste it yourself), soaked rape, a little green food. Vary the latter also—say, young dandelion, lettuce, and watercress. You will find that the hen will feed on one or more of these. A fancier friend of mine has taken and acted on this advice; result, reared 62 out of 63 young. I am trying to advise the novice in these little things. I have had good results myself; in fact, I very seldom lose a young one. I bought a rattling fine yellow green hen this last back-end, and was told by the seller she would not feed, and he would prefer I did not buy her. However, I bought her, and have bred with her this season fifteen young ones in three nests—and well fed, too. Where a good many fanciers fail is that they either know nothing and give the hen almost anything and succeed, or they know too much and try to make her feed on whatever they themselves fancy, which is a mistake. A variety is best, and you will soon see which she feeds on. Egg food alone is too fattening, and makes the liver sluggish. I am afraid, Mr. Editor, I trespass too much on your valuable space, but should any novice get "tied up," I should only be too pleased to help him out.

R. B. WRIGHT.

A Curious Mating and a Disappointment.

Sir,—I think the following will perhaps interest the readers of CAGE BIRDS. Some time ago I bought, whilst on my holiday at Hastings, a Zebra Finch (cock) and a Canary (hen), together with several other birds, but these two were put in the same compartment of the box in which I brought them home, and after being turned into the aviary they were constant companions. Seeing they were so attached to one another I caught them and put them in a breeding cage indoors, and after a few days the Canary went to nest, laying 4 eggs (May 22 to 25), and on June 6, 2 days before ordinary time of hatching, one egg hatched out. The young bird had the head and feet exactly the shape of the Zebra Finch. Unfortunately it lived only two days, and I found it dead in the nest on June 8, but I have still got the bird, and I intend to let the parents go to nest again, and hope for better luck.

No. 600.
A Handy Occasional Perch for Flight Cages.
Sent by A. Widdowfield, 95, Charles Street, Boldon Colliery.

Take four pieces of plastering lath, cut as in sketch. Bore a hole in each. Then take a length of perch wood, and screw up to make a handy perch that may be used in any part of the cage. The screws will hold the parts fast together.—A. Widdowfield.

No. 601.
Nail Brush as Perch Cleaner.
Sent by A. A. Kirkland, 8, Sandyford Place, Glasgow.

To clean the spars of cages, especially long spars, I have found it useful to take a nail brush, and cut the hairs in the centre short, as illustrated. This will clean the spars very quickly.—A. A. Kirkland.

Extracting Seed from Thistle Heads

Gather all heads when white, almost ready to burst. Put them into kitchen oven, and shut the door for twenty minutes. Then you will find the heads have turned "out side in," and the oven will be full up with seed and down. If you apply a lighted match, the down will go off like powder, so quick as to do the seed no harm. Take out the remains and put into a basin of water. The seed will sink and leave the rubbish on top. Then empty off water and rubbish and put seed into the oven, or in the sun, to dry. If you have no oven, put the heads on the fire shovel and set shovel on red fire. Same result: "out side in." The seed keeps one year to my knowledge. Lots of other wild seeds can be extracted in likewise manner.—Thos. Haston (Nethorburn, Lanarkshire).

Inducing Birds to Sing.

Many young fanciers are unaware of this little idea for encouraging their birds to sing. Procure a dinner plate or looking glass; damp the surface with wet sponge; then procure a ginger-beer cork and rub the bottom edge of cork sideways to and fro about the glass or plate. For trills of Canaries, rub cork smartly, gradually easing it out for slower trills. Rub to and fro the length of the glass for the "peaing" notes of the Lark (don't lift cork from glass). With various manipulations of the cork, I have obtained all the birds' songs (a ribbed plate would help for Lark notes, and press cork harder for louder notes).—F. J. Harland (70, Buckingham Road, Kingsland Road, N.).

Circumventing the Sweating Hen.

One of the best and simplest methods of preventing hens sweating young is to get a child's "dummy" and push it, rubber end upwards, through a hole in bottom of nest pan. This prevents the hen sitting so close, and allows the young to get air. It is one of the best remedies I have tried.—Geo. Morris (56, Breckfield Road, Everton).

Something for Nothing.

A very old white tablecloth, quite worn out, may be turned to good account for the bird-room. Cut the cloth in inch strips on the cross—from corner to corner—and then set the children to pull it into loose fibre. A mass of cool, feathery nesting material will be the result, similar to what is known as "German Charpie." This can be used with excellent results to prevent hens from sweating their young, and the children will be delighted with their new pastime.—Mrs. Edwards, 433, Grafton Street, Dingle, Liverpool).

To Prevent Young Over drinking.

Toast a slice of stale bread until nearly black and cover with boiling water, and when cold give in drinking glasses, using at the colour of strong tea. Give in place of ordinary water every other day. This will be found to regulate the bowels, and at the same time give tone to the system, besides acting as a deterrent to young birds that are inclined to drink too much. This is safer than using chemicals. —R. Stanley (Handsworth).

The Use of Suet.

I have found that a small piece of beef or mutton suet placed between the wires of the cage for the birds to peck at will benefit the birds very much at any time, especially during the breeding and moulting turns. It prevents the hens from getting egg-bound, and if a little is chopped up and mixed with the egg food during the moult, will add the necessary gloss to the birds' plumage.—C. Oates (Sheffield).

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary, of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same.

GATESHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting held June 12. Decided to have Nest Feather Show July 20, in Congregational School, Rochester Street, Gateshead. Will members do their best to make it a success. Egg food competition won by Mr. J. Scott, time 1 minute.—J. Davison, Sec.

EDINBURGH NORWICH C. AND MULE B.S.

Meeting in Buccleuch Parish Church Halls, July 3, during time Mr. J. F. Dewar is judging young bird show. As business concerns the patronage of the Scottish Plainhead Club and the Scottish British Bird and M.C., a large attendance of members is requested.—J. Welsh, Sec.

NOTTINGHAM & NOTTS. O.S.

Meeting held June 11, at Mechanics' Institute; R. Rhodes, Esq., in the chair. Nest Feather Show fixed for July 6. Entries received at the Mechanics' Institute up to 10 p.m., July 5. Mr. J. Goode judge. Members are requested to apply for schedules if not already received. Tickets are now on sale, and may be obtained from the secretary. Will all members help by sending some entries to ensure a successful show.—J. G. Royce, Assist. Hon. Sec.

TWYNYRODYN F.S.

Meeting held June 20; Mr. W. Evans in the chair. A strong muster turned up, and a good deal of preparatory work for the open show, November 14, was gone through. The following members were elected: Messrs. Morris, Evans, Hy. Davies, D. H. Morgans, A. Jenkins, Dan Jones, W. Morgan, F. Purdy, D. Rees, W. Williams, T. Powell, Evan Howells, Rd. Jones, E. A. Doeton, W. J. Lewis, W. Morris. Meetings are held on Thursday nights at the Mountain Ash, Twynyrodyn, Merthyr, at 7. All fanciers interested in cage birds are earnestly invited to join. —J. Thomas, Hon. Sec., 30, Gilfach Cynon, Merthyr.

CARDIFF C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Maskell's Hotel, June 20. Mr. Whetton in the chair, a good number of members being present. The secretary reported he had engaged Mr. Longden, Swansea, to judge young bird show, July 10, Naish Royal Stores, the Hayes, at 7, when we hope to see a good number present. Messrs. Morgan and Hopson were elected stewards. Mr. Whetton gave 2s. 6d. most points Nor.; Mr. E. Allsopp, 2s. 6d. most points Yorks.; Mr. Bement, 2s. 6d. for best young Mule; Mr. E. J. Davies also promised a special. After a long discussion re guarantee fund for open show, a good number of members gave their names as guarantors. It was suggested that we alter our rules at next annual meeting, as it was felt that each member ought to take a share in the financial responsibility.—T. Thomas, Sec.

GLASGOW C.B.A.

Meeting held June 18, in Mr. A. Muir's salt market, to consider the holding of another open show. To find the feeling of the Glasgow fanciers each club had been asked to appoint three of their members as delegates, and with the exception of the Glasgow West End and Springburn Clubs, who, owing to a mistake were unfortunately not invited, the whole of the clubs instructed their delegates to support the holding of another open show. This being unanimously carried, the date of show was fixed for November 15 and 16. Officers elected as follows:—President, Mr. J. F. Park; vice-presidents, Messrs. R. T. Anderson and A. Hunter. As Mr. Bowman could not see his way to act as secretary, Mr. W. Hutchison was unanimously elected. After some pressure Mr. Hutchison consented, on Mr. Bowman agreeing to give him his assistance during the show. Treasurer, Mr. T. Gunion; committee, Messrs. A. Sloan, R. Thomson, D. F. Webster, Mr. Fraser, Mr. G. Smart, and Mr. Priest, same to be added to at next meeting; auditors, Messrs. A. Maxwell, and R. Heggie. The secretary was instructed to write Glasgow West End and Springburn Clubs, expressing regret at the mistake made, and inviting them to appoint two of their members to act on the committee.—F. Bowman.

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.A

Is the Norwich Plainhead Losing Type?

Meeting held June 4th, at the Onward Hall, Ardwick. Mr. W. Robinson presided over a large attendance of members and friends, and delivered a lecture on the Norwich Canary. First of all, said Mr. Robinson, I will speak of the present-day show bird. The majority of exhibits are far away from the standard; they are more like the Lancashire or Crest birds; the type of Norwich is going fast; they are too long, no depth, no width, and show a faulty wing carriage. When we visit the shows what do we hear? Nothing but grumbling about the judging. I contend this is your own fault. Give the judge a class of Norwich birds of type; he will then know it is Norwich you want him to judge, not cross breds. You will find he will then give satisfaction, and there will be less grumbling. I would like to impress on the Norwich fanciers to get a good picture of a Norwich, take it in the birdroom, study it, then your birds; this will assist to show him where he is at fault in his own stock. What I like for a show bird is one that is of standard size, say, 6½ inches, good head, wide at entrance, a nice rise showing width at the back, bold eye in centre of head, and free from browling, depth in chest, carrying well under, clean cut, short tail, well filled in back, good wing carriage, and short legs, small beak, silky feather lying close to body. Now if you are out buying stock, don't buy the pedigree, buy the bird. You know what is wanted. In the cock get one as big in every way as possible, with good head properties. I do not mind if it shows a wee bit of brow, if it is of good type, and nice quality of feather. Hens I am very particular about, buy typical birds, and mind the type; nice mould, not too big, or too much feather good heads, short pipy tail; then you have the stock birds. Pairing up: Much can be said on this. Correct matching is an essential point. If you find one failing in any points, pair up with one that is strong on that particular point. Double buffing? Well, I do a lot of this. In fact, I can attribute my success to the careful study I make in judicious pairing. You might ask the method I adopt. I select ticked buff cock and ticked hen, good heads, both to be birds of type, neat and clean cut, short silky feather; if you match them up like that you will breed type.

Double yellowing: I do very little, although you get the feather longer, yet it is scantier. I don't mind keeping a young hen that is bred that way. In-breeding: I would not advise any novice to start this until he gets a little advanced in the hobby. I am this year breeding from half-brother and half-sister, and I can assure you type reigns supreme. One fault I notice, you lose head properties, but I don't mind this, it will come back again next season. I will pair up for it, and bring back what I have lost this year. After the lecture quite a host of questions were fired at Mr. Robinson, taking him further into the management of the Norwich Canary, and many of the answers have appeared in a previous issue of CAGE BIRDS. A vote of thanks was proposed by Dr. Twigg for the very interesting and instructive lecture, and seconded by Mr. Boothman. Mr. Vint also spoke in favour of the methods adopted by Mr. Robinson. Mr. Robinson, in replying, said if any members through this lecture or any previous conversation they had had with him adopted his methods and found they had also been successful, he would be amply rewarded for his little trouble.—J. Spencer, Hon. Sec.

CHOPWELL C.B.S.

Meeting held June 22, Club Hall, Chopwell, eight members being present. Decided that we have a gift class at open show, the entries to be drawn for as prizes in connection with admission tickets. Mr. W. Robson elected a member. Hoping to see a few more members present at next meeting, Club Hall, July 20, at 6.—W. Tomlinson, Hon. Sec.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

A meeting held June 18; Mr. J. Stenhouse (president) in the chair. Collectors were appointed for the ensuing year. Agreed that lifting tickets and gummed labels for show cases be got. Also an estimate for model cards. Agreed to get photos of the members taken. Members please meet for this purpose at Mr. Stenhouse's on Sunday, June 30, at 10 sharp. The secretary got a list of those requiring colour food, and also reported £4 12s. 6d. donations. Next meeting July 23.—A. Dickson, Sec.

NORTH LONDON C.B.A.

Meeting held June 19, at headquarters. Mr. G. Mortlock in chair, and a fair attendance. Mr. A. J. A. Marley read his paper on British Birds. It proved highly interesting, and instructive, and gave ample proof of the time he has expended in the study of this branch of the Fancy. Time would not permit of any questions being put, but Mr. Marley has kindly consented to continue at next meeting, July 17. Full advantage should be taken by members and friends of this opportunity to show their appreciation of his efforts on their behalf.—P. W. Jeffries, Hon. Sec.

NATIONAL GREEN-MARKED YCC

Committee meeting held Market Tavern, Bradford. Mr. W. A. Cowgill presided over a moderate attendance. Decided to run three competitions in season 1912-13—champion, amateur competition, junior novice. The amateur competition is in place of the open novice for members who have not won a first prize in open. This year the amateur competition is for members who have not won more than three first prizes in open competition, and this should meet with the approval of all our amateur members. The junior novice competition is on the same lines as last year, to be competed for in the novice classes at Yorkshire Union shows where green-marked classes are provided. We are offering a grand list of prizes for the coming season, about six in each section, which includes the Shackleton Trophy, value ten guineas, presented by our late president, Mr. W. H. Shackleton. Other valuable prizes have been kindly promised by the following gentlemen: Messrs. W. A. Cowgill, L. Dykes, R. Sutcliffe and Son, C. E. Morrison, J. Chippendale, J. Bailey, J. E. Pickup and Son, J. W. Ramsden, A. Brown and Son, T. Sandiford, and H. Hill. The patronage of the club was granted to the following nine societies, providing they make the necessary classification (four classes for green-marked Yorkshires only): Oct. 19, Gt. Horton O.S. (judge, H. Sutcliffe); Oct. 26, Windhill Shipley O.S. (Judge, J. C. Barnes); Nov. 8 and 9, Halifax (Judge, W. A. Cowgill); Nov. 16, Bradford East (judge, H. W. Battye); Nov. 23, Gt. Horton G.I. (judge, C. A. Horne); Dec. 6, 7, 9, Bradford National (judges, Messrs. W. Mundell and R. L. Crisp); Jan. 4, Shipley (Judge, J. Robson); Jan. 18, Bradford West (Judge, J. Bailey); and Crystal Palace. We can still grant patronage to one more show, and shall be pleased to receive application from any society whose show does not clash with any of the above dates. Mr. E. Stobart (Sowerby Bridge) was elected on the committee, and the following gentlemen were elected members: Messrs. S. Wood, J. E. Hirst, W. Long, H. Pearson, and T. W. Mountain.—E. Clegg, Hon. Sec. and Treas.

MOULTING AND PREPARING BIRDS FOR SHOW.

A lecture by Mr. W. Shakespeare before the London and Counties A.C.B.

Meeting June 15, at "Earl Cathcart," Munster Sq., N.W., when a very interesting lecture was given by Mr. W. Shakespeare to a very good attendance of members. Mr. Shakespeare said: Supposing you have had a successful breeding season, which I hope most of you will experience. The first thing is to select the best birds, and put them in couples in separate cages, the remainder going into flights. If you intend moulting on pepper, it should be given regularly, otherwise you will get your birds patchy in colour. Never attempt moulting old and sickly birds on cayenne, as they very often stick in the moult and die. But such is not the case with young birds. The cages must be covered, as strong light destroys colour. Paper or unbleached calico will answer the purpose, or you may draw the blinds, which should be red for preference. I will give you all a tip. For non-fed birds, or what are commonly termed "natural colour." Get 3 pennyworth of saffron, ½ gill of rum, 3 pennyworth of annatto, and 1 tablespoonful of sugar. Pour on a pint of boiling water and let stand until cold. Then bottle up and give 1 teaspoonful in water. Also give a little turmeric at the same time in the egg food each day right through moult and you will be surprised at the colour you get. I might say that the last week or so leave off the mixture and give in the water for a change a little sulphate of iron about 3 times a week; it sets the colour and acts as a tonic. Birds of position, such as Belgians, Lancashires, Scotch, Yorkshires, Dutch Frills, or Border Fancies must be taught to run in and out of show cages. Care should be taken that you get proper cages for each breed. Flurry them as little as you can; practice is a virtue. If you intend exhibiting, your birds will have to be washed, and if you are unable to do same, you must attend some washing demonstration. Notice the little ins and outs, learn to handle birds carefully, and you will soon be able to accomplish the job. Washing 3 days previous to show will give birds time to plume and tighten themselves up. The show cages must be well looked over and cleaned inside and out, and the proper tint and cage for type of bird selected. There are different opinions on what should be put at the bottom of the cage; some use sawdust or crushed oats, others chaff or white paper, but I think it matters little, for the judges as a rule judge the birds, not the cages. If something was recognised in the Fancy it might save a lot of comment. The lecture was listened to very attentively, and several questions were asked, which were answered very satisfactorily. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Shakespeare closed a very instructive evening.—G. G. Stubbs, Official Reporter.

COWDENBEATH C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held Commercial Hotel, June 19 Mr. J. C. Murray, President, in the chair. Mr. Wm. Rogers, Colinton, was appointed to judge Scotch Fancies, and Mr. L. J. Arright, Edinburgh, British. For the printing of schedules and catalogues the offer of Mr. W. Fraser-Simpson was accepted. Orders for colour feeds were booked, when it was agreed to order 45lbs. The secretary was instructed to try and arrange a lecture on Colour Feeding, to be held as soon as possible on a Wednesday or Saturday, whichever was most suitable to the lecturer. Next meeting postponed till July 27, in the Masonic Arms. A report of club smoker showed a balance in hand of 6s.—Joseph R. Reid, Sec.

ANNFIELD PLAIN F. & F.C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held June 15. Proposed that we advertise winners re our lottery tickets, in North Mail and Cowsett papers, also in Fancy Press, last week in August. Members, push the sales of these books. I have only about twelve left, and as I have stated before, they mean £20 to us, which is a tidy sum for our show. We have decided to pay 8s., 4s., 2s., 1s. prize money at open show, January 4; entry fee, 1s. Enrolled five new members, Messrs. R. Goodchild, T. Chrisp, T. Taylor, G. Chaytor, and Wm. Dodds; subs., 2s. 6d. Table show for young Canaries, viz., Yorks., Nor., Bord. (cock or hen); also class for Brit., held at Mr. Lumley's July 6, 7 o'clock, 3d. per cage. Mr. W. Brown judge. Prize-money divided between 1st and 2nd.—J. W. Christon, Sec.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE C.B.S.

Committee meeting held June 20. Mr. T. C. Crawhall in the chair. Letter read from Mr. J. Bertram resigning membership of the society, and also saying he could not judge at Nest Feather Show; resignation was accepted, and Mr. J. Maddison was appointed to judge the Brit. and foreign section. Mr. Jos. Carr, Blaydon, was elected a member. Secretary was instructed to write to Cinnamon C.C. saying that owing to their altered conditions we could not accept their patronage. A discussion took place as to how we could make an open show a financial success. Several opinions were expressed, which we hope will take a definite form later on. Letter was read from Mr. Irwin thanking the members for their presence. Will members let me know as soon as possible how many tickets they have sold for Nest Feather Show, as I wish to get all accounts cleared up. Next meeting July 4, lecture on colour feeding by Mr. Ramsden.—J. W. Reed, Sec.

EAST HAM.

Held June 20, in the spacious Hartley Street Schools. There was a fine gathering, over 100 birds being staged, the majority Yorks. of good type and quality. Norwich were not so numerous, but very level in type, and of good size. Special for best bird was won by Mr. Bennet, with a very typical yellow Yorkie, hardly pressed by Mr. Taylor with a real good chubby Norwich. Other special winners were Miss Farmer (3), Parker (2), Onslow, Lawrence, Oliver (2). A good attendance of members and friends helped towards the success of the show, which, under the careful management of Mr. Fred Fox, was nicely arranged and well carried out. Mr. H. Norman placed the awards.

WEST BROMWICH C.B.S.

First nest feather show, at Dartmouth Hotel, June 22nd, a very moderate number being put down—only 39 birds in all, the reason probably being that most of the members have had moderate luck in the bird room, which made it difficult to find suitable birds of the right age. What was lacking in number was fully made up in quality. Some very promising birds indeed were put down, both in Norwich and Yorkshires, and we trust to see a greater majority showing at our next nest feather show, July 16th, 7 p.m. Mr. J. H. Roe, Birmingham, judge. Mr. Taylor won special best Norwich; Mr. Hernshaw, best Yorks.; Mr. Butler, best novice Nor.; Mr. Greenhouse, special best novice Yorks. Mr. Geo. Baker, Birmingham, judged, and gave every satisfaction.

BOURNEMOUTH.

A very successful first feather show was held at the Quadrant Restaurant on June 19. About 70 exhibits were staged, many of the birds showing great promise. The judging was very ably carried out by Mr. W. R. Wyatt, of Winton, who gave entire satisfaction. Special prizes were very kindly given by Messrs. A. Tuck, L. Bousfield, and G. W. Jones. Principal winners:—Norwich Plainhead: Messrs. Howard and Allen; Yorkshires: Messrs. Bonefield, Maidment, and Fulford; Crests, Miss Onslow, and Mr. Goodland. A special general meeting was held after the show to consider the advisability of raising the annual subscription, also to increase the radius for membership. It was decided to raise the annual subs to 5s., and also to increase the radius to include Hampshire (with Isle of Wight) and Dorset. The committee will be pleased to hear from any fanciers residing witbin this radius who wish to become members. The Society has been very fortunate in securing the services of Mr. J. A. Crawshaw as hon. secretary, who very successfully held this office some few years ago. The 21st annual open show has been fixed for November 19 and 20. Several valuable challenge cups, also numerous medals, etc., will be offered for competition.—G. W. Jones, Chairman.

WALKLEY C.B.S.

Nest Feather Show held June 22, St. Philip's Mission Room. Total entry in 17 classes was 112, which, considering the indifferent breeding season, was very good. Competition was very keen in all sections. The members' Yorkshires were filled with birds of excellent quality, some of which will be heard of again. Mr. W. T. Furniss had an excellent team, taking special for best bird in show, also best member's Yorkshire with a buff of grand length and fine quality, also special for most points in show, in all securing five specials. Mr. Woolhouse had a grand team of Norwich. Mr. Lawton took special for best Norwich. Mr. D. Chadwick had some good Yorks. staged. Mr. J. Smith, sp. best Yorks. noviee; Mr. R. Smith, sp. best novice Norwich; Messrs. J. and C. Scott, best British. Mr. Champion judged.

BANKFOOT C.B.S.

Second show of the season held June 22, at the Red Lion Hotel, Bankfoot. The entry was exceedingly poor, owing to the heavy death roll amongst the young birds; in fact, several members had no young at all. One of the visitors informed us that he had already lost over 60 young birds. 30 birds were staged. Mr. R. Halliday, Shipley, officiated, and his awards proved highly satisfactory. Several "eye openers" were on view, and no doubt in the future will bring further credit to their respective owners. The winners of most points were Messrs. S. Smith (21), G. Hudson (20), J. Lawson (14). CL. OR TKD. YELL. YORKS.: 1, 2, Smith; 3, Hudson; 4, Crowther. BUFF: 1, Crowther; 2, Hudson; 3, Lawson; 4, Smith. MKD. YELL.: 1, 4, Smith; 2, Bastow; 3, Hardaker. NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Nest Feather Show held June 22, Crosby's Cafe. Entries were just about the same as last year, but in contrast to last year the show will be a financial success. The weather was in our favour, and during the afternoon the show was visited by a great number of the public. The quality of the exhibits was splendid. The novices had quite a day out. The judges were:—Canaries, Messrs. A. Hermeston, T. C. Crawhall, and J. Johnstone; Brit. and For., Mr. J. Maddison; and the awards appeared to give general satisfaction. The thanks of the society are also due to them as well as the following: Messrs. E. Coltman, assist. sec., F. W. Laidlow, J. Irving, R. Hope, and J. E. Atkinson, show manager. The secretary tried his best to do his duty, and hopes he succeeded. Mr. G. Greenwell took cup for best Canary in show, with a splendid Green Border, and Mr. J. McKenzie cup for best bird in Brit. and For. section.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Second annual nest feather show, held headquarters June 22. The show had been looked forward to by local fanciers as being the best local young bird show, and there was a good attendance of visitors anxious to see what the present breeding season had produced; there was a record entry, about 100 birds being staged, the quality throughout was excellent, some smart youngsters being on view. The Norwich classes filled well, and competition was very keen, special for best in the section going to Mr. R. Smith. Yorks. came up well, both in numbers and quality, and some of these will no doubt be heard of again. Mr. G. Salt won special for best Yorks. British were a feature of the show, and attracted much attention, several birds being staged capable of winning in the keenest competition. Special for best British went to the winning Goldie, a well-known winner, looking well. Mr. Davis staged a couple of topping Linnets, which will take a lot of beating. Special for most points was won by J. Pitchford with a total of 43. In the cup and medal competition Messrs. Davis and Pitchford tied with 18 points each, Messrs. Hawley and Salt running close with 16, and Mr. Smith 15. Mr. Fred Bate officiated as judge, and gave every satisfaction. NOR. (open): 1, Smith; 2, Clay; 3, James. YORKS. (open): 1, Ratcliffe. WESTERN COUNTIES O.S.

First nest feather show at Club Room, Plymouth, June 12; 90 birds were staged. Yorkshires were not so numerous as in previous years, but Mr. Woodbury's winners were of great promise. As usual, Norwich were a real good lot, especially the yellows, all the exhibits being of good size, whilst type was also a noticeable feature. Crests and Crest-breds were not so numerous as we should have liked, but Mr. Barage's winning Crest and Mr. Davey's Crest-bred will both be heard of during the coming show season. Cinnamons were the best lot the W.C.O.S. have ever got together, and Mr. Brown is to be congratulated on his team, the winner being a real good Jonque. The judges were: Messrs. Large, Yorks.; Lugg, Nor.; Chapple, Crests; Spilman, Cinn. and A.O.V.; Snell, Mules; and Pridham, British.

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangement the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the World; they make the gamest Linnets ever carried to a contest; for length, turns, and form they stand alone, and for voice they have no equal; this class of bird has won the English Derby and all the English Championships, and the world's greatest contests; I sold one Linnet for £16, and one for £6 10/- to a gentleman at Preston. I have refused £11 for a Linnet just lately. This is one of the best Linnets that ever sang through a bill; all the recognised judges say they are equal to the finest German Roller. Many thanks to the members of York Linnet Club for having bought so many Linnets from me. Mr. Kirby writes me of his Linnets: "Have won 17 1st prizes, 3 2nds, 1 3rd, 1 4th, and one 5th in 25 contests." All readers of CAGE BIRDS will see that this is a first-class performance. This gentleman has given me an order for another two, and I wish him every success. Many thanks to J. Smith, E. Jackson, and C. King. All the above are members of York Linnet Club; they are at working-men's prices, 1/-, 1/6, and 2/-; new cages for any of the above Linnets, 1/- and 1/6; all Linnet Clubs are requested to send in at once for these birds; hundreds of British and foreign birds in stock; no waiting; postcard before birds; no waiting, only honest dealing done with me. All write to your old friend, Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 and 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 25 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, H. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner, showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Notice! The breeding of meatworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., or from any of our agents. CHEAP, CHARMING FOREIGNERS.

Such, in short, are Budgerigars, which are among the most beautiful and lively of man's feathered pets. The breeding of "Budgies" is a work of patience, but, owing to the possibilities in the production of varieties, it is very profitable. Difficulties there are in the way, many and serious, but they can be overcome. Food, and the construction of cage and aviary are very important items. Full particulars as to proper feeding, caging and management in captivity, with hints on sexing, breeding, moulting and exhibiting will be found in "Nutshell" No. 18, "The Budgerigar," post free 2½, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London.

WAXBILLS. WAXBILLS.

Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey and St. Helena Waxbills, favourites with foreign bird-keepers. One cannot fully describe the beauty of these little birds, which make a pretty spectacle disporting themselves in the aviary among the green plant life. They thrive best in an aviary, and this is easily and cheaply made if you follow the directions given by Wesley T. Page, in "Nutshell" No. 20, along with all the other hints necessary, if you would be successful in keeping and breeding these lively and vivacious pets; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send posteard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

PARROT PROBLEM

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

The R.S.P.C.A. and an Owl.

Readers of these notes are not strangers to the methods adopted by the R.S.P.C.A. in its anxiety to justify its existence, but the latest example of its outrageous proceedings may be of interest. A Mr. Vogan, a dealer in birds at Earl's Court, missed from his stock a number of birds, and suspected that a rat was the culprit. Accordingly, he set a trap, and caught not a rat, but an Owl. This catching of an Owl in London was deemed to be such a strange occurrence, that it was commented upon by our delightfully interesting contemporary "Country Side," and the result of the publicity thereby given to the capture was that Mr. Vogan was charged with "having in his possession a wild bird, to wit, an Owl, recently trapped." The following report is taken from "Country Side," together with the remarks of Mr. E. Kay Robinson, the Editor. By the bye, I shall earn the gratitude of every CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE member in advising the purchase of the July number of the fascinating magazine referred to. No one who has once read a copy will miss becoming a regular subscriber. This is not an advertisement of "Country Side," but a hint to fellow-members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE for which they should ever be grateful.

Evidence was given by Sergeant Reed and Inspector Moxey, of the R.S.P.C.A., of finding the Owl in captivity on the defendant's premises.

Mr. Herrin submitted that the onus was upon the prosecution of proving that the bird was wild and that it was recently trapped. He contended they had not discharged this, and while admitting that an Owl was entitled to the protection of the Act, it must be proved that it was a wild Owl. He claimed that all the facts pointed to its being a bird which had escaped from captivity. It ate from defendant's hand and was quite tame and docile, and had clearly "resided" in the neighbourhood of Earl's Court for many months. He also called defendant, who proved that it was trapped in February last, which he submitted could not be considered "recent" for the purpose of the Act.

The magistrate dismissed the summons.

Mr. Robinson's Comments.

This appears to have been one of those cases—fortunately rare—in which the R.S.P.C.A. undertakes ridiculous prosecutions. We may not have much sympathy with dealers in live birds; but so long as they conduct their business lawfully they are entitled to be free from vexatious prosecution. Now, in this case, we have a man, living in London, who found that, night after night, his hardy birds in cages were being killed by some nocturnal enemy, their heads being dragged through the bars and pulled off. A trap was set; and to everyone's surprise an Owl was caught. Apart from the successful legal defence of Mr. Herrin, commonsense tells us that the defendant's course of action was the most merciful which could have been adopted. If he had set the Owl free, it would have continued its depredations and probably have been trapped again. If he had killed it well, that would scarcely have been kindness to animals, since there was reason to suppose that it was only an escaped pet. To be prosecuted for keeping the Owl and feeding it in such circumstances was, I think, very hard luck for Mr. Vogan; and I am sorry that publication of the interesting incident in this magazine should have been the means of getting him into trouble.—E.K.R.

How the Associate Snowball is Gathering Size.

In sending the six signed coupons as qualification for Associate Membership of our LEAGUE, Mr. Burns, Whiston, writes as follows: "I forward you with pleasure six coupons, which I have got my lady friends to sign. You will receive a parcel from each of them in a week or two, for they are all going in for badges." This is only what was to be expected. Bird lovers signing coupons to assist a friend to become an Associate will naturally want to become Associates themselves, and they may easily do this by following the example set them and getting five of their friends to sign. Thus we shall go on multiplying, and it will not be many weeks before we have a body of Associates outnumbering the parent LEAGUE itself. I have plenty of badges, and can get some more. All lovers of birds are welcome. They only have to sign the promise which will be found on another page, and get five of their friends to do likewise. Many associates are expressing their pleasure in having been afforded the opportunity of joining us without expense, and say they will become full-fledged members when times improve.

OBITUARY.

MR. JAMES HOOKE.

Once again I have the sad necessity of introducing in my notes this unwelcome heading. I hear with great regret of the death of another of our members, Mr. Jas. Hooke, of Longthorpe. Mr. Hooke was an ardent lover of birds, British and foreign being his especial favourites. He will be greatly missed by his many fancier friends, and on behalf of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members, I tender sincerest sympathy to Mrs. Hooke in her bereavement.

League Memberships as Special Prizes.

Special prizes of one year's subscription to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE promise to be very popular during the season now commencing. At Hawarden Show, June 29, Mr. Ball, one of our members, gave two of these specials. That for the second best Yorkshire in the show was won by Mr. Johnson, and the one for second best Norwich went to Mr. Redfern.

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

PATRONS.—A donation of not less than Ten Guineas in one amount, or an annual subscription of not less than Two Guineas, shall constitute the donor or subscriber a Patron.

LIFE MEMBERS.—A donation of not less than Five Guineas in one amount shall constitute the donor a Life Member.

VICE PRESIDENTS.—An annual subscription of not less than Half-a-Guinea shall constitute the subscriber a Vice President.

HONORARY LIFE MEMBERS.—The payment to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE of a legacy of £20 and upwards shall constitute the administrator or executor making the payment an Honorary Life Member. A form of bequest will be sent, post free, on application.

ORDINARY MEMBERS shall pay an annual subscription of Two Shillings and Sixpence.

BADGES.

Neat and unobtrusive badges are supplied to members, without any charge beyond their subscriptions as above. The badges may be had either in button form, or mounted in rolled gold in two forms, one as a brooch for ladies or for cycling caps or coat lapel, and the other as a pendant for bracelet or watch-chain. The kind required should be specified clearly.

CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Certificates printed in seven colours, and suitable for framing, are supplied at One Shilling each. Each certificate bears an enlarged facsimile of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE Badge and Motto, and is signed by the Secretary.

MEDALS.

Gold, Silver, and Bronze Medals are offered for competition among CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members at Open Shows. The terms under which these will be given may be had upon application.

CAGE BIRDS FREE TO PATRONS.

SEALS AND HEADED NOTEPAPER.

GUMMED SEALS printed in gold and colours in facsimile of the LEAGUE BADGE are supplied for affixing to note paper, postcards, or envelopes. Price eightpence per hundred, fivepence for fifty, post free.

100 Sheets, Two Shillings and sixpence.

Wild-Bird Life.

Birds at Midsummer.

It is now midsummer, when the days are long and the nights so short that wild creatures scarcely rest; they are about at dawn, and do not retire until some time after the sun has gone down in the west. The last to rest are undoubtedly the Swifts, one can hear them long after the last Skylark has sung his evening carol, when the light in the sky is but faint, and one can only occasionally catch a glimpse of the wheeling, screaming birds. The young birds have now joined their parents on the wing, and both these and the Swallows and Martins have considerably increased in numbers. They wander farther and farther from their homes, hawking under the trees, in the meadows, over the corn fields, and across the downs, for the air is now full of insects, especially where the grass grows long, and among the waving green corn. One of the most delightful ways of spending a quiet hour is to wander round the verge of a cornfield just now. The hedgerows are thick with foliage, the wild roses, and climbing clematis ramble everywhere, and the tall docks, wild parsley and other herbage fill the hedge bottom. Among all this, young birds are plentiful; one can detect them both by sight and sound, some of them are hardly yet aware of the dangers of the world they have so lately entered. With big open eyes they look at the intruder and simply scramble into the thicket or hop among the tall grasses. A brood of young Whitethroats sit on the edge of the nest, only one of them sufficiently strong to venture on to an adjoining branch. They are apparently quite helpless, and at the mercy of every prowling beast of prey or predatory bird. The mortality among young bird life must be great; the parent birds look well after the strong birds of the brood, but the weaklings receive no extra care on account of their weakness, and if they do not die in the rearing, are quickly killed by vermin. Again, during the weaning process many go under, especially if the weather is at all wet, or colder than usual. Young Robins haunt the footpaths, hopping through the fence if one becomes too inquisitive respecting their doings. One of the old birds is close by, looking sadly discoloured and ragged. His old coat and vest have lost their bloom, and it will soon be time to replace it with one of better colour and firmer texture.

Robin's New Colour Scheme.

A Robin's nest, containing six spotless eggs, of a pale green tint, has been found in this village (Silsden), writes Mr. F. Fishburn.

Fanciers Enjoying the Country.

NORTH MANCHESTER C.B.S. ENJOY A LONG STROLL.

On June 30 some fourteen members had a ramble, led by Mr. J. Beswick, the well-known Stockport fancier and judge. We travelled to Stockport, where we met our guide, then we walked along the road to Offerton; then across fields to Rose Hill, where Mr. Dan Hartley photographed the group. Afterwards, we passed through Marple, along Marple Ridge, where a very fine view of the valleys is obtained, Strines being just below us, with Whaley Bridge in the distance. Then we walked over Jackson Head and down the hill to Disley, where we had tea. Some of the party were on egg food, which they appeared to enjoy. After tea we walked along the main road, passing Lyme Park, of which we had a fine view, to High Lane, thence to Hazel Grove and Stockport, where we parted from our guide, to whom we are deeply indebted for his kindness. Manchester was reached at ten o'clock, and a most enjoyable day was ended. We did not find many eggs, but there was plenty of young bird life.—John Davey, hon. sec.

LIVERPOOL O.S. AT LOVELY HESWELL DELL.

This Society took its second ramble on Sunday, June 30th, in admirable weather. Meeting at Liverpool Central, we crossed the "briny" and were soon on our way to lovely Heswell. Practically all the Liverpool exhibitors turned up. We were met at Heswell by Mr Handley and Mr. J. Walker, who conducted us through the park and woods, bringing us into the Dell. Here some got astray amongst the heather and grass, which is looking at its best, and among which the Linnets gave us of their best, singing lustily. One or two of the "breeding cards" men came in their cycle pants, and they were reminded of it before they left the gorse. Strolling along leisurely we came into an old lane, and here was a sight for the gods. Droves of young birds flew up in front of us, comprising all the wild birds that frequent Cheshire. It was no use looking for nests now, but one or two of us ran the 100 in even time to get a youngster or two, but it did not come off. It was now getting time to look after the inner man, so we took a short (?) cut of about two miles to Mr. Handley's bungalow. Here we were welcomed by Mrs. Handley, Mrs. John Walker and Mrs. Bratherton. After the long walk we deserved a rest, but host Handley said we must have our photos taken first. "When Pa turns we all turn," so a nice group of 30 "smashed" two plates. We will send you a few of the broken pieces when developed, Mr. Editor. Tea was now announced, aye, and what a "Lanci feed," nobody spoke for half an hour. "Rattle your spoon on your cup if you want more;" good speech, that, Mrs. Walker. After all the good things we did not feel like walking again, so the majority strolled down to the sea side, but as we had only brought our "Birthday" suits with us we could not have a dip. One or two went fishing in the "Wafers" adjacent to the bungalow; we hear there was a good size fish of half an ounce brought out. Coming back to the bungalow we found the children playing rounders, and just to remind us of our childhood days we joined in. Talk about bowling—Georgie Green takes the cake; no wonder he put his ankle out. It was now getting train time, and all good things must come to an end. Before parting, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe proposed a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Handley for her kindness and trouble taken for the benefit of the members and friends of the Liverpool O.S. This was seconded by Mr. J. W. Jones for the visitors. On behalf of the ladies, Mr. Handley suitably responded; saying it was a pleasure to cater for such a jolly lot of fanciers. The next time he hoped there would be 50 instead of 30. On our road home, some one asked the question "How many on the sticks"—result:—F. Handley, 75; V. H. Deacon, 43; John Walker, 41; T. Rowlands, 54, J. W. Metcalfe, 68; J. Abbot, 42; J. W. Jones, 21; R. Bratherton, 39, J. E. Wright (British only); G. Green, 33; R. Parker, 46; W. Hales, 39; Mr. Cooper, 27; Billy Woods, 17; C. Hillenen, 51; S. McNulty, not many, but good; H. A. Nimmo, 35; A. Parsons, 34; W. C. Robinson, 65; Eccleston, 21; J. Lloyd (mostly British). So competition in greens looks like being hot.

JOHN D. METCALFE.

LIVERPOOL AND WALLASEY FANCIERS JOIN IN A RAMBLE.

A ramble took place on June 23, starting from the Fairhaven Institute, Liscard, across the Wallasey Marshes, and on through Bidston Woods and Woodchurch, coming home through Moreton. The ramblers had a real good time, and came across numerous wild birds, while plenty of eggs and young were seen en route. There will be another ramble later to gather wild seeds, etc. Several items of interest took place on the road, which no doubt will lead to a better understanding amongst certain well-known fanciers in this district in future, thanks to the members of the Wallasey C.B.S.—R. B. Wright.

The Working Man's Canary.

By Dan Hamilton (Hamilton, N.B.).

A Scottish expert's views upon the Border Fancy and its breeding; a lecture given before the Burnbank and Hamilton West C.B.C.

MR. Chairman and Gentlemen.—It gives me much pleasure to say a few words on my favourite the Border Fancy Canary, that fascinating variety which is so popular with so many Fanciers all over England and Scotland, and deservedly so, as there is no finer Canary in existence, being neat in build and sprightly and graceful in its movements. It has many things to recommend it, one being its cheapness, while it is very prolific and secures a good classification at nearly every show in the country. It is easy to keep in condition, needs no colour-feed and is a cheery songster, all of which go to make the Border the working man's Canary. Description: A smallish-sized Canary, clean got up, showing no signs of coarseness or dullness and no angles anywhere, head small and neat, round in shape, eye bright, neck in harmony with the head and body, body well tapered and clean at waist, gradually tapering away at the vent, tail well filled in at the root, close packed and narrow (like a pencil), wings carried close to the body, and just meeting at the tips. Size of bird 5½ inches measured in the usual way. Colour to be nice and level, and free from harshness (colour-feeding debarred). Type and quality are the grand essentials in a Border, without which it is worthless. In judging marked birds, markings are always to follow type and quality, birds not to be put in for good marking alone when the type doesn't conform to the Club's standard.

Some Technical Matters.

Anyone starting with the Border should get in touch with some well-known breeder and get him to fix him up with suitable birds. Make up your mind which of the varieties you are going in for, either Clears, Marks, Greens or Cinnamons. If your fancy be Clears, let them be good in type, quality and colour, neat in head, wings and tail, with nice legs and feet, and showing no thigh. Should one bird fail in one or more points, let its partner be good in that point. Don't mate two birds together that possess the same faults; let the pair between them have all the points that go to make the ideal bird. Even Marks you will run on exactly the same lines as Clears, but here you want the markings in addition. Now these markings have been bred for many years, breeders devoting years of careful study in mating their stock to produce the marks. There are six technical points in an Even-marked bird, viz., both eyes, both wings, and both sides of tail, a bird so marked with no other mark on head or body (unless dark underflue, which is not a disqualification but counts against a bird to the extent of the foulness) would be a six pointed bird, which is the highest standard of an Even-marked bird. Next comes the four point which is generally marked on both eyes and both wings, the tail being clear. Two pointed birds are not considered now-a-days as Even-marked birds, as the B.F.C.C. passed a rule that birds marked on both eyes or both wings only, were to compete in classes for Foul (one or two) marks. Of course, where the classification reads Clear or Ticked, that is the Ticked birds competing with the Clears, the Foul or two-marked birds would then compete in the classes for Uneven or Variegated birds.

Uneven-marks may be three or five pointed birds, being marked only on three or five of the technical points. A Variegated bird may be marked on two or more of the technical points and be also marked on some other part of the head or body.

Breeding the Hardest Variety.

In breeding Even-marks I prefer one of the pair to be Even-marked, its partner to be Clear, but the Clear to be Even-marked bred. From this pair you should get Clears, Ticks, Unevens and Even-marks. These young Clears paired up next season to Even-marks should in turn throw Clears, Marks, etc. The Ticks and Unevens mated to partners marked where they fail should blend all-right, and the Evens can be mated to Clears that are Even-mark bred. Don't pair two Even-marks together, as you are almost sure to breed much too heavy markings, in fact some of the young would be Green. It is best to keep to the Clear on the one side and Even-marked on the other. Discard all capped, foul-breasted, or saddle-marked birds for Even-mark breeding, as these are bad faults in an Even-marked strain, which should they get a hold will entirely spoil your strain for Even-mark breeding. Some of you will want to know what to do with the Ticked birds. Well, suppose you have a bird ticked on one eye or wing, it can be mated to a partner that is three or five-pointed, and clear on the part where your Ticked bird is marked. But remember that eyemarks are harder to keep right than wing marks, so it is good policy for breeders to keep one or two eye-marked birds in their stock.

In breeding Cinnamon-marks you can run much on the same lines as for Green-marks, though you can work with a little more marking than with the Green-marks, the pink eyed birds having a tendency to run lighter in markings; but in breeding for marks never lose sight of type and quality, and don't let good marks make you overlook these points.

An Optical Illusion.

In breeding Greens you will run on the same lines for type and quality as Clears and Marks. Here let me say that supposing you placed a Clear and a Green alongside each other, both birds being the same size, many would say that the Green was the largest bird. Now you have colour and marking to consider in a Green, which should be a rich deep grass green, sound and level throughout, free from smuttiness, pencilling distinct, beak, legs and feet dark. Of course, in breeding Greens, it is not absolutely necessary to have both birds Selfs. In fact many Green breeders recommend putting in light blood. For myself, I would breed with a Foul bird if well bred and of good colour, though it is not advisable to put Foul blood in too often or it would result in light throats, light bellies, and light feet in your birds. You can keep your birds clear in their ground colour by careful selection, keeping the ground colour free from smut and the markings sharp.

In breeding Cinnamons you run on exactly the same lines as to type and quality as those before mentioned. The colour of a Cinnamon should be of a nice rich chocolate tint, free from washiness, or greenish tones, sound, and be level throughout. Let me here say that it is impossible to breed first class Greens and first class Cinnamons from the same birds. Should your Greens be right, then your Cinnamons will be of the washed out greenish drab colour, and should your Cinnamons be right then your Greens will be far too bronzy in colour. The Cinnamon of to-day is bred for richness of colour, whereas the Green is bred for the grass green tint, which is as the lemon tint in some Clear birds, the Cinnamon being as the orange tint in some Clear birds.

The Puzzle of the Pink-eye.

To deal fully with the pink-eyed bird would be too much for to-night (it would require a paper all to itself to do it justice, there being so many things to explain). As to exhibiting, there are few shows now-a-days that do not include Borders in their schedule, it is advisable to select your likely birds some time before the finish of the moult, cage them off separately and handle them every time you go into the bird-room to get them, steady. When the show time comes round have them "in the pink" or don't send them. If Light birds they may need a wash. Let me here impress upon you not only to be careful in the washing of your birds, but to see that the cages you put them in are straight from the wash, and cover them over with a muslin cloth to keep off the dust, as competition is so very keen now-a-days one has to leave nothing to chance. I trust you are all having a good season, and that you may be able to have the quantity also the quality of birds at your annual show as in previous years. Your Club is not known as well as it ought to be, the members preferring to "keep quiet," which is a mistake, as some members here have birds that can and do win in the hottest company. I think you ought to advertise your Club meetings in the Fancy Press so that the Fancy at large may know there is such a Club as the Burnbank and Hamilton West C.B.C. Gentlemen, I thank you for your kind attention.

Many questions were asked Mr. Hamilton by Messrs. Braidwood, Thomson, Morrison, Clark, Cairns and Williams, which Mr. Hamilton answered in a very practical and satisfactory manner. After discussing the Society's business it was decided to have our next meeting on July 27 in Burnbank Co-Operative Hall, when we hope to have a lecture on British Birds and Mule Breeding. The Chairman, Mr. Morrison, moved a very hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Hamilton, which was supported by all present. This brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.—JOHN WILLIAMSON, Sec.

How Bird Breeders Are Faring in 1912.

Mr. John Fulton, of the Paisley, Tannahill, O.S. and winner of the amalgamation for the past two years, has 26 young Scotch Fancies, some very promising birds being among them. Mr. R. Simpson of Renfrew, a new beginner, with one pair, has seven young doing well.—John Stewart (Paisley).

Mr. H. E. Smith, Blackheath, writes:—"I have 52 young Canaries, all doing well, a few Mules, and another round of 23 Canaries' eggs, nearly due to hatch, and some prospects of Hybrids. My success is due to the valuable information from CAGE BIRDS and CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, which in itself contains some wonderful information, I carefully followed up I do not remove any eggs. Wishing CAGE BIRDS and exhibitors who breed their own birds every success."

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same.

Twitterings.

I cannot accept any engagements for winter shows, as I sail back to New Zealand on July 18, writes Mr. W. H. Lindley (Wombwell).

A correspondent signing himself "Old Sport, Rhondda," writes enquiring whether the Pentre and Dis. C.B.S. is still in existence, as since last December he has not read anything concerning it.

In sending report of nest feather show of Birkenhead C.F.A., the sec. (Mr. G. Morton) writes: I might say that our gate was a record one, owing, I think, to the advertisement in your paper.

Will societies holding an open show, and who are desirous of having the patronage of the National Green Marked Yorkshire C.C., please apply to the sec., E. Clegg, Victoria School House, Dewsbury?

The Sheffield O.S., writes Mr. Bishop, sec., has secured Mr. J. Naden to judge Lancashires and Lizards at their all England show Nov. 1 and 2. The show is under the patronage of the Lancashire and Lizard F.A.

Mr. W. J. Douglas, hon sec. of Whitehaven C.B.S., writes that his society has fixed for its annual show the old dates Nov. 8 and 9. Mr. H. Davidson (Lockerbie) will judge Borders, and Mr. J. H. Roe the remainder.

Hornsey, Wood Green, and Dist. C.B.S. will hold a first feather show on July 10, at 6 p.m. to 10 p.m., at "The Jolly Butchers," High Road, Wood Green (judge, Mr. Geo. Gardner; admission free), writes Mr. P. Brooks, hon. sec.

I have shipped this week, per ss. Tarquah, writes Mr. Metcalfe, Liverpool, two pairs of Yorkshires for Lagos and two pairs for Faeodos, Africa. Also a quantity of accessories and seed. This order came through your valuable paper.

Exhibitors should colour-feed solely on Ramsden's Pure Peppers, which are without doubt the finest on the market. Ramsden's Peppers hold the record for Palace Championships, and are being used by 75 per cent. of the leading exhibitors in the country. For proof, refer to show catalogues and note the R.P. entries. —(Advt.).

We are informed by Messrs. Plumbridge and Carr, hon. secs., that the photograph taken of the members who took part in the National British Bird and Mule Club ramble is now ready. It is an excellent lifelike picture of the party, every one coming out so distinct. Any of the party desirous of obtaining a copy should write to Mr. Trower, 442, Caledonian Road, N., who will be pleased to forward one on receipt of 2s 6d

The Sheffield O.S. have a grand entry for their nest feather show, to be held Saturday, July 6, writes Mr. T. Bishop, sec. The four classes for foreign birds alone draw an entry of forty exhibits, including some of the rarest.

We hold our young bird show at the Landor Hotel, Clapham, on July 13, writes Mr. A. R. Coe, secretary, Clapham and Dist. C.B.A. Any member who has not received schedule by Monday can have one by applying.

The well-known Norwich and Yorkshire specialist, Mr. A. C. Brotherhood (Newport, Salop), will judge our nest feather show July 27, and our members show (date not yet fixed), writes Mr. J. Gibbons, hon sec., Wolverhampton C.B.S.

The balance sheet of last year's show of the Whitehaven C.B.S. is to hand from the hon. sec., Mr. Douglas. It shows total receipts of £57 1s. 3d., including 4s. 7d. brought forward, and an expenditure of £54 4s. 4½d., leaving a balance in hand of £2 16s. 10½d.; a very satisfactory result.

Applications for the patronage of the National British Bird and Mule Club, write Messrs. Plumbridge and Carr, hon. secs., 45, Overdale Road, South Ealing W., must be sent in not later than July 20, giving the names of judges and the classification of British birds and Hybrids. No application will be considered after that date.

Amongst Sandiford's noted customers last week are Messrs. Davies, Crystal Palace and championship diploma, best Canary in show winner; also N.P.C. challenge cup winner three years in succession; Vardy, Baker, Smeaton, Booth, Cook, Gill, Thomas, Irons, Eckersley, Howard, Hirst, Dormer, Seed, Wilcock, and thousands more.—(Advt.).

The Year Book of the Stratford and East London F.S. is to hand. It gives a list of members, with the section in which each is interested, fixtures (meetings and shows) for the season, present holders of cups, rules, a table of dates showing the progress of the society, and other interesting facts. The Sec. is Mr. W. Maxey, 16, James Place, North Street, Poplar.

The balance sheet of Matlock and Dist. F.S. to hand shows the very satisfactory credit balance of £5 16s. 7d. on the year 1911, which, after paying the 1908 liability of £4 4s., leaves the society with cash in hand to the amount of £1 12s. 7d.—a gratifying improvement in position. During the year the membership advanced from twenty-nine to forty-three, and the society is "still growing." A first feather show has just been held, and an open show is fixed for Oct. 31.

Fanciers are commencing to wonder what measure of success Canary and Hybrid breeders have attained this season. The answer in a nutshell is: Visit the City and Suburban Young Bird Show to-day (Saturday). There not only will your eyes feast upon beautiful birds, but you will hear the experiences of London's leading fanciers. Don't miss this opportunity. To reach the Church Institute, 60, Paddington Street, Marylebone, take any 'bus going along Baker Street or Marylebone Road, or tube to Baker Street Station.—(Advt.).

The Wimbledon C.B.S. young bird show is being held on July 8 at the Queen's Hall, Queen's Road; open at six o'clock. We have received the annual report and book of rules, etc., from the secretary, Mr. H. Smith (115, Merton Road, Wimbledon), who will be pleased to welcome fanciers into the ranks of the society, which is in a very flourishing condition, with a cash balance of close on £30 and a lengthy list of members. The go-ahead policy of the officials evidently meets with deserved appreciation.

The following societies have already applied for patronage of the Cinnamon Marked Yorkshire Canary Club, writes Mr. Grayshon: Great Horton O.S., Manchester and Northern Counties, Sheffield O.S., Bradford National, Shipley O.S. Will secretaries of societies desiring the patronage please apply as soon as possible, as the allocation will take place on July 20? Owing to alteration of rules, competition will be much keener during coming show season than for several years. Applications to be made to Mr. R. Garnett, 117, Woodville Terr., Windhill, Shipley, sec. pro. tem.

Palace Show, 1912. Championship in Yorkshires won by Mr. Towers: championship for Cinnamon Marks won by Mr. Bailey; championship for Green Marks won by Mr. Dykes; championship for Lizards won by Mr. Dewsnap; championship for Mules won by Messrs. Martin and Archer; five guinea cup for best L. and P.O.S. Norwich won by Mr. Sheldon. All and every one of the above winners fed on Ramsden's Pure Peppers only. At the Horticultural Hall, 58 leading prize winners. At the Bradford National 83 leading prize-winners. At the Crystal Palace, 115 leading prize-winners, all and every one of which were colour-fed on Ramsden's Pure Peppers only. For proof of the above, see the show catalogues. Birmingham Cage Bird Society writes: "Several of our members assert that 'Ramsden's' is by far the best food for good rich level colour, and have backed their opinion by ordering large quantities. Ramsden's are the finest and purest peppers possible to procure. Buy no others.—(Advt.)

I have had so many replies (writes Mr. Platt, of Hadfield) through my advert. in your paper that I could not answer all the letters I received. I have had letters from all over the country.

What a splendid medium "Cage Birds" is for advertisements. I inserted a small advt. in the last issue but one, and could have sold my birds (only 1 pair) over and over again; I had to return money. —A. Munday (Axminster).

The Wren's Mistake.

Mr. A. R. Woolaway, of Wiveliscombe, was casting an artificial fly for trout in the river Barle, at Dulverton, a few days ago, when a Wren darted out and seized the bait. In doing so it hooked itself through the wing and breast, and struggled in vain to free itself from the hooks until liberated by the angler.

An Enviable Record.

We hear that Mr. R. G. Jolliffe, the well-known Glasgow fancier, recently had the misfortune to have to put in seven days in bed and take a short respite from business, thus breaking a record of never having been absent from business for over forty years. We are glad to be able to say that Mr. Jolliffe is now feeling quite fit again.

The Holiday Season.

Those of our readers with holiday accommodation should be bringing the fact to the notice of our other readers on holiday bent; and those who require apartments, etc., if they cannot see what they want advertised, should enquire for it through our holiday apartments column. Rates: 18 words 6d., and ½d. for each subsequent word; six insertions price of five, thirteen price of ten. Give the column a fair test. It will pay you. Write the Advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

A Lady's Good Start.

I am a novice at bird breeding, this being my first year. I put up six hens, and have so far reared twenty-five young, with still four nests to go. This seems pretty good for a beginner. CAGE BIRDS has helped me enormously. I keep any helpful article and all useful "tips," and have a book in which to paste them. It is then very easy, if anything goes wrong, to just refer to my album. I have hand-reared one cock Thrush, and he is perfectly tame, coming out on my hand at any time and getting quite excited if I leave him too long.—(Mrs.) L. Thompson (West Norwood).

Fanciers at Bowls.

A most interesting challenge bowling match took place on Yoker B.C. Green on June 25, we hear, between a few of the Paisley and Renfrew members of the Paisley, Tannahill O.S., which ended in a win for the Renfrew fanciers by three points, the score being 22—19, which was very creditable to the Paisley members, who had two novices playing. Great credit must be given to Renfrew's coming "novice champion" for winning the game. The rest of the evening was spent under the hospitality of Mr. Robert Simpson, whose kindness was appreciated by the members present. A return match is likely to follow.

Notes from Glasgow and District.

The well-known hall in the Glasgow Bird Market, I understand, has been secured by the City and District Association for their annual show in November. This is a new departure, and after the extensive alterations internally, and the repainting, it should prove an admirable hall for show purposes, and a boon to the bird clubs of Glasgow and neighbourhood by reason of its central position. The breeding season has been very disappointing in point of numbers, owing to the cold weather at the start of the season. As usual, some breeders have been more successful than others. Unfertile eggs and young dying in the shell are responsible for this disappointment. Nevertheless, a few rare Hybrids and Mules have been reared. Mr. W. Cunningham (Kilmarnock) has got three extra good ones, and Mr. Frazer (Blantyre) a very fine clear Goldie Mule. Mr. Cougan (Carnmylie) has also been successful in rearing a Mule or two, and Mr. A. Buchanan (Paisley) some very good Linnet Mules. Norwich have done better than the other varieties, some real champions being spoken of amongst the "knowing ones." Taking the season as a whole, the first and second round results have been poor, and as there seems no immediate prospect of more genial weather for breeders, the season is likely to prove a very poor one all round.—"Scotch Fancy."

'PHOSTO'

THE MARVELLOUS

PHOSPHATIC FOOD

For Canaries and Cage Birds.

One of the Latest Opinions.

Hanworth, nr. Feltham, June 19th, 1912.

Dear Sirs,—

Please send me another tin of "Phosto" for Canaries, as I must say my hens are feeding fine on it. One that starved her first nest has brought up a grand lot this time since using it.

I have now a nest of 4, a few days old, and 11 others just feeding themselves, all reared with the help of "Phosto," and all looking splendid.

My first round without "Phosto" I only reared 3 out of 10.

Yours truly,

J. DIMES.

Mention "CAGE BIRDS."

A Home-Bred Strain of Bullfinches:

By A. Green (Arnold, Notts.).

The writer details interesting experiments and draws some novel deductions therefrom . . .

THE Bullfinch is a great favourite of mine, and I had, like many other lovers of this charming bird, a strong desire to breed it in a state of captivity, but, not knowing of an instance where success had rewarded the efforts of others, I decided in my own case to give the birds the advantage of very favourable conditions, and to do this I gave my Bullfinches an outdoor aviary to themselves, the dimensions being as follows:—Length 36 feet, width 10 feet, height 10 feet.

How I Furnished My Aviary.

The aviary had a span roof, and consisted of a shelter at one end, 10 ft. long, and a flight of wirework, both sides and top, twenty six feet in length. Up the centre of the flight I imitated natural conditions by making a fence as follows: with wood, 2 in. by 1 in., I formed a skeleton frame 12 ft. long by 2 ft. wide and 5 ft. high, and into this I dropped old currant bushes, branches of fruit trees, ivy, etc., and finished by putting on the top litter, long grass and pea sticks, so that when it rained the greater part of water was carried down the sides of the fence. In February, I turned in three Bullfinches, a cock and two hens, and, although fresh caught, they made no attempt to get out, but seemed delighted with their new abode. The very next day one of the hens began to sing merrily, and here let me say that as a musician the hen Bullie is not far behind her male partner. As the spring advanced they seemed to go mad with delight, and often all three were singing together.

One morning when going to feed them, I saw a hen with a bit of stick in her beak. The moment she saw me she dropped it, but I had seen enough to satisfy me which way the wind was blowing, and, although it was sooner than Bullfinches are usually found breeding in a wild state, I lost no time in giving an abundance of nesting material, consisting of thin dry roots, chiefly of twitch grass, hay, moss, and brown cow-hair.

For about a fortnight there seemed nothing to indicate that nesting operations were in progress, until one day I could see only two birds instead of three, which made me feel both sad and serious.

How Patience was Rewarded.

Fortune comes to him who waits, and soon the missing bird came from an opening in the imitation fence to which I have already referred. While her ladyship was feeding vigorously I went with fear and with trembling, as the Rev. C. D. Farrar might say, just to have a look for the cause of the lady's absence from the breakfast table. Soon I discovered one of the best formed and most symmetrical nests I ever saw, beautifully lined with cow-hair right to the top of the nest. In the wild state Bullfinches do not excel as nest-builders, their nests generally conveying the idea that the birds were short of material. In my case they had plenty, and used it freely.

The nest contained three eggs, two of normal size, the other a miniature. No bird ever sat better than that hen and her reward was two plump youngsters. However, I was careful not to go near the nest during the period of incubation, and this is very important, as the Bullfinch is a shy bird during the breeding season. This had been my chief reason for putting up the thicket or fence.

An Inconstant Father.

The youngsters grew rapidly, and were evidently well fed right up to the time of leaving the nest, and up to this point there was not a single difficulty of any kind. Canary breeders often find that their hens are too eager to build a second nest before the first young ones are able to do anything for themselves, and I found the hen Bullie quite as bad in this respect. She seemed to think it about time her husband did a little more feeding, and herself a little less.

However, his ruddy breasted lordship was too busy flirting with the other lady to do his duty to his own offspring, and their piteous cries to be fed were often uttered in vain (the appeal note of a young Bullfinch is a pitifully sounding one.)

Young Bullfinches are very shy, and hide away in secluded places, so for about a fortnight I had to be content with hearing without seeing them. A nest of young Canaries,

WAGTAIL'S NEST UNDER RAILWAY METALS.

A remarkable situation for its nest was chosen by a Wagtail on the Midland line between Evesham and Cheltenham—under the rails, close to points which were constantly in use. A number of trains passed over the spot daily, but the birds went on with their domestic arrangements undisturbed by the noise.

hatched about a week after the Bullies in another aviary, were feeding themselves while the Bullfinches still relied upon pater chiefly for food, and I began to wonder whether they would never attempt to feed themselves. Thinking some new kind of food was wanting I scattered dry privet berries on the grass in the aviary and sprinkled them with water. They swelled out, and I believe those two young birds fed themselves for the first time upon those berries, for their pitiful appeals ceased as soon as the privet-berries were available.

Hemp-seed Preferred to Egg Food.

As a Canary breeder, I put my faith in egg food for young birds, and I gave it daily to the Bullfinches, but only once saw the hen in the act of eating it, the cock bird not even once, and very little seemed to be used. What then were they fed on in the nest? Hemp seed, evidently, was the bread of life, although the parents had access to all the ordinary seeds, rape, canary, and wild seeds, including dock which seemed to be second favourite.

When the young left the nest they were darker than those reared in a wild state, which seems to prove that hemp tends to darken the plumage of these birds. For green food dandelion was growing in the aviary, but I gave also fresh cut branches of fruit trees. However, I found that the appetite for buds of trees only existed in early spring and soon abated.

In the second nest the hen laid four eggs, and hatched three, but one of the young disappeared, and only two were reared. The other hen did not nest until rather late in season, and having to play second fiddle to hen No. 1, she was driven from the fence, and built her nest in a bunch of gorse reared up in a corner. She laid four nice eggs, all of which mysteriously disappeared. Mice of course.

Might a Cage-bred Strain be Established?

I felt well satisfied, however, as I had learned something about breeding Bullfinches in captivity, and had proved the possibility of such a thing. But to make it a complete success I consider it important to find out what young Bullfinches feed upon when first starting to feed themselves; insects may be eaten; there are no berries about at such a time of the year. When my birds left the nest they were as large as field-reared birds, but from this point they did not mature at the same rate, and never did get quite the full size, although active and well-feathered, but a trifle dark, as stated above.

The deductions to be drawn are that in the first place the aviary should be large and some allowance made for the birds natural shyness when breeding, and then, with proper care, there is nothing to prevent Bullfinches being bred in captivity. Birds so bred would be valuable for hybrid breeding, and if birds bred in aviaries were fed as much as possible on a seed diet I think in a few years the craving for berries and insects would be mitigated, and soon they would be reared as easily as Canaries, because the Bullfinch is a true Finch in every sense, and by breeding a few Canaries in the same aviary (to show the Bullies the way, as it were) egg food might become a dish fit to set before a king from a Bullfinch's point of view. This would be a great advantage, as something appears to be wanting to complete the young Bullfinch's bill of fare.

It must be remembered that the Bullfinch feeds from the crop, and if once an aviary bred strain of Bullies could be established which would feed as Canaries do, the problem of Bullfinch breeding in captivity would, I think, be solved. The desire for stripping trees of their buds in early spring would diminish; if not quickly, slowly and surely. I am convinced that the diet upon which birds are reared plays an important part in framing the appetite for the future, and increases or modifies the longing for various kinds of food, consistent, that is, with the species to which the birds belong.

SOME THINGS YOU MAY NOT KNOW.

By J. GRIMSHAW (Hale).

A varied assortment of ingenious "tips" likely to provide bird-keepers with a new idea or two.

IT is not everyone who knows that an indoor flight (or aviary) can be most cheaply constructed with builder's or slater's laths (say two inches by half an inch) and small mesh wire netting. The laths need not be perfect; if irregular or broken, you can get them at firewood price and just cut out the lengths you want.

If you are troubled with mice, put the seed hopper on a pole, and at the top of this pole fix one of those long narrow glass chimneys which were first used with incandescent lights; no mouse can climb over the latter.

If you require a rack for your cages, the builder's laths mentioned before are just the thing. It may be best, however, to have them double thickness for strength, so screw two together all through, and put castors on the bottom so that the rack can be turned any way to face the light.

The long narrow fig boxes you see in grocer's shops make, when empty and washed and painted to match the cages, excellent seed boxes. They hold four of the small round glasses (like night-light glasses) enabling you to give birds a variety of seeds in separate vessels. The half-shell of a walnut, seccotined or glued to a small square of wood (an inch and a half of cigar-box lid does nicely) makes a "finger drawer" for tit-bits, egg food, etc., and it does not smash when dropped.

When the spring roller blind in your kitchen won't work, and you have to get a new one, don't throw the old rod away before you have cut one end off and taken out the long coiled wire spring. Fasten one end of the latter to the top of your aviary, and fix a few twigs at the other end, when you will have a perch like the top branches of a tree, swaying with the lightest touch—you can almost feel the breezes blowing!

To hold cuttle fish bone, or a piece of apple, simply drive a nail through a cigar-box lid and jab the apple, etc., on it.

Empty bottled-fruit bottles are handy to keep your seeds in; you can get labels for all kinds of seeds from CAGE BIRDS offices, ready gummed to fix on the bottles.

There are lots of other little devices which individual ingenuity will suggest, and that need cost you very little but the trouble of making, and to a bird lover the trouble of working at his hobby is just the kind of "trouble" he is looking for.

Be sure to read the "Illustrated Ideas" column in each week's CAGE BIRDS. Some of the ideas and devices will be new to you; others you may have been using for years, but not for just the same purpose as the contributor and his remarks may lead to further improvements on your own.

An Expert's Views on the Yorkshire Green Canary.

A Lecture by Mr. Geo. Bell

Many breeders advocate the matching of buff and buff together, in order to produce increased size, also length of feather; but personal observation and practical experience have taught me that the gain thereby is a very doubtful one in this variety. It may be very well with other varieties to put buff to buff, but when breeding Greens you must never do it, as I call it only "hit or miss" breeding. Birds of a very dark, dull shade, without any of the true Green colour, will be bred, and these are what I call "bastard greens." Strange to say, more of this colour will be found amongst the buffs. Birds of this sort are bad to breed from. If fanciers would only try a cross with the variegated, they would have better results, both for colour and feather.

It is Important to Keep the Young.

I advise the amateur to start with about six pairs, as by so doing he will understand and know more about his birds, and be able to remember each so well, that to repeat their family history will be like saying his A.B.C. If it can be managed, it is a good thing to keep two or three spare cages, to put the young birds from each pair in by themselves. Young fanciers should keep all their young birds, and moult them before any are sold, as young birds are very deceiving, and especially so are the Greens. You cannot always be sure as to the colour. You may have some young ones that you think will moult good coloured bulls, but you will be surprised to find that they moult good yellows. This is one reason why young birds should be kept till after they have moulted. Further, some youngsters do not look very promising, but after moulting they turn out gems.

During the moult, birds require great care; look well after them during that time, always giving them a little egg and biscuit every morning, not forgetting a pinch of salt. The seed hoppers should be always kept full of the best Spanish canary seed. Have the best seed that money can buy. It is impossible to be successful if you feed with cheap, dirty, and badly dried seed; in fact, if you want to foster disease amongst your birds, this is one of the surest methods of doing so, for bad seed will very soon make the inmates of the bird-room victims of diarrhœa and diseases of the digestive organs. I give a bath about three times a week during the moult; it makes a great improvement in the feather, and the birds are much stronger and closer in feather. Pay attention to the water fountains. Keep them clean, and let there be plenty of clean sand at the bottom of the cages.

Preserving the Plumage.

At the end of the moulting season the birds that are intended for the show bench must be accommodated in separate cages. If two show specimens are kept together, they are almost certain to damage each other's plumage, and this will, of course, never do, as the plumage plays such an important part under the judicial eye that it must be preserved unblemished. There are several important items which should be noted in preparing for exhibition. The birds should only be handled when you are compelled. I put a show cage in front of an ordinary one, and train the birds to run from one cage to another. This helps to get the birds as steady as possible. They need a little handling when in the show cage to get them to stand well up. I have seen some good birds at shows without a card through being a bit wild, so it will be seen that the steadier the birds are the better. How often we read in reports: "Badly shown, needs a little tubbing," and other similar remarks which betoken that the exhibitor who is the owner of the object of these criticisms has not yet passed out of that state of existence known as the "novitiate." With a view to help and encourage those young fanciers who are yet in that state this lecture is intended.

A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Bell was proposed by Mr. Rossthorne and seconded by Mr. Malone, who expressed the opinion that the members had listened to one of the most able and instructive lectures on the Green Canary from the most experienced fancier this [illegible] ever known. This was enthusiastically carried.

Questions and Answers.

(For rules see last week's "Cage Birds.")

THE following gentlemen represent CAGE BIRDS staff of ADVISORY EXPERTS. Queries must in no case be addressed to any of them individually, but to the Editor.

Canaries.—Claude St. John. British Birds, Mule and Hybrids—G. E. Weston. Foreign Birds—Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., M.B.N.H.S., &c., Wild Bird Line—H. Norman.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

SWELLING ON BREAST (A. N. E.).—I have no doubt whatever the swelling you describe is merely a mass of fat, and the bird is probably in a very much overfed condition, which would also quite account for her failure to breed successfully. Take her in hand at once and control both quantity and quality of her diet for a few weeks, as advised to "W. T. B." last week.

HIND TOES TURNED FORWARD (Morall).—Cut an eighth of an inch off the end of a rubber tube, similar to that used on a baby's feeding bottle, which will give you a small rubber ring. Make two—one for each foot. Catch the bird, and, holding the three front toes close together, put them through the ring, and then, holding the hind toe backward against leg, pass on ring past centre of foot and up the leg until it is nearly as far as the end of the hind toe, which will, of course, be included with leg in the ring. Leave ring there and treat the other foot similarly. When bird is released, the hind toes will be held back, more or less closely, against leg. Leave them on for two or three weeks, then give the bird small and almost round perches, just a little thicker than a lead pencil, and remove rings, when the perches will doubtless complete the cure. Leave the ordinary perches in whilst rings are on.

ANTI-BREEDERS AND NON-FEEDERS (Non-Feeder).—Your feeding seems fairly good, so if the stimulus of several good, vigorous courting males in succession cannot induce the hen to think of breeding, I'm afraid she is a forlorn hope. Is she much overfed? If not, you might try the effect of a little egg food, in which you have mixed two good fat mealworms finely chopped up every second day. Sprinkle with maw to tempt her to eat it readily. On the alternate days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts inga, gold of pleasure, sesame, and millet. In the water give six drops of tincture of gentian, and three of tincture of steel, three times a week for a fortnight. For non-feeders, treat as advised to "R. Rennie" in last issue. The sulphate of soda is preferable to Epsom salts in this case.

CLEAR EGGS (J. N. O.).—It is quite impossible to discover the cause of unfertile eggs in all cases. In many cases it appears to be nothing else but lack of affinity between the birds, in which case one can do nothing else but provide fresh mates. It is a pity you did not write a little sooner, before these last two hens went to nest again, as I should certainly have advised you to do this, i.e., mate the 1911 cock with one or both of the two-year-old hens, and one of the two-year-old cocks with the 1911 hen. If the other hen looks like going to nest again, adopt these tactics with her. Does pairing take place in the nest. If so, try to prevent it by placing something in to compel birds to remain on the side when pairing, until hen is expected to lay. You might also try a week or two of the treatment advised to "Non-Feeder," in this issue.

BALD HEAD AND NECK (M. T.).—In addition to the usual seed diet give a small teaspoonful of egg food or crushed biscuit with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion well mixed in it twice each week. Twice a week give a quarter teaspoonful of maw, and four times a week a good sized spray of seedy chickweed or shepherd's purse and a few dandelion seed heads. Once a week from now until bird commences to moult, slightly moisten the bare skin with lanocyllin. As soon as the moult begins, keep bird fairly warm in an equable temperature, give a staple diet of plain canary. Every second day give half-a-teaspoonful of summer rape, twice a week on the alternate days a similar quantity of a mixture of millet, blark rape, teazle, and linseed, and on the two remaining days a morsel of bread and milk lightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and then sprinkled with soft sugar. On these days give also a pinch of maw separately. In the drinking water add 20 drops of whisky, a few shreds of saffron, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepennypiece, three times a week. Continue this for the first four or five weeks of moulting, then you may discontinue the sulphur, and the things in water, and bird should finish up well and reproduce its lost plumage.

NERVOUS HEN AND LAZY PAIR (F. W. C.).—(1). It is quite likely the nervous condition is the only trouble. Unless you have only purchased her quite recently it is hardly likely that a youngster of this season would be sold you as a last year's bird. Give a staple diet of plain canary, and add separately a pinch of summer rape every second day, and on the alternate days for a fortnight a little egg or bread food prepared as advised to "Non-Feeder." Give a spray of green food daily, a pinch of Epsom salts in water for two days, and afterwards the gentian and steel advised to "Non-Feeder" for a week. Stop giving linseed. You must not put her in same cage as other pair unless you wish to destroy your last chance of getting a nest from them. (2) I am a trifle doubtful about the sex of the cock in this case. Treat them for fortnight or so the same as advised to 'Non-Feeder."

THESE THREE (Smo-bo).—(1) Feed same as advised to "Non Feeder," and keep a good lusty singing cock on hand, or even mate such a one with this hen if you do not particularly wish to adhere to the present mating. Give a few dandelion seed heads in addition to the green food. (2) It is only really necessary to withhold very succulent and relaxing green food, but few manage to discriminate properly. You may give a little of such things as half ripe plantain stalks, or seed heads of shepherd's purse in about a week after removal, and when young are feeding themselves freely on whole canary seed you may give them green food in limited quantities about three times a week, the same as the old birds, avoiding only very succulent things, and allowing none to remain to become stale. As you are not colour-feeding you may continue giving green food on this scale right through the moult. (3) I would not completely wean young of egg food. At about six weeks old gradually reduce it to a little twice a week. When moulting increase this again to four times a week.

YOUNG YORKSHIRES AILING (A Beginner).—Feed the birds the same as advised to "G. A. Thomas," except that you omit the groats from the evening mixture. Do not exceed the quantities named, and give a plantain stalk now and again, or in lieu of this a few dandelion seed heads or sprays of half-ripened seeds of shepherd's purse. In the drinking water give six drops of dandelion juice, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny piece, for one-half of each day for three consecutive days. Afterwards add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the water for a few days. This will doubtless set things right. You probably stopped the egg food a little too suddenly.

INJURED LEG (Crest).—All appearances point to a fracture in the upper part of leg—the so-called thigh—and I cannot advise you to interfere at all. I have seen some remarkable recoveries from such hurts by keeping the birds quite quiet and leaving the rest to nature. Keep the bird in a moderately small cage, and arrange perches low down, and quite convenient for the bird, and see that the food and water vessels are very easily accessible. In short, aim at making it convenient for the bird to get about on one leg with the least possible effort. Allow it to rest as much as it desires; don't flutter or disturb it at all until it begins to go about freely and use its damaged leg again voluntarily.

A DAMAGED "MAULER."—(G. T. W.).—I surmise this is a "technical" term for its beak. If the bird is very young an eighth of an inch would be a very large proportion of the whole. It depends solely upon the extent of the loss whether the bird will be able to feed itself, or whether the lost portion of the mandible will be reproduced. If less than half the length of the mandible is lost, the bird should feed itself tolerably well if you give it a regular supply of soft food daily for a time, and place it in a deep egg drawer, so that the bird may have a sufficient depth of food to thrust its lower mandible deep enough to get grip on the food with the upper portion. Make food crumbly, not sticky or sodden. The lost tip may be reproduced in the course of a few months if the bird can be kept going so long, but only time can prove this.

A DEADLOCK (F. T. C.).—It will be utterly useless putting the cock with the hen to help to rear the young whilst he is moulting, as he will render no assistance under such circumstances. Therefore, if the hen again goes off feeding with this brood, I'm afraid your only hope is to handrear the young as advised to "Beginner" in last issue. You might try the effect of feeding the hen, if not too late, the same as advised to "R. Rennie" in last issue, as this may keep her "on the feed." Whether or not she rears this brood, I would not advise you to attempt another nest this season. Do not check the moult.

CLAWS DRAWN UP (T. C. F.).—After some months standing I fear you will not be able to do much for the bird's relief. I cannot dogmatise about the cause without knowing something of the time or manner of its occurrence. I have seen such cases occur in a moment simply by the bird making a stumble in "taking" the perches when rushing excitedly about in play, when they are doubtless analogous to sprains. It would have been helpful had you sent a rough sketch showing the condition of the toes. Try the following for a fortnight, and report result; also give above-named particulars. Give at least two perches in cage; one flattened oval just large enough for toes to nearly completely encircle, and the other nearly round and tapering, like a penholder, ranging from the size of a lead pencil at one end to about twice this thickness at the other. Paint the foot once with tincture of iodine, and about twice each week afterwards paint it with extract of wych hazel.

SWELLING ON ABDOMEN (Puzzled).—This is most likely some displacement of the internal organs, and in the absence of very definite knowledge of its position and appearance, and also some idea of its origin or how long it has been coming, I cannot advise you to interfere with it in any way. If the bird is very valuable, your best course is to show it to a vet. or your medical man, and ask for an opinion. See that it does not become constipated. If this occurs, give a fair supply of groundsel or watercress, or add six drops of syrup of buckthorn to the water for a day or two. The bareness on swelling means nothing. No feathers really grow on the abdomen.

PERSISTENT EGG-BINDING (F. Nelsdoun).—There must be something radically wrong with your treatment, but you give no information at all on this point. Get "Canary Breeding for Beginners," or Part VIII. of "Our Canaries," and compare your treatment with what is there advised. The proper method of treating the trouble depends upon the contributing causes. To prevent it aim at keeping the hens in good hardy and active condition; not too fat, nor yet emaciated, and see they are well supplied with cuttlefish or crushed mortar. It is too late now to do anything with such hens, so turn your attention to getting them in good condition for next season. Turn them into flights and treat as advised to "G.T.G." in this issue.

DEATHS AND SEED (Tomato).—The seed sent is rather small, but plump, sweet, and very fair average quality. I do not think it can be the cause of your losses unless it is soiled by mice, and as the sample contained a "dropping" of mice, this is quite possible. The death of the Bengalese certainly makes things look suspicious, but I think the losses and illness must have been more general had it been the fault of the seed. You do not say how you have been treating the birds, so I will only refer you to the reply to "G. A. Thomas" in this issue. If you have any more deaths you would be well advised to send a body as early as possible to Mr. Yates for post-mortem.

YOUNG CRESTS THICK (G. H. Thomas). Your letter arrived much too late for a reply in last issue. Queries must reach the office early on Monday for a reply the same week. There must be something wrong with the way you prepare the bread and milk for the birds to reject it so completely. Try the following mode. Cut some small cubes of quite stale bread, drop them in a cup of cold milk, and allow to remain until saturated all through. Then take out on to a plate, drain of superfluous moisture, dust over with soft sugar, and finally sprinkle with maw seed, and serve out to birds. Give an unlimited supply of Canary seed in the hoppers, and place on top a little summer rape. Every morning give a little of the above bread and milk, about half-a-teaspoonful per bird. At mid-day give the same quantity of soaked or scalded rape, and towards evening a similar quantity of a mixture of equal parts cracked hemp, broken groats, and teazle. Allow no stale scraps of food to accumulate in cage. Remove at each feeding time what is left from the previous meal. Keep cages strewn with clean gritty sand. Give a few plantain stalks or seed heads of dandelion occasionally, but no other green food just yet. Add six drops of soda to water for one day, and afterwards three drops each of tincture of gentian, and tincture of calumba for a day or two.

ROLLER ILL AND DYING (A.C.).—There is probably something wrong with the feeding, but you do not give sufficient particulars on this point. When young are taken away, feed and treat them as advised to "G. A. Thomas" in this issue, and you may add a slight sprinkling of linseed and black rape to the afternoon mixture. Add six drops of dandelion juice and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny-piece to the water for one day, and afterwards three drops each of tincture of gentian and tincture of calumba for three or four days.

FITFUL MOULTING (G. T. G.).—The bird might have got a chill whilst sitting. See if it is subject to cold draughts occasionally—perhaps when a window or door is left open. It will be little, if any, use expecting anything further this season, so I advise you to turn her into a flight where she can get plenty of exercise. Feed on a staple of plain canary. Every second day give a small pinch of rape in the egg drawer, and on the alternating days give twice a week half a teaspoonful of mixed seed, and once a week a similar quantity of egg food, or crushed biscuit. Give a fairly liberal supply of green food daily. Continue the dietary until the moulting season begins, then when she goes into a proper moult put her on the usual moulting diet and treatment.

AN UNCOMMON COMPLAINT (R. Hayes).—Yes, the trouble is quite uncommon. It is the best recognised form of the complaint formerly known as the "pip," which so old an authority as Bechstein ascribes to a catarrh setting up an inflammatory condition of the membranes of the tongue, and consequent hardening. The cause undoubtedly lies in the general health and treatment of the bird. This you should look well into, and compare your treatment with one or other of the handbooks issued from this office, and see if you can discover where you go wrong. See that they are not exposed to cold chills, and treat the young generally as advised to "G. A. Thomas" in this issue. If any show signs of cold give first half a teaspoonful of fluid magnesia in the water for one day, and afterwards six drops of dandelion juice, and four drops each of acetate of ammonia and tincture of nux vomica, two days in every three for a week. Also well mix as much chlorate of potash as will cover a sixpence in a teaspoonful of honey, and give a little of this on a bit of bread stuck in the wires for them to peck at.

NOT SINGING (M. Biyth).—If you really want a bird to sing you are making a mistake not to take the dealer's offer to exchange it, which is certainly a generous one, considering the time you have had the bird. The prospects of it making a good singer I consider not very bright. Keep it in a fairly equable temperature, quite free from draughts and impure air. In addition to ordinary seed, give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkled with maw seed, every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of equal part inga, teazle, and gold of pleasure. Give a little green food daily. Continue this feeding two or three weeks. Add to the water every second day for a week 20 drops of whisky, ten of lemon juice, as much Epsom salts and chlorate of potash of each as will cover a threepenny-piece. If this does not make a considerable improvement write again in the course of three or four weeks.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

GREEN INDIAN PARROT (M. Rowland).—It is the meat and all sorts of oddments that is doing the mischief; stop these at once and diet the bird as under: Ripe fruit, plain biscuit, nuts, cuttlebone, grit and water, and a seed mixture of one quart canary, one pint each white millet and best oats; half a pint each hemp, dari, paddy rice, shelled nuts and sunflower seeds, and a gill each of grit (not sand) and chillies—well mix and keep a supply in cage. Give Dinneford's Magnesia and Byno-phosphates as advised to "Punlico" in this issue. Spray the bird twice weekly with quassia solution and rub a little Spratt's "Pennakura" over the bare parts occasionally. While keeping it out of draught give all the light and air possible, and give it outdoor treatment on all suitable days, choosing some unexposed position for it. Also give it some green food, lettuce, seeding grass, etc., and report progress in two or three weeks.

YOUNG GREY PARROT ILL (Baddesley).—Give a little milk sop as a medicine; it must not be continued indefinitely, but at any rate for a week, if it is still living when you receive this, break up a little bread, sprinkle with sugar and then with Mellin's Food, add a teaspoonful of Nestle's Milk and sufficient boiling water to properly mix it—as soon as the bird commences to eat again freely, renew the supplies of boiled maize, which for the present should be dusted with flowers of sulphur after water has been drained away (boiled maize only keeps fresh one day) also a tin of seed. You had better send for our Nutshell "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our manager; this will tell you how to feed as soon as it is eating again freely. You give me no idea of the state of its bowels, these must move freely, yet not be watery-loose; give three drops of Dunneford's Magnesia direct to the beak every two hours till full relief has been given. As a stimulant, offer the bird a little very weak brandy and water (chilled) two or three times a day. Keep it warm, but yet not out of reach of air and light. The voidings should be removed as made. If it is alive when this reaches you give the milk sop at once, and then follow on with the other remedies if you can get it to eat a little and the bowels moving regularly, it may be saved. It is undoubtedly suffering from some septic infection received during, and protection following, importation. Report progress a week hence, with full details.

INDIAN PARROT (Pimlico).—I fear you are applying to me too late, as after two years the bird is more or less confirmed in its habit. Spray twice weekly with quassia solution and while you must rigidly keep the bird out of draught, give it all the light and air possible, standing it out of doors in some unexposed position on all suitable days. Stop the tea-sop, but not suddenly, so use chemical food and hot water to make the sop, in lieu of the tea. Give the following seed mixture: one quart canary seed, one pint each white millet and oats; half a pint each paddy rice, hemp, sunflower, dari, shelled nuts; a gill each of grit (not sand) and chillies—well mix, and keep a supply in cage. Keep the bowels moving freely by giving Dinneford's Magnesia as often as possible—one teaspoonful to the ordinary supply of drinking water—but the bird must not be secured; on other days put the same quantity of Byno-phosphates in the water—you must not use a metal drinker. Keep cuttlebone in the cage, also rotten wood and cotton reels to help keep it occupied, and rub a little of Spratt's "Pennakura" over the bare areas. You will have to persevere, as progress will be slow. The bird can have fruit and plain biscuits ad lib.

DOVES, ETC., (R.H.W.). The White-winged Zenaida Dove (Melopelia leucoptera) is about 11 inches in length, of a soft drab colour above, whitish below, with white wing bars and a beautiful golden-purple sheen on the neck. West Indies, etc. The Harlequin Dove (Æna capensis) rejoices in a plentitude of names the Cape, Masked and Naquama Dove, are all names which refer to Æ. capensis. They hail from Tropical and Southern Africa. The cock is brownish-grey, with a black mark over the face, a black band crosses the throat and two others cross the rump; the long tail is black and white, and the breast and abdomen white. A patch of metallic steel blue adorns each wing. The hen is browner and has no black mask. The Talpocoti is a small and pretty dove, various lines of cinnamon, with wing spots of metallic steel-blue. The hen is duller and greyer than her mate (S. America). The Passerine is another very pretty and minute dove (N. Cent. and S. America). Colour pinkish vinous, crown and nape bluish, quills cinnamon; on the wings are several metallic steel-blue blotches; length 6 inches. If you can procure a pair (advertise in "C.B." for them) the Diamond Dove is one of the most beautiful species I know its plumage is soft pearl and cinnamon-grey, the wings thickly spotted with pure white spots (Australia). Your aviary when complete should look very nice and prove of great interest.

JAVA SPARROWS (Pom).—Canary, white and spray millet, crushed oats and paddy rice, the two latter in limited quantity; green-food.—lettuce, chickweed, groundsel, seeding grass, etc.; when they are feeding young supply dry ants' eggs and a little of some good soft food mixture. Of course you cannot meddle now till they have finished with this nest, but if you have ordinary straight perches in take these out and put a twiggy branch at each end, and so force them to take exercise by flying from one to the other. Green-food should be given fresh twice daily while young are being fed. I presume they are Greys, if they do not breed, mate a White hen with your Grey cock and you will soon get a breeding strain and the bulk of the young will be pure Greys.

AILING GREY PARROT (D.M.L.).—Give the Parrot some Dinneford's Magnesia and water in equal parts—offer this instead of the ordinary drinking water, till she has had one or two good drinks of it in the course of the day, and continue to offer it till the bowels have been well relieved; then give byno-phosphates—one teaspoonful to two tablespoonfuls of water—and continue this till the indisposition has passed. You should always keep the bowels moving freely, not loose, by an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia. As the bird is sulking at its food, offer the following: take a stale crust of household bread, break it into several pieces about one inch long, put over it half-a-teaspoonful of byno-phosphates, sprinkle with sugar, and pour over as much boiling water as the bread will absorb; supply to the bird when cool—it must be prepared fresh daily. You must not use a metal drinker while giving drugs. You give me very little to go upon—what is the character of the voidings? Are the bowels loose or constipated? Does the bird show any signs of distress? Describe fully any symptoms there may be and I will try and help you further. You must give the magnesia to relieve the bowels, then if the bird appears to need a stimulant, offer a little very weak brandy and water (chilled), alternately with the phosphate mixture.

BUDGERIGARS (G.M.W.).—Re the slaughtered young birds, you can only solve the mystery by observation, either there is an unnatural parent among the Budgerigars, or some other bird is doing the mischief—the Conure is a likely culprit; I have never found Rosellas or Cockatiels to meddle with Budgerigars, young or old; but Conures are not always safe. Re the hen Budgerigar you found covered with blood, if it was not injured in any way it looks as if she were the culprit, and I advise catching her and turning her loose in the garden, she will find plenty of seeding grass to live upon if other deaths occur you can only watch till you catch the culprit. Re the ailing cocks, catch this bird and put it in a roomy cage till fit again—give it two drops of tasteless castor oil direct to the beak, every three hours till full relief has been given, then put it on a course of byno-phosphates, a little in the drinking water daily; give the bird seeding grass, as much as it will eat and the usual seeds—keep it isolated till it is quite fit again. It would be well to let your local vet. see it, as if the swelling arises from some internal, malignant growth, it would be kindest to painlessly destroy it. You could try fomenting it with a warm decoction of camomile flowers, but the bird must be well dried afterwards, and kept strictly out of draught till dry. Are your birds at all crowded? What is the area of the floor space and the height of your aviary?

PULLING OUT ITS FEATHERS (Amy D.).—Budgerigars under the conditions of cage life seldom get the opportunity of taking a bath, and a soft spraying with chilled water is advisable twice weekly. Again, Budgerigars in a cage seldom use their wings, and this tells against them greatly. Strip your cage of formal perches and put a twiggy spray at each end of cage, and if you can arrange the sprays so that the bird must fly from one to the other, so much the better for the bird. Your diet is about right, but maw-seed should be given in very limited quantity, and but seldom; a few crushed oats would be better, and supply as much seeding grass as they will eat. Budgerigars drink but little, so till full relief has been given let their drinking water consist of Dinneford's Magnesia and water in equal parts, once it has taken full effect, only give it once a week, and on other days put one teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates into the daily supply of drinking water; continue the above for a month. It will doubtless help if on all suitable days they were stood outside in some unexposed position. Give them a piece or two of dry plain biscuit to nibble at, and do not omit to keep cuttlebone and girt (not sand) in the cage—sand can be used for cage tray, but grit should be either sprinkled on top, or a small tin of it be kept continually in the cage. Treat as above for two or three weeks and then report progress; the bird is evidently in a heated condition, keep its bowels moving freely by the use of magnesia, but at the same time the voidings must not be allowed to remain watery loose.

BUDGERIGARS' BATH (S. R.).—(1) Budgerigars in a state of nature bathe by rolling about in wet grass and herbage, and in the aviary they will do the same, when their acrobatic abandon is most interesting. In your aviary you should keep several shallow pans of growing grass available; well water these through the rose of a water can, and then place them in the cage, and you will soon be much interested in seeing your Budgies take a natural tub. The only alternative is a soft spraying. (2) A shallow, whole plate photographic developing dish (porcelain) makes an excellent bath for all classes of birds, and is easily kept clean. (3) Providing the room get an average amount of sun during the winter, no artificial heat will be required; if you give artificial heat at all, aim at keeping a minimum of 45 degrees F., and you must arrange good ventilation without draught.

YOUNG AMAZON (Green Amazon).—I think you will be all right with this bird, but do not give tea and milk. Let it have what boiled maize it requires (this only keeps fresh one day); boil till soft, drain off all water lightly, dust with flowers of sulphur, and when cool supply to the bird. Get some glyco-thymoline, and wash the nostrils twice daily with a dilute solution. It will not hurt the bird if a little should be swallowed, a mop camel hair brush is a good utensil to use. Examine its mouth, and if this is at all furred, put a little honey and borax inside with a small blunt stick; it will help to keep the mouth clean. Keep the bowels moving freely by an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia as required (see other replies), and also put half a teaspoonful of byno-phosphates in two teaspoonfulls of water (prepare fresh daily), and offer this to the bird to drink three or four times a day; unless the thirst is very inordinate, let it take what it wants. Seed mixture: one quart canary seed; one pint each white millet and best oats; half-pint each hemp, paddy rice, dari, shelled nuts, maize, and sunflower seeds; one gill each grit (not sand), and chillies. Well mix and keep a supply in the cage. Also supply cuttlebone, plain biscuit, and as much ripe fruit as it cares to take. Do not give any tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps or animal food of any kind whatever. Shall be pleased to hear how the bird progresses.

YOUNG BUDGERIGARS AND MOULT (Parrakeet).—(1) Give seeding grass, chickweed, groundsel, etc., liberally, as much as they will eat. Also supply every other day a few kibbled oats in addition to what you are now giving. During the period of the moult a tonic never comes amiss—a little byno-phosphates in the drinking water is as good as any. At this period the bowels should be kept moving freely, not loose, a little Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water as required is about the best to keep them well regulated. (2) Sand is the best, but if this is inconvenient, then the next best is peat moss litter broken small. (3) If they will take a little raw carrot, it will vary the diet and it is quite wholesome for them. (4) Yes, but they should not be subjected to strong sunlight, neither should they be placed entirely in the shade, nor yet be subjected to strong or cold winds, at the same time outdoor life, as much as you can give on above lines will greatly assist to keep them fit and strong. Do not have formal, stiff perches in your cage, a twiggy branch at each end, so placed that they must fly to get from one to the other will tend greatly to their well being. The period of the first moult is a very variable one, about a month in fairly favourable weather.

AMAZONS COMBATIVE (D. E. Pithie).—Providing they are not tearing each other leave them as they are to get over their present mood, but of course, irrespective of the conditions of purchase you must not leave them together to mutilate themselves. It is quite obvious that till the mood passes they must not be out while the maid is in the room—it is quite impossible to account for these moods, as a rule save for some good cause they do not turn against friends, though I must admit a Hawk-headed Parrakeet I had did indulge in short periods of unfriendliness with those it was usually on good terms with; I should imagine the mood would pass. Has the maid materially changed her attire? If so, this might account for it Parrot nature is fathomless. If you could give your birds a large cage and a barrel this would be a good change for them and add to your amusement and interest in them. The only thing for you to do is, watch them and if they begin to tear each other part them, keeping them in cages side by side for a time, and while the mood lasts do not let the maid come into too close proximity to them, but let them gradually become accustomed to her again.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

FOUR SEEDS (G. Dent). The canary and hemp seeds are very good indeed. The rape is also good, but I have seen maw seed that I liked better, though the sample you send is certainly by no means a bad one.

A GREENFINCH (Greenie). Whether cock or hen, the bird will be all right caged by itself. The cock is much greener than the hen, and carries much more yellow in wings and tail. The hen is quite brownish (or mouse-coloured) by comparison, and has practically no yellow edges to the tail feathers. The general colour varies, however, with age.

IN A LARGE CAGE (No nom de plume).—Your name or nom de plume has apparently gone with another part of your letter to another specialist. You might keep the Greenfinch, two Linnets, and Canary together, but the other cock Canary and the hen should certainly be by themselves. Curiously enough, however, you do not state the size of the cage, and everything depends on this. If a really large cage (as it needs to be), then they would sing. You ought to have given fuller particulars, such as how the birds are kept at present, whether they are house-moulted, etc. All these things affect the position.

FEATHERLESS PATCHES (L. H.).—It often happens, as in your case, that this loss of feathers occurs in birds which are in full song and in vigorous health. Anoint the places three or four times (once daily) with a very small quantity of sulphur ointment. No need to do anything else, or to worry, for the plumage will be replaced at the moult, now near at hand. I have often thought that "high-feeding," consequent upon the breeding season, has something to do with the tendency of muling Britishers to develop bare patches about the head and neck. It is not always red-mite or grey lice.

A JAY (Clarence).—I dealt fully with the feeding of young Jays a week or so ago; substitute thoroughly soaked (boiling water) puppy biscuits, mashed up, for the bread. For adult food, note another reply given this week. The cage should be as large as you can manage; there is no limit to the size. A Jay certainly needs plenty of exercise. The best floor covering is a thick layer of peat moss litter, sold at most corn and seed stores. Jays are fond of eggs, but don't trouble to boil them. I need hardly mentioned that they don't find them boiled when they are pilfering nests out in the woods.

A GOLDFINCH'S EYES (H.D.).—Get a chemist to put up the following lotion: sulphate of zinc 5 grains, laudauum 10 drops, rose water 1 ounce. First wash the eyes in comfortably warm water, then dry carefully with a soft cloth, afterwards letting one drop of the lotion fall on each eye, and be kind of lightly painted over it by the aid of a tiny camel-hair pencil-brush, previously moistened. Do this at least twice daily. This should quickly improve matters.

A YOUNG CUCKOO (T. Tong).—If you take my advice, you will give up the idea of trying to keep the young Cuckoo. Cuckoos are the most unsatisfactory "pets" I know of. They are troublesome to cater for, seldom live more than a few months, are very dirty in a cage, generally broken and bedraggled looking in plumage, and inactive (or lazy) in disposition: they have hardly one redeeming feature to set off against this string of failings. Even the task of getting a young Cuckoo to feed itself is no light one: it will squawk all day for someone to go and pop the food into its mouth, although quite able to fend for itself and with food put an inch from its nose. To sum up, I consider a Cuckoo thoroughly unsuitable to cage life. If you want a real pet, try a young cock Blackbird.

MAGPIES AND JAYS (Novice).—It would not be correct to say that Magpies and Jays become as good (fluent) talkers and mimics as Grey Parrots, but a bird of either species taken young and well trained, in course of time will speak very plainly and well, mimic many sounds, and be a source of much pleasure and amusement to its owner and friends. The Jay is not quite so large as the Magpie, and has not so long a tail. It is a handsome bird; its coloration is, broadly speaking: body, warm cinnamon; crown of head, streaked with black; tail, black; wings, mainly black, but most beautifully chequered with blue and black towards the butts; at each side of the throat is a black "moustachial" streak. As regards the food of the Jay, note another reply given by me this week.

IN AN AVIARY (J. H. Tongue).—I am not favourably impressed with anyone's chances of breeding hybrids under the conditions you name, viz., many different species of birds kept in the same aviary. The aviary would need to be exceptionally large; and yours hardly answers to this description. However, you are not over-crowding, though the Chaffinch and Bramblefinch are more or less "passengers," as the chances of their breeding with the hens you possess are very slender. You might with advantage take out the cock Canary and turn in cock Linnet and cock Redpoll (a mealy for preference). You can only steady the birds in question by keeping them for a period in smallish box cages (Finch stock cages, about 16 x 10 x 8 or 9), in a room wherein people are constantly moving about.

A BACKYARD AVIARY (Beginner).—In the absence of rough sketch or plan, I find it somewhat difficult to gather an idea of the style of your aviary. I can say at once, however, that it won't answer at all without a considerable part of the top being covered (made weather-proof), and at least one end should be entirely boarded up, with the same object in view; it would be better, too, to have a portion of the front protected. Birds must be protected from rain, cold winds, etc., in captivity, or they will not thrive properly. The area mentioned is very spacious, and the place would comfortably hold 60 to 70 small birds, and even more. If you can make it snug and provide against rain and draughts, I think you would do well to mix hardy foreign seedeaters with the Britishers (our Mr. Page would give you a list of such); they will lend colour and variety to the collection. I do not mean to convey by this, however, that our British seedeaters will thrive under more open conditions; quite the contrary is the actual fact. As regards British, you could gradually get together the following species: Gold, Green, Bull, Chaff, Haw, and Bramblefinches, Lesser and Mealy Redpolls, Twite, Linnet, Siskin, Tree and House Sparrows, Pine Grosbeak, Corn, Yellow, Cirl, Reed, Ortolan, Black-headed, Snow, and Lapland Buntings. Both English and Siberian Goldies and Bullies should be included.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

H. W. C.—Enteritis due to digestive disturbances, was responsible for your loss. Bird had possibly been doing itself too well.

"SADDENED."—Pulmonary hemorrhage from rupture of one of the blood vessels given off from the lungs was the immediate cause of death of Bullfinch, originating primarily in congestion of the vessels.

J. T. A.—I suspect septic fever, but cannot be absolutely positive, owing to putrefactive changes which had occurred during transit. There were some marked symptoms of this disease, but absent features that would render diagnosis certain. Some of the organs where symptoms generally occur were so destroyed as to be useless for examination. Shall be pleased to examine further if you will send a bird freshly dead and securely packed.

"PARAGON."—There was no trace whatever of infection, beyond inflammation of the oviduct, and the remains were quite normal. The body was certainly emaciated, indicative of high fever, but all other features pointing to infection were absent.

A. J. NICHOLSON.—Your treatment was correct, but probably the case was too far advanced or treatment too long delayed. Ptomaine poisoning was the cause, pointing to impurities in the food. You must observe thorough cleanliness, regular and systematic attention to feeding, watering utensils, together with attention to the cage bottoms as food lying here, particularly egg food, rapidly undergoes ptomaine changes. By observing the above precautions and by the use of a little permanganate of potash daily in the drinking water I have little doubt that your difficulty will soon be overcome.

C. PARSONS.—Although your bird displayed signs of illness a few hours prior to death, there was existing disease of the liver. It had undergone fatty degenerative changes, and as a result from loss or alteration of its secretions the bowels had suffered, and well marked enteritis set in. It was this inflamed condition of the bowels that caused the immediate symptoms and induced death. Probably your diet is a little too lavish, or too rich in fats, and I would advise the elimination from it of linseed, together with the occasional administration in the drinking water of a few grains of Glauber salts.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

M. Fish, W. Stone, Miss Fox, and Others.—We are much obliged to you for the newspaper cuttings sent us.

A. E. Long. Many thanks; will utilise in due course. Shall be glad to receive the matter respecting egg-binding whenever convenient to yourself.

John Stewart. We are in receipt of your postcard, but are sorry to say we cannot make out to what matter you are referring. Will you please explain, and we will make any necessary correction.

A Greenfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid Successfully Reared.

Sir,—I should like to inform you that Mr. A. Butler, of Dawley, Salop, has had the good fortune to rear a Greenfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid. It is a cock bird, seven weeks old, and bred of British stock birds. It is a splendid shape, with Bullie's cap and wings and Greenie's breast and back; and it stands as bold as any Yorkshire Canary. H. Hornblower.

The 54th National Crystal Palace Cage Bird Show.

Sir,—The next (1913) Crystal Palace Show will be held on Friday, Feb. 7, to Tuesday, Feb. 11. I shall be pleased to hear from Specialist Club secretaries, or any others who may have suggestions to make, or who may wish to guarantee classes. The L. and P.O.S. committee will meet to consider communications during the third week in July.

A Recipe for Egg Cake.

Is it Useful in Colour Feeding?

Sir,—Mr. Hill inquires in Cage Birds of 22nd ult. if the egg cake which I recommended for the rearing and feeding of Canaries is a good medium for the giving of colour food. I regret I am unable to say if it is so, never having used colour food. I should think, however, that it would prove an excellent medium, as the colour food would be distributed so completely with the other ingredients, and it should, moreover, prove extremely palatable to the birds. I think it would be well worth while Mr. Hill giving it a trial.

Chaffinch Rears Young in a Crystal Palace Aviary.

The Interesting Procedure Described.

Sir,—About five weeks ago I wrote you of an experiment I was trying with my hen Chaffio paired to a Goldie, and who had built her nest in an ordinary nest box in the smaller division of a Crystal Palace aviary. I wanted to see if she would rear a young Chaffie which I took, first day of hatching, from a nest in our garden, and placed in my Chaffie's nest. She proved a splendid mother, feeding and tending the young one until last Friday, over a month, when for the first time I noticed she had ceased to feed, but as she had been busy building another nest in the same box as before, I suppose she thought it was time the baby managed for itself. The Chaffie laid her third egg this morning, and has commenced to sit again. The young one is, I think, a hen, for which I am thankful, hoping to use it next year for Hybrid breeding, if all goes well. It is a promising child, having thriven well from the first. The first five days Chaffie fed it on egg-food, "Cecto," and any amount of wild seeds. On the fifth day, to compare the babies, I took a peep at the wild ones being reared in their natural state in the garden. I did not then feel quite so pleased with my Chaffie's foster baby; though it seemed well and healthy, it was not so big as "Nature's children." Forthwith I altered Chaffie's menu-ard, adding gentles and mealworms to the diet; this greatly pleased both mother and youngster, and the baby was fledged out of the nest on the 16th day. (The brothers and sisters outside left their home when 12 days old). Chaffie kept the nest spotless, and I think she intended using it again for her second lot of eggs, but master Goldie thought otherwise, for I saw him one morning turn it completely out on the floor. However, being a sensible female, she said nothing, but started building again, and has constructed a sweet little nest composed of bits of cotton wool, green moss, and a few hairs. I was most interested watching her feeding the young with the mealworms. The hen would take one from my hand, rub it on the grit of the cage floor, bite off both ends of the mealworm, and then pass it backwards and forwards through her beak several times. Then up to the nest she would go with it crosswiso in her beak, and so soon as the baby gaped she put the mealworm in its mouth and then pulled it out again as though giving it a taste. This she used to do about three times, finally leaving it in the baby's throat, who thereupon gave a gulp, and I saw no more of the mealworm. As the baby grew older the mother passed the mealworms through her own beak less frequently, until, at last, Miss Baby used to take one herself from my fingers and try to swallow it whole, when downstairs flew Mama and hastily drew the mealworm out of baby's mouth, and after nibbling it herself, and cracking the skin she then gave it to the baby again. It was amusing to watch them, especially as the baby used to wag its little head vigorously from side to side when being fed, instead of fluttering its wings as young Canaries do. It is five weeks old to-day and as lively as a cricket, though it is already moulting in nest feathers. It is gradually being weaned off its insect diet, feeding again on "Cecto," Finch mixture, and a little of egg-food, with occasionally a few flies or large moths if we can catch any. I wonder if Mr. Andrews, who wrote in Cage Birds, has succeeded in rearing any young Chaffies in his aviary cage? K. Tipper.

"Trapping" Snails.

Sir,—In your correspondence column, Mr. A. Cooper writes that he watered a large garden fifteen minutes before it went dark, and then searched the ground, and the results were 100 three nights in succession. My garden is about thirty yards by eight yards, and the first night I tried the following plan I caught 1,200, the next night about 800, etc., etc. My plan is to cut strips of brown paper about six inches square, and put a little bran in the centre of each, and place these about the garden, just before dark after rain. After an hour or two, if there are snails in the garden, the papers will soon be covered with the snails. I caught them because they were eating all my pansies, etc.

Does Thunder Kill Unhatched Young?

Sir.—It would be interesting to hear the experiences of fanciers as to whether thunder and other noises really affect eggs. In Sunderland early last Sunday morning (June 23) we had a very severe thunderstorm, which fairly rattled the window panes, and on the following Tuesday afternoon we got another dose. The room which I use for breeding looks out on a busy road, and a little further on there is a railway, and yet, in spite of all this noise, I find that yesterday and to-day (27th and 28th) my eggs are hatching out quite all right. I have seen it stated in some books that thunder causes the young to die in the shell. What can other fanciers relate?

Douglas E. Sayce.

Starling Abandons the Old Life.

Sir,—I thought the little incident related below would be interesting to lovers of birds. About four months ago a Starling fell down a ventilator which was let into the wall of the sitting room. It was there all day and night, and did not seem able to get out, so we had the ventilator removed to release it. As the bird had given us so much trouble, we thought we would keep it as a pet. It has thrived exceedingly well, though very wild for a time. The other day, as I was cleaning the cage in the garden it got out and flew away into the fields. I thought that was the end of "Rachel," as we called her. I left the cage in the garden and went indoors in disgust. An hour later I had occasion to go into the garden, and to my astonishment "Rachel" was sitting in her cage as if she had never been out of it. Does this seem as if birds were unhappy in cages?

THE STOCK BOOK.

IT MAKES BIRD BREEDING EASY.

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

It simplifies the operations in the Birdroom and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. It affords facilities for the recording of the complete pedigree of all your birds; of your experiences during the season; an account of every bird reared. Contains both Pedigree, Breeding, Young Bird and Show Registers of simple and unique character: Cash and Profit and Loss Accounts for the year. Gives valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

DON'T WORRY!

From a drawing] [by C. T. Humphrey.

1: Should a husk of canary seed blow into your eye don't get excited; you are sure to be able to see again in a day or two. 2: If your champion Crest contrives to ruin his headpiece on the eve of the cup show, don't be annoyed; it is sure to grow again by the next season.

The Type of the Present-day Norwich Plainhead.

Action of Fanciers of Norwich Opens Interesting Discussion.

Sir,—How refreshing! Once again they are telling us we can "make things easy" by hammering in the Crest-bred infusion with a view to improving the head and neck of the Norwich Plainhead. And then the writer who speaks of this "easy" method, in the next breath tells us we shall immediately get "the long, coarse feathered, beetle browed and long-tailed bird." We knew it, some of us, years ago, when it paid some people well to preach it but never practice it. I am truly surprised at some of these gentlemen. They talk of £70, £20, £15, and £10 Plainheads as glibly as if they were every day occurences. My word! It is enough to make anybody laugh, to hear about the 99 to 100 chances that some of the winners at the Palace were bred by some of the breeders of Norwich. The chances are 100 to 99 they were not. And now we are asked to take our lessons on the type of the Norwich from the breeders of the Norfolk city. Why they have been out of the hunt for years, practically. Even the Scotch breeders can lick them hollow. Are they out for an advertisement?

Amused.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. F. Cullington, I still maintain that in my former letter I only found fault with two birds which had done a lot of winning; but he is wrong when he affirms that I am at a loss to know who bred the birds I mentioned. I think I am right in saying that they were bred by the owners. As for the winners at the Palace, he claims that the majority of them were bred by the working men of Norwich. Does that account for them being of the wrong type for Mr. Woollard and his friends? I don't in the least wish to controvert his statement that Mr. Mackley sold a bird for £70, but do let us keep to the present day, and not to what happened in the far, far past, when money seemed to have been much more plentiful than it is to-day. When Mr. Mallet mentions Mr. Mackley, Mr. Freestone and Mr. Cullington as well-known judges, does he mean that they are well-known as judges in Norwich? When I said "well-known judges," I meant what I said, not judges of local shows. He says that although the N.P. has undergone a tremendous change this last ten years, he sees no reason why the change is detrimental to the bird. Nor do I. That is what I have been trying to show Mr. Woollard and his friends, that, taken as a whole, the change has not been detrimental to the Norwich Plainhead; and if he has written that sentence with the idea of bearing out the statements of the pessimists from Norwich, I fear they will think that he would have helped them better if he had had the wisdom to observe that silence which is golden. He mentions a lecture delivered by a Mr. Robinson, in which the lecturer is stated to have said that the majority of exhibits are more like Lancashires and Crestbreds. My argument is not on the exhibits, but on the winners, and it doesn't follow that because the majority of exhibits at a show (although I don't admit that) are like Crestbreds that the winners are. Those sort the feathery ones—are usually at the bottom of the class in shows that I have visited. Anyhow, before a man can, with any effect, pose as an authority on any given variety, he must show that he can and does breed and exhibit winners. I take it that as he lectured before the Ardwick Society, he lives somewhere in the vicinity, and although I have looked up the show reports from that district, I have failed to find the name Robinson among the winners. If Mr. House, Mr. Gardner, or Mr. Robson, who are experts, or say either Mr. Spillman, Mr. J. Trengove, or Mr. W. Booth, who are big winners and breeders, were to have said the same in a lecture, then we, the Fancy at large, would have paid more attention, and their words would have had more effect. Mr. Robinson's ideas of the type of the Norwich seems to be old-fashioned, and out-of-date. I really think that before introducing his opinions into controversy, Mr. Mallett would have been wiser to have studied the axiom mentioned previously.

Sub Rosa.

[Correspondents must please keep to the point. Further we have re-read Mr. Cullington's letter and find that he did not claim that the majority of the winners at the Palace were bred in Norwich. His words were "the chances are 99 to 100 that some of the winners at the Palace were bred by some of the working-men breeders in Norwich."—Editor.].

Sir,—I notice Mr. F. Cullington advising "Novice" to visit a few shows in Norwich to pick up a wrinkle or two. I should like to inform friend Cullington that being in Norwich last October with a few hours to spare, a friend and I made up our minds to visit the bird show then being held in, I believe, the Corn Exchange. What did we see? The highest honours leaving Norwich, both in the Canary, British and Foreign bird classes. I also notice he says some have sold birds up to £70, and some have refused other big prices, also that one belonging to a working-man was claimed at £10. Now, Mr. Cullington, were these birds bred in Norwich? I venture to say they were not. Mr. Woollard says that Norwich fanciers have their reason's for not exhibiting away; well, I will leave that to readers themselves to sum up.

Novice.

An Egg Within an Egg.

Curious Laying Freak.

Sir,—I am sending you particulars of a curiosity in egg laying by a Canary. A yellow Norwich hen, bred by me, and now in the possession of Mr. W. Hodgkinson in this town (Derby), laid an exceptionally large egg, over one-and-a-quarter inches in length. This egg was accidentally broken by the owner of the bird, when, lo, and behold, inside this was another egg, of a normal size. I enclose the egg and the broken shell of the large one, and if not damaged in transit they will, I think, be of interest.

Wm. Reader.

[The larger egg, sent by Mr. Reader, which enclosed the one of normal type, is of huge size. Cases of "an egg within an egg" have been notified several times before, and of one we published a photograph.—Editor.].

A Hybrid Breeder's Good Fortune.

Sir,—I have a fine Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid, a fortnight old, also two more fertile eggs, due to hatch the end of this week. I also sat a reliable hen Canary on five more eggs yesterday, June 30th. I have also ten very fine Greenfinch—Canary Mules well on colour food, and I expect to get some Siskin-Greenfinch Hybrids. This Greenfinch is rear the Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid.

The Fancy in Manchester.

Sir,—I was surprised to see "Fancier's" letter regarding the secretaryship of the North Manchester C.B.S. I beg to inform him that there has been no change. When there is we shall announce the same in CAGE BIRDS for the benefit of "Fancier" and others. What we have done is to appoint Mr. W. H. Tansey our club correspondent, to deal with shows, lectures, etc., so that is why his name has been seen so often. I think some of the credit for the success of our late show is due to Mr. Tansey and the stewards.

The Cause of Eggs "Drying Up."

Sir,—Re the letter by Mr. Ball, on the turning of eggs when taken out of the nest, it is not necessary, in my opinion, to turn them (every one, of course, is entitled to their own opinion, and to do the best for themselves), for however much one turns an egg, providing it is on its side, the germ always comes to the top. A bird "turning" its eggs is in my opinion only getting them into a position so that it can rest comfortably on them. I never take the eggs out, but let them remain, for the birds never sit close for the first two days. I never use linings, for last year I lost several nests through hens sweating. This year I have given cow hair, and both hens that sweated last year have not "turned a hair," and have been excellent mothers. Linings in my estimation are too close and prevent air getting through, but with hair, air can get through. One must be careful with the hair, for the hen will lay an egg, then cover it over to finish the nest. If nest is not made to one's satisfaction, on the evening of second day pull some hair to pieces, put it in a nest pan and turn it round on top of the knob of the bedstead, and I warrant you will get a nest to suit the most fastidious hen going.

A. E. LONG.

Sir,—I am afraid the theory of F. G. Ball's old fancier friend upon this subject will not bear investigation, for the following reasons, viz.: Eggs which are removed and kept in meal, or sawdust, or oat-husk, or even upon a layer of cotton wool, are just as apt to "dry up" as those which are kept in bran; moreover, eggs which are not removed at all are also just as apt to "dry up"; so also are eggs laid in good nests in wooden boxes, in lined nest pans, or any other form of nest. Most important of all, this "drying-up" also occurs with wild birds' eggs in a perfectly natural state, as I have personally had ocular proof. In my young bird-nesting days I well remember one occasion in particular when I flushed a Hedge Accentor off her nest, which contained four eggs apparently "sitting hard." Upon breaking one to ascertain stage of incubation, with an eye to timing a future visit, I found the contents dried up and thoroughly hard. Further investigation proved all four eggs to be in the same condition, and the appearances suggested that they had been sat upon well beyond the normal time of fourteen days. I cannot therefore support the theory of this old fancier. By the way, how would he account for one or two eggs in a clutch "drying up," and the others remaining quite fluid and clear or hatching? This is a fairly common occurrence. When eggs are removed there is certainly no better way of keeping them than in bran. Of the other theories mentioned in F. G. Ball's letter I will only say—do not put too much confidence in them.

HOW TO MAKE OPEN SHOWS PAY.

Do Societies Indulge in Needless Expenditure?

Sir,—I was very much interested in reading the report of the last meeting of the Newcastle C.B.S. in your issue of June 29 re "How to make an open show a financial success." Might I be allowed in a friendly way to give my views on the matter? The most important point in running an open show is in keeping the expenses down, and, apart from expensive judges, I think this could be done to a large extent by reducing the printer's bill. But how? Take the Newcastle catalogue of last year; you will find over six pages of closely printed matter devoted to specialist clubs' conditions of competition. I submit that this expense should be borne by the clubs and not by the show. It is an open question whether a show benefits by having the patronage of specialist clubs, but in any case their members could be notified by the club secretary where, and under what conditions, their patronage is given; they only being interested, a simple announcement could be made in show schedule that the show was under the patronage of the Y.C.C., B.F.C.C., etc., etc. The question of printing catalogues will have to be seriously considered by show committees in the near future; they are a curse to most open shows. I have known a society have 400 printed and not sell 100. I should imagine that the Newcastle society would be glad to reduce their printing account by one-half. I believe that last year it was nearly £30, and if the Newcastle show, with 1,800 entries, does not pay, what chance have others? I think a scheme could be devised to take the place of catalogues to a certain extent (I have my own idea of the matter), and I would like, with your permission, to have the views of show secretaries and officials on the matter. It is a serious concern for a society to drop money year after year, even after absorbing members' subscriptions. This is a sure way to reduce its membership.

Eleven Eggs in one Clutch!

Sir,—I have noticed in your columns lately fanciers who have had hens laying seven and eight eggs a clutch. I have one with eleven. This surely is a rare thing. I may say there are other hens in the aviary, but all are either sitting on eggs or feeding young ones. I should like to say that this is my first season trying to breed, and I have met with great success, undoubtedly attributed to the hints and information gathered from the columns of CAGE BIRDS and House's "Canary Manual."

Who Stole the Flute?

How a Bullfinch Answered the Question.

Sir,—The following is an interesting story of a piping Bullfinch taken from an old work. A musician at one of the London theatres possessed an ebony flute with silver keys. He seldom used it, however, in consequence of one of the upper notes being defective. The musician had for a lodger a young man, a theatrical tailor, and between the two there existed considerable friendship. Well, one night, while the musician was away at his business, someone stole the flute, and suspicion fell on an old charwoman, who used to come to do the housework. However, nothing tended to show that the old lady really was guilty, and the affair was forgotten. In a few months the tailor left the house of the musician, and went to live in a town a few miles off, but as the friendship between the two men still existed, they occasionally visited each other. Nearly a year afterwards the musician paid the tailor a visit, and was pleased to find him in possession of a splendid Bullfinch, who could distinctly whistle three tunes. The performance was perfect with the exception that whenever he came to a certain high note he invariably skipped it, and went on to the next. A very little reflection convinced the musician that the note in which the Bullfinch was imperfect was the very one that was deficient on the ebony flute. So convinced was he that he at once sharply questioned his ex-lodger on the subject, who admitted his guilt and that all the bird knew had been taught him on the stolen flute.

JOHN WATSON.

Catching the "Bird Fever."

The "Dose" for a True Fancier.

Sir,—When bird fever attacks your birds, it is very serious—sharp, short, and soon over—but when persons are smitten with bird fever the results, though not so serious, are far more lasting. Some persons take it suddenly. They visit a friend and see his birds, cages, and aviaries. Perhaps it is in the breeding season, with birds on the nests sitting closely, or the nests may contain young birds clamouring to their parents to be fed—whatever it be that takes their fancy, when they leave that room they feel they must go in for bird keeping at once. They have caught the fever. Others contract the fever more slowly. They have probably kept a cock Canary for years as a pet and for its song, and one day some friend gives them a hen Canary, and just for the fun of the thing they decide to have a try at breeding. Though knowing little or nothing of what is required, they blunder through and successfully rear two or three nests, helped by the good fortune which is well known to follow novices. This success so pleases them that they go in for it on a larger scale the next year. They also have caught the fever. When a person drops bird-keeping after a very short time as being "too much trouble," or cloaks this reason under the more popular "I really haven't the time to look after my birds," he has had only a mild attack of the fever. But when he lets all other recreations and amusements take second place to his birds, when he gets up early in the morning to feed his birds before going to his work, when he will do messy cleaning, lime-washing, or painting, and think it a pleasure, when he loves to sit watching his birds, and scheming improvements, then we know the fever is in the system, and a cure is hopeless. Of such are true fanciers made.

J. GOLDSHAW.

Back to the Right Path.

Sir,—I am sorry to say I had the misfortune to have a mopy hen this year, and at an unfortunate time. One of my young Norwich hens had just got her first nest of four young. Everything seemed to go on well for five days, when I noticed one evening she had not eaten much of the egg food. Knowing she was a good feeder, I took the young out and gave them their evening feed with the aid of the "fillup." The next morning I saw that she was not much better, so I gave her a few drops of gentian, and took the young away, and gave them to another hen that had two about the same age. I lost one of them, but the other three are doing well, and are on the perch with the other too. I have treated this hen according to directions I saw a few weeks back in the columns of your paper, and now she is quite herself again, and looks like doing another round, thanks to CAGE BIRDS.

A Lecture on Bird Catching.

At meeting at headquarters on June 27, with Mr. Hawthorn in the chair, Mr. Wm. Heath gave us a most interesting lecture on "Catching." On the catching of the Linnet, he said that a catcher ought to take note of the country and turn his attention to the parts where charlock and chickweed grow plentifully, for one usually found that the flocks of Linnets will follow the fields of grain as they are cut. Limed twigs were of no use in Linnet catching, except when the leaves had fallen and left the hedges bare. When corn had been cut or the grass mown the net was the thing to use. The lecturer here described the use of the clap net. He pointed out that it was no use waiting for birds to settle between the nets, but they must be pulled immediately the birds flew in. The Goldfinch was next dealt with, the best place to find which, we were told, was a thistle field, especially those fields in which grew "red knots," the earliest thistle of the year. It was a very easy bird to catch both on twigs and with nets. With nets it was best to have a call bird and fix up bunches of thistles in the net, so that they would come and sit on these to feed. The Chaffinch was generally caught around stacks. Near the breeding season they were frequently caught by pegging, i.e., by using a hidden call bird and a dummy. Another way was by using the half-over net. The Redpoll or "Pea-Joey" was very easy to catch, Mr. Heath mentioning that he once caught one, put it in a cage, and after it had escaped from this, it allowed itself to be caught again. Siskins also were easy to catch, if they could be got off the alder tree, but this last year they had been very scarce. The Skylark was best caught with the net, especially the ground net. Young Linnets were fed on canary and scalded rape. Goldfinches should be fed on ingn, crushed hemp, and teazle, and their wings should be tied for two or three days. Questions were freely asked, and Mr. Heath gave most satisfactory answers. At the close of the lecture Mr. Hawthorn presented the medals to the winners of most points in the open Canary, novice Canary, and British classes this past season, the winners being Mr. Adams, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Ride.—G. H. Groocock, hon. sec.

TIMELY HINTS.

Four prizes of 2s. 6d. each (cash, or our books to value, at option of winners) given weekly to the senders of the four best Hints. All hints must be WRITTEN ON POST CARDS, with sender's name and address at foot, and reach us by Monday's post.

The Bird-room Atmosphere.

Fanciers who keep a large number of birds should use sawdust (pitch pine, if possible) upon the cage floors and give the sand in separate vessels. Before putting in the sawdust, however, sprinkle the tray over with "Sanitas" powder, which is obtainable in tins, one of which will last a very long time. Now place a layer of sawdust on top of this. The bird-room will now always smell sweet, and any stuffy kind of atmosphere will be unknown. Besides, sawdust will soak up all moisture far better than sand.—Douglas E. Sayce (5, Toward Terrace, Sunderland).

A Good Eggs Cake.

Should any readers require a substitute for egg and biscuit whilst colour feeding, I have found the following recipe for egg cake very suitable, and it will keep sweet for any length of time, and is both nourishing and enjoyed by the birds:—1lb. of flour, one teacupful of sugar, piece of lard size of an egg, two tablespoons baking powder, and six new laid eggs. To be mixed together and baked in a slow oven. Ready for use the following day by crumbling through the hands, or, better still, by passing through an egg mill and adding the necessary amount of tasteless pepper.—J. Gibson (60, Vernon Avenue, Basford, Notts.).

Economy in the Use of Sand.

Here is an idea that will make your sand run cheap. Get two pennyworth of Trent sand from any builders' merchants, then thoroughly dry this in the oven. When dry, riddle it through a zinc sieve. You can improve it by adding grit made in the following way:—Save all your egg shells, wash well with water, then put them in the oven to dry; when dry roll them (about as fine as canary seed) on the paste board with the rolling pin. Add this to your sand, and you will then have about half a hundredweight of good sand.—C. Oates (241, Pitsmoor Road Sheffield).

When Hand-rearing.

To keep young birds warm through the night, I fill a tin with sand, place the nest pan in the centre, and arrange them in a box, about eight inches from the bottom, on the floor of which I put a small lamp. Arrange air-holes at top of box. If by chance the light should go out, you will find the sand will hold the heat for a long time, and you will have more chance of your young birds living.—F. Harley (Paddington, W.).

Useful with Budgerigars.

An excellent method with Budgerigars is to get an old Thrush's or Blackbird's nest, and put it inside the nest box. This stops the eggs from rolling about into the corners. It is easy to put the nest in if the top of the box is hinged like a lid. When the nest is dirty, it can be taken out and another put in. This saves sending away for new husks. Another way is to put in spare Canary nest pans with linings.—R. Blake (Over-ross Road, Ross, Herefordshire).

To Keep Egg-food Fresh.

After boiling the egg ten minutes, let it cool in the shell for an hour, then take some biscuits and crush them fine, and mix in the usual way. Place it in a cup with a piece of gauze on the top, and stand in cold water. The reason for cooling the egg in the shell is because when mixed warm it is apt to go sour. I have tried this method successfully, and find it keep the egg food up to about two days quite nice and fresh.—W. Cain (Spennymoor).

Where Live Food is Abundant.

Few fanciers have any idea of the abundance of live food to be obtained from patches of horse or cow droppings, dry or semi-dry. Yet if they would only arm themselves with a tin and a flat piece of wood to turn over the droppings, they would be amply repaid for their energy. All kinds of grubs are to be found, white and brown, small worms, beetles, caterpillars, small slugs, and spiders—in fact, everything that a softbill bird could wish for. This live food, too, is splendid for young birds, and forms a welcome change from the eternal mealworm. Meadow and marsh land make the best hunting ground.—E. Curtis (42, Beresford Road, Lowestoft, Suffolk).

OLDHAM C.B.S.

Meeting held June 18. Decided to postpone ordinary meeting until July 9, at 8. It was also carried that all entries for amalgamation show be given in at special meeting to be held July 15. I hope all fanciers will notice this, and rally up with their entries, and let us help to the best of our ability to make the first show a gigantic success. Schedules for this show ready at meeting, July 9, also report of First Feather Show.—Jas. Cope, Sec.

SWINDON AND DIS. F. AND F.A.

Monthly meeting held at the Baths, June 26; Mr. H. R. Halliday in the chair. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. H. Smith for the very able way in which he judged the rabbit table show. Next meeting July 31, at 8 p.m., at the Baths, when a table show of cage birds will be held. Mr. J. Smith has kindly promised a medal for the best bird shown. Mr. Poole will judge. Members and friends heartily invited.—W. J. Moran, Hon. Sec.

ROMFORD F.S.

Next meeting White Hart Hotel, July 8, 8 p.m. The recent judging competition was a great success, 17 entering. G. Hares obtained 1 and 2, A. Hayman 3rd. The winners of awards placed nearest the judge were: W. Legge, G. Hares, A. Garling, equal number of points. Mr. Talbot judged. Mr. W. L. Rae has kindly consented to judge cage birds at the September young stock show, and Mr. Alfred Skinner's services have been retained for the December show.—A. Ives, Hon. Sec.

NORTH MANCHESTER C.B.S.

Meeting held June 25, Balmoral Hotel, Mr. Robinson presiding over a fair attendance. Proposed and seconded that we accept Mr. G. Pike as treasurer, having received our late treasurer's resignation owing to other business. It was decided to add to our annual N.F. Show and our November show, an additional show, to be held in January. The open classes mentioned in our last show report brought forward some very interesting points to be considered at our next meeting, July 9th. Winner of bird and cage was Mr. D. Hartley, No. 59.—W. H. Tansey.

SCOTCH FANCY NATIONAL DERBY O.A.

Meeting held in the Graud National Halls, Main Street, Gorbals, June 25th. There was a large attendance of members present. The chair was occupied by Mr. D. Black. Through the death of the late Mr. Smith, late secretary and treasurer, Mr. A. M. Baird was appointed to the position The association are to be congratulated in securing the services of Secretary Baird, a gentleman amply qualified to undertake the duties of secretary and treasurer. Judges were appointed for the coming show, and will be announced in due course. Show will be held as usual on September 21, in the Grand National Halls, Main Street, Gorbals. Members will now please note that all correspondence may now be addressed to the new secretary, Mr. A. M. Baird, 23, Neilston Road, Paisley. Any members who have not yet sent in their returns might kindly do so as soon as possible.

YORKSHIRE UNION OF C.B.S.

Council meeting, June 29, at Market Tavern, Bradford, when Mr. H. W. Walsh, vice-president, occupied the chair. Mr. O. Mitchell sent in his resignation as trustee to the Union on account of ill-health, and his inability to attend the Council meetings until he regained his normal health and strength. This was accepted with regret, the Council passing a vote of sympathy with him in his continued illness, coupled with the wish that he may soon be well enough to again devote his spare time and energies to the Fancy. Mr. A. Brown, of Yeadon, was elected by the Council to fill the office of trustee. Tenders for the printing of Union handbooks were laid before the Council, and order was placed. A long discussion took place in regard to a resolution passed previously by the Council that rung birds should not be allowed to compete at Union shows, many Union members having an impression that this resolution only applied to Yorkshires. The Council took a firm stand in declaring that the resolution as previously passed should apply to all varieties at Union shows. It was suggested by one of the delegates, that a special meeting be convened at some future date to deal exclusively with this important subject, and no doubt this idea will be acted upon. Societies who are intending to print their schedules for the annual shows in the Union Handbook should arrange their classification, etc., as soon as possible now, as all matter for the handbook must be sent in before July 20. This also applies to advertisements and any alteration of names and addresses.—H. Hill, Sec.

SCOTTISH CRESTED C.C.

Committee meeting held Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Ingram Street, Glasgow, June 22, Mr John Neale, Kilmarnock, presiding over a representative attendance. Officers elected—President, Mr. C. Campbell; Vice-presidents, Messrs. Moreland, Adamson, Chalmers, McKay, and McNaughton. Correspondence was read from Messrs. Whitton (Broughty Ferry), Dewar (Edinburgh), and McNaughton (Larbert). Agreed to appoint Mr. Whitton corresponding secretary for Northern and Central Counties, with power to convene meetings at such time and place as may suit requirements of members Samples and prices for proposed new club drinker tin were considered. Agreed to adopt a wire top zinc tin, sent in by Mr. Dewar, Edinburgh, price 2s. per doz., distribution and sale to be left in hand of secretary, who hopes to be able to supply the drinkers to members before the show season begins. A large number of applications were to hand, soliciting patronage, and the following associations were successful:—Broughty Ferry, Lochgelly, City of Glasgow, Broxburn, and Dunfermline Further arrangements to be left over till September meeting. Owing to repeated financial losses, it was agreed to abandon the idea of holding a club show, for this year, at least, but secretary was instructed to approach Scottish National Executive with a view to granting facilities in young bird classes at their New Year fixture, when club would consider the provision of gold medals and special prizes for competition amongst members of S.C.C.C. The following were elected members:—Mr. John Thomeon (Broxburn), and Mrs. C. Mutton (Uphall). John Young, Hon. Sec.

BONNYRIGG C.B.S.

Meeting held Foresters' Arms; Mr. Weigley, vice-president, took the chair. Young bird show arranged for July 6. Entries were taken, and proved very satisfactory. Entries will be taken up till day of show. James Hamilton, Sec.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held Mr. Johnston's Rooms, 6, The Broadway, July 1, Mr. W. H. Stoakley presiding. Eight new members were elected; the secretary announced that the Rev. H. A. Soames had offered a silver cup for green Borders, and this offer was gratefully accepted. The evening was mainly devoted to "Questions and Answers." This proved very interesting, and sometimes caused considerable amusement.—H. Smith, hon. sec.

YORKSHIRE C.B.S. OF IRELAND.

Meeting of Council held June 10. Society's patronage granted to Banbridge show in November. Mr Payne's resignation as treasurer was accepted, and Mr. Lattimore unanimously elected to the position. A vacancy occurring in the Council, Mr. Cloke was co-opted to serve. Several new members were elected. Arrangements were completed for young bird show July 3, special award cards being secured for the occasion. Letters were read in reference to storage of staging and rent. The Council deemed it advisable to take legal proceedings for recovery of staging. Mr. Shuledice notified his intention of judging young bird show. Mr. Hyland sent in his resignation from Council. Other routine business was arranged, also printing of schedule for young bird show. Mr. Hawkins's refusal to act as President was considered and held over. The hon. sec. was instructed to secure duplicate letter book for correspondence.—C. Holley (hon sec.).

CROYDON F.A.

General meeting held June 27, at the "Sunflower," George Street. Mr. D. R. Harnest in the chair. Committee's schedule for young stock show, August 14, was adopted. One or two additioned classes were added. 50 members have joined during the present year. The chairman, on behalf of the association, made a presentation to a member of the committee, Mr. T. B. Mason, who is leaving Croydon for the North of England. Mr. Harnest, in asking Mr. Mason's acceptance of a silk umbrella, said that his advice and assistance to the committee had been invaluable. Mr. Mason, in his reply, predicted a great future for the Association. Not many societies in their third year could boast a membership roll of 150. He heartily wished the association continued success. The hon. sec. will be pleased to forward particulars to any fancier residing within a radius of 12 miles of Croydon. Subs. only 2s. 6d.—F. W. Capell, 121, Brighton Road, Croydon.

BIRKENHEAD C.F.A.

First Feather Show held Co-operative Hall, June 29. Entries did not come up so well, as in other years owing to the bad breeding season most of the fanciers are having. The birds staged were of good quality, Mr. Lewis taking premier honours in Norwich, Mr. Stott running him very close. Yorks. were of good type, and quality, some good birds being staged by Messrs. Edwards, Caine, Greatrex and Adams. Mr. Adams' winning ticked Buff is a grand bird, and does great credit to the breeder, being his first year. Points specials won by Messrs. Edwards, Morton, Stott, Burns, Lewis and Greatrex. Mr. Wellings judged, and gave satisfaction to all. The members wish to thank him for donation to the society. CL. YELL. SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

All records were eclipsed at the First Young Bird Show of the season held by this society June 26, over 80 birds being staged by about 24 members out of 60. The remainder have had some cruel luck with the young birds. Mr. Poole (Stratford-on-Avon) judged, and his awards were well received. One objection was lodged in a small Norwich class; bar that, everything passed off most pleasantly. Staging was in the able hands of show manager Wright, and he had a capital staff of stewards, to whom the society owes a great deal. The room presented a very animated scene all the evening. Points towards the handsome tea service, the premier special for competition at the two shows:—J. Hughes 17; W. Andrews and W. Harding, 14; J. Bayliss and J. Wright, 13; A. Murray and Hammersley, 12; J. Broomfield and H. Kidner, 11; Dipple, 11 or 12 (objection raised); West, Sheppard and Adcock, 10; Clay and Swinden, 9; Childs, 8; Twiet, 6; Ward, 3. The following secured other specials: Messrs. Bayliss (2), Sheppard (2), Ward (2), Dipple (1), also Messrs. Swinden, Walton, Murray, Broomfield, J. Rabe, etc. Most points special: Mr. Dipple with 29 points; 2s. 6d. most points by novice in champion class, Mr. J. Clay, 16. The July show (20th) should attract more birds, as members have still a good chance to lift the premier special. Mr. J. H. Roe will judge. Let's keep the record up.

CHAMP., NOR. CL. YELL. (4): 1, 2, 3, 4, Dipple, also spl. best bird. A.O.V. YELL.: 1, de Maisell, appeared a cl. buff, objected to by the 2, Dipple; 3, Childs. CL. ROCHDALE (Good Intent).

Sixteenth annual First Feather cup show held June 22, in the Newbold Assembly Rooms. A fairly good entry, considering some nine classes were cancelled. The feature of the show was quality, especially in Nor. and Yorks. Mr. C. Pleasance won the society's challenge cup and gold medal, Mr. J. Lees being the runner-up. Other special prize-winners were J. Dewhurst best bird, W. Leach Nor., and P. H. Barlow Yorks., J. Dearden Lancs. Mr. Wm. Hardy, of Oldham, judged. LANCS., YELL. COPPY: 1, 2, 3, Dearden. YELL. S.W. LONDON C.B.S.

Annual young bird show held June 29, at the new headquarters, "The Gild Hall," Wandsworth Road. The change was much appreciated by the members, being central, and the light good, and will compare favourably with any other club quarters in the district. Mr. Robson judged. The quality of the birds shown was very high, especially in the novice and Yorkshires, the competition being very keen. Crests were very good, some promising bird being present. British were of good quality, though limited in numbers. Total staged 82. The sec. would like to draw the attention of fanciers in the district to this society, one of the oldest, and with adequate support the committee hope to make it one of the best in the district. NOR. ATTERCLIFFE C.B.S.

Seventh annual Nest Feather Show, June 22, in Vestry Hall. Entries numbered over 100, which, considering the indifferent breeding season, was excellent. Members' Yorks. were a grand lot, some very fine birds being staged. Mr. Walker took 1st and 2nd specials for Yorks. with two splendid Greens, excellent in colour, type and quality. Norwich were also a good lot. Mr. Watson taking special with grand bird of excellent quality throughout. In the novice section Mr. Harrison took specials for best Norwich, also most points, and Mr. Dyett special for best novice Yorks. The British section was well filled, Mr. Smith winning special for best bird. The following officiated as judges: Yorks., Mr. Champion; Nor., Mr. Taylor; Brit., Mr. Milne. MEMBERS': YORKS., CL. MATLOCK F.S.

First Feather Show, June 29, at Moore's Cafe, Dale Road, when some very nice birds were staged. The attendance was very good, the other sections of the society coming up well, and bringing their friends, thus showing the true fancier spirit. The management was in the hands of Messrs. T. Boden, C. Lill, G. Poyser, J. Else, R. Wragg, J. Wain, A. H. Slater, T. Twigg, T. Buxton, and W. J. Dean. The specials were kindly given by Messrs. T. Boden, and A. H. Slater. Mr. Tom Fox, of Tideswell, judged, and his placing of the cards gave every satisfaction to exhibitors, and he remarked upon the improvement in the quality of the birds. NOR. BURSLEM C.B.S.

First annual Nest Feather show, held Headquarters, the Barnfield Inn, June 29. This fixture turned out to be a rather interesting one for the fanciers in Burslem. The entries were not as many as expected in the open classes. Members' classes totalled about 50. Norwich classes filled fairly, some keen competition taking place in same. Special for best bird in this section went to Mr. F. Johnson, the same bird winning special best Canary in members' classes. Mr. H. Theabold won with a beautiful Linnet. Points specials were won by L. James, G. Broad, J. Dean, F. Greatbatch, H. Theabold. Mr. F. Bate judged, and his awards delighted everyone. YORKS. YELL.: 1, sp., Sad; 2, Hawley. SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

F.F. Show, June 29. The general complaint by a goodly number of members was that up to the present the season had been rather disappointing as regards number of young birds, still the entry reached upwards of 150, amongst them a few very choice specimens. The winning Cl. Yell. Yorks. (Mr. W. Champion), found many friends. Mr. F. Elliott (late Wilkinson and Elliott) benched a most likely lot. Mr. A. H. Waters (Hoyland) stood at the head of affairs in the Yell. Nor. ck. class, with a magnificent mkd. youngster. Mr. Woolhouse staged a fine team, his mkd. buff cock being a real beauty. British and foreign were pleasing collections. Messrs. P. Walsh, G. Fletcher and L. Fallding are to be congratulated on their representatives, put down in fine style. The novice section contained some very nice birds, Messrs. J. Beswick, P. Chadwick, and W. Simmonite (Yorks), and Mr. L. Marcroft (Nor.) standing well out. Mr. F. Jones (Pres.) is a true fancier, giving untiring assistance. Mr. W. Oxley (treasurer) is also one of the right stamp. Mr. A. Hobson (secretary) is an excellent official, keeping well on top of the work, while Mr. J. Woolhouse (assist. secretary) is a rare good understudy, and takes his part most efficiently. One must not omit a word of praise for Master Hobson, who works like a hero. The committee comprise many of the leading fanciers of the cutlery capital, who know how to do a thing right. Staging was neatly arranged in the Montgomery Hall, which is a most suitable venue. Visitors attended in good force, and everything went off Al. Mr. J. C. Barnes, the local enthusiast, judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction. Special for best bird went to the noted Silver Starling, the property of Mr. P. Walsh.

BARNSLEY C.B.S.

Annual Nest Feather Show, June 29, in clubroom, at headquarters, Clarence Hotel. Only a very poor entry was received, only 19 birds being staged—very disheartening for the officials. Mr. Toulson and Mr. Race staged some very promising Yorkshires, while the best bird, a clear yell. Nor., belonging to Mr. G. Hall, is a real knockout for size, shape, and quality. Mr. Toulson won special for most points in Yorks., and in British, Mr. Race second in Yorks., Mr. Hall most points in Nor., Mr. Wiseman second. Mr. Barnes second in Brit. Mr. W. CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

First Feather and British Bird Show held June 29, Prince of Wales Hotel. Entries fell short of last year's total by 20, principally in the British classes. The Crest section was very poor, none of the bigger breeders troubling to send. Norwich came up well. Mr. Madagan staged a fine team of Borders. On the whole the quality of the birds staged was good. Unfortunately a heavy thunderstorm broke over Cheltenham just before the opening of the show, which no doubt prevented a number of people from attending. Mr. J. H. The Young Naturalist.

*The End of a Marauding Weasel.

In the wall of our garden path there was a Blue Tit's nest. One day I heard the hen bird making such a pitiful noise. I looked out and saw a Weasel taking away one of the young ones. And as he came back for another Father shot him before he got to the nest. The old birds seemed quite grateful in their way, and they reared them in safety afterwards, and were very tame.—Sent by Alice Clarke (age 10), The Cottage, Willestrew, Lamerton, near Tavistock.

*The Artful Parrot.

A clergyman was one day calling on an old lady, one of his congregation, who was very busy making home-made cakes. Not wishing his reverence to see her home-made cakes, she put the cakes under the cushions in the arm-chair. The minister walked straight into the room and sat down in the arm-chair. The Parrot sat watching till the clergyman sat down; then she screamed out: "Cake under cushion; it will burn you."—Sent by Dorothy Jones (age 10 years), 315, Ferndale Road, Swindon, Wilts.

A Lark's Tomb.

In the walls of a humble cottage in a Devonshire village there was to be seen, many years ago, a fine brass plate on which were engraved the following lines:—

Within this wall there lies a Lark,
Whose age, I think, well worth remark,
Take fifty-five from seventy-three,
And there his age exact you see.
And in remembrance of his age,
These lines were writ beneath his cage.

The peasant whose pet this Lark had been delighted in showing this poem to all visitors, and never forgot to tell them that he wrote it by his own unaided efforts. The bird had come into his possession when fully grown, and must therefore have been quite nineteen years old at the time of its death.—Taken from "Chatter box," and sent by Clarice Sear (age 9), Gensing Villa, Hockliffe Road, Leighton Buzzard, Beds.

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers in all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

"STANLEY" BIRD FOODS

The ideal food for rearing all young birds, especially Canaries and Hybrids, supplies the birds with the essential living tissue necessary for the maintenance of a healthy and natural condition, without which you cannot breed stamina into your birds. Prepared from the wholesome and most nourishing fruit of the healthy pines and combined scientificially with the best biscuit meal for all cage birds. Avoid pasty egg mixtures, which rapidly ferment and kill thousands of promising young birds, which may bring fame to their owners. Try a large sample tin of Stanley's bird (nut) food, post paid 7d. (postal order), and test it for yourself. ½lb. 1/3, 1½lb. 2/6, 5lbs., 8/9; all post paid. Directions with each tin. Prepared by Thomas Stanley, the winner of "Cage Birds" competition, May, 1912. Do not use nut food unless it bears my name, or you may be disappointed. Address: "Stanley" Bird Foods, 212, Rookery-rd., Handsworth, Birmingham.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Please read what others say:—174, Evesham-rd., Headless Cross, Redditch. Dear Sir,—I received Linnet quite safe, and in good condition. I am quite satisfied with him, and consider him good value for the money.—Yours sincerely, E. Wall. To H. Allen. Tannery, Maryport, Cumberland. Dear Sir.—The bird you sent me is the best Linnet ever seen at such a price. I have had the best of satisfaction with it. Many of my friends have seen it and say the same. I have dealt with a few fanciers now, but if wanting any more I will send to you.—J. Clark to H. Allen. The above show that they are the finest singing Linnets in the world, Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world; they make the gamest Linnet ever carried to a contest for length, turns, and form; they stand alone, and for voice they have no equal; this class of bird has won the English Derby and all the English championships and the world's greatest contests. I sold one Linnet for £16 and six Linnets to a gentleman in Hull for £24, and four to a gentleman in Cumberland for £11 I have refused £11 for a Linnet just lately. This is one of the best Linnets that ever sang through a bill; all the recognised judges say they are equal to the finest German Roller; they are at working men's prices, 1/-, 2/6, real gems 2/-. Please send early. Hawfinches, 4/6 each; young German cock Canaries, singing grand, 4/6 each; plenty in stock, no waiting; postcard before birds send to your old friend, Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL.

By H. Norman. Published complete, 190 pages 7ins. by 5ins., bound in cloth, and also in two parts—"Hardbills" and "Softbills." This latest and most up-to-date manual on British birds has been written and illustrated in colours, and black and white by "Cage Birds" artist-in-chief, Mr. H. Norman. The author, who has made a life study of the subject, gives in these volumes information and hints of the utmost value to all keepers of British birds. Part 1, "HARDBILLS," deals with the Finches, their keeping, feeding, showing, etc.; and Part 2, "SOFTBILLS," Blackbirds, Thrushes, Larks, Buntings, etc. Price 1/- per part, post free 1/1. Complete Manual 2/3.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS.

By Claude St. John. An intensely practical handbook for beginners at Canary Breeding. It contains 116 pages 7in. by 5in., and profusely illustrates innumerable hints. In this book the reader is instructed how to pair up the stock birds, how to cage and feed them, how to test the eggs, what to do when the young birds are hatched, and so on until the birds are old enough to be put on the show bench. Interesting from cover to cover, it is by far the best 6d. handbook on the subject ever published. Price 6d., post free 7d. Cloth bound 1/2.

"CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS."

This great work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, a authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as winnin exhibitor and a leading expert and judge (associate editors, G. E Weston and C. A. House).

Magnificently Illustrated by that great bird artist, H. NORMAN.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates i this work. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID. Every plate shows the correct colour the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid.

On full week's approval. Carr. Paid 7/6

YORKSHIRE CANARIES.

How to Breed, Manage, and Exhibit.

By H. W. Battye, past President of the Yorkshire Union. It deals fully with the Yorkshire Canary and its sub-varieties, and should be in the hands of every breeder. It gives the fullest instruction upon pairing, breeding, moulting, exhibiting, and how to treat both in health and disease. Illustrated by Messrs. H. Norman and A. J. Simpson. Price 1/-, post free 1/1½.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.

By many Notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, G. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7in. by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid breeding. Being written by successful breeders, it is quite invaluable to everyone who would also be successful in his hobby. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

NORWICH CANARIES.

By C. A. House. The latest and most practical manual on this popular variety of Canaries. It tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal," are worth the cost of the whole book many times over. Price 1/-, post free 1/1.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS.

By Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., etc. A most useful manual for all keepers of Foreign Birds. In it will be found indispensable information of an entirely practical nature—by a life-long specialist—on the keeping and feeding of the more common and popular varieties of foreigners. It contains illustrations in colour, and black and white, of some of the well known species, and should be purchased without delay by all fanciers who go in for this most interesting branch of bird-keeping. Price 1/-, post free 1/1½.

The Shows.

REDRUTH (Cornwall).

Annual exhibition held in the Recreation Ground, July 3rd and 4th, in favourable weather. In Messrs. Opie and Kemp this society possesses the most valuable and business-like secretaries anyone could wish to have, and they are ably supported by a good working chairman in Mr. Collins, and a splendid hard-working committee in Messrs. Ferrill, Sherman, Clemo, Opie and Crews. The long distance birds were all off by the early mail, and all birds were packed and on rail Thursday evening, which speaks well for the Society. The entries exceeded last year, over 250 birds being staged, and considering the indifferent breeding this was excellent. The Norwich classes were small, but the birds staged were of good type and quality, and competition was very keen. Mr. Pascoe's unevenly-marked yellow is a gem. The Yorkshires were a very level lot, of good type and quality. The A.O.V. class contained some good birds, the winner being a fine buff Cinnamon, with size and colour to perfection. Group and pairs, for birds bred 1912, were a remarkably fine lot, and will do their owners a lot of good this coming season. The Mule and British classes were champion, the best seen at any Cornish show for a long time, the winning Light Mule being a gem, and capturing the special for best bird in show, and with the 2nd prize Greenfinch Mule it took the silver medal for best pair in show, and a grand pair they are. The Goldfinch class was small, but the winner is a gem, and will want some stopping. The winning Cornish Chough carried a lovely sheen and is a grand colour. The hardbill class was really good, and the birds hard to separate, the winner being a grand Yellow Bunting, with good markings. The winning Yellow Wagtail took the special for best British bird in the mining division. There were a grand lot of extra specials for competition. Most points: F. Collins, 82, Rowe and Richards, 59 points; Mr. Thomas, 43; Stephens and Gaved, 42. Best in show, Mr. Collins; 2nd best, Mr. Pascoe; Best Yorks, Mr. Wells; Best Foreign, Mr. Davis. Mr. W. G. Poole judged.

BONTNEWYDD.

Second annual open show, held July 6th, in magnificent weather, the gathering of the public being very fair considering the many shows in the circuit this time of the year. The cage birds were a source of great attraction, and made a good collection in a marquee. The chairman, Mr. Hugh Owen, is a very hard-working official, and the able secretary, Mr. Ed. Williams, held his post for the second time without a hitch occurring from start to finish. A good staff of stewards shared well in carrying out the work. The quality of the exhibits exceeded last year. The Norwich were better represented, and we are pleased to see this variety improving in numbers in North Wales. Yorks. were teeming with quality, and some excellent birds were shown. Borders good, and Goldies a treat in themselves, while the Mules were a rare lot of excellent quality. "Locals," too, are still improving. Special for best in show was awarded to Mr. E. Price, with a grand even-marked Goldie-Canary, in excellent condition. Trower's special, Mr. R. C. Griffith; best Yorks. stock bird, Mr. W. Nolan; Hyde's special, Mr. J. O. Williams. Specials for most points were given in every class, Messrs. E. D. Owen, W. Nolan, and W. H. Williams being the chief exhibitors, and they did well in there respective classes. The youngsters were very promising in Nor. and Yorks. Mr. A. G. Davis, Manchester, judged, and his awards met with general satisfaction.

BOOTLE C.B.S.

Annual Nest Feather show, July 6, St. Matthew's Parish Hall, Thornton Road. Promising youngsters turned out. Several birds shown will be heard of later in the season, and some should reach the "Mecca" of bird breeders, "The Palace." Special for best Yorks. was won by Mr. McNulty with a lovely cl. yell. The chief winners were: Champions, Messrs. Algie, McNulty and Lobb. Novices, Messrs. Skilling, Rawsthorne, and Steinhard. The judge, Mr. Alf Wellings, gave general satisfaction.—Geo. Rawsthorne, Assist. Secretary.

ARDWICK & MANCHESTER C.B.A.

Fourth annual nest feather show, held July 6th, at Onward Hall, Ardwick. Owing to many of the members having a disappointing season, entries only totalled 97; amongst them were a few which, given good fortune through the moult, will be heard of later. Mr. J. A. Vint's team of Norwich were a grand lot; in fact, many nice birds were to be seen in the amateur Norwich. Mr. Vint won the medal for best bird, with a ticked buff. Mr. J. L. Brown's Yorks. cl. buff must have pressed the winner; grand bird, lovely quality. Mr. Richard's team of Siskin Mules were a treat; one a wonderful size for a Siskin Mule. Special prizes fell to Messrs. Thomas, Brown, Appleton, and Harrison. Mr. Hirst (Accrington), judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction.

OPEN AMATEUR. YORKS. CL. YELL.: 1, Slater. BUFF: 1, Simpson. TKD., ETC., YELL.: 1, Slater. BUFF: 1, Slater, 2, 3, Simpson. NOR. CL. YELL.: 1, Robinson; 2, Spencer. BONNYRIGG AND DISTRICT.

First Feather Show, July 6, in Murray's Rooms, which are in every way suitable for such a purpose. This being their first venture, no doubt told somewhat on the meagre entry. The two Norwich and the Mule class did not have an entry, and only three Scotch Fancies were forward in two classes. The two classes provided for Borders had a good entry, and as this district has now become famous for the breeding of this popular variety, some real toppers were staged. Mr. Hamilton, Secretary, secured first in both classes with a Clear Yellow cock and a Clear Buff cock respectively. The cards were placed by Mr. George Brown, Leith, and his awards gave entire satisfaction. SCOTCH FANCY, YELL.: 1, 2, Weighley. BUFF: 1, Fisher. BORD. YELL.: 1, 6, Hamilton; 2, 4, Fisher; 3, Rowe; 5, Noble. BUFF: 1, 2, Hamilton; 3, 5, Harper; 4, Rowe; 6, 7, Stirling.

WEST OF SCOTLAND O.S.

First Feather show, in Nelson's Temp. Hotel, July 6. Owing to poor luck in breeding, and to holidays, the number staged did not come up to some of the past shows. Mr. F. Taylor judged, and his decisions gave every satisfaction.

Martin and Hutchison tie for second place, 14 points each. Spl. best Crest, J. Tweedie; P.H., W. Hutchison; Yorks, C. Martin; Bord., D. Whitelaw.—Wm. Hutchison, Sec.

LONGTON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Fifth annual F.F. show held July 6th, at the Swan Hotel. Despite indifferent luck in most breeding rooms there were over 80 birds staged, many of them being grand specimens, especially amongst the Norwich. There was a fine collection of British. Mr. J. Bowers won spl. in open class with a fine clear yell. Norwich. Mr. G. Salt, spl. for best young bird with a cl. yell. Yorks.

Lea, Corres. Sec.

YORKSHIRE C.B.S. OF IRELAND.

Young bird show held July 3, in Central Hall, Dublin. The show was favoured with a real summer's day, which accounted for the great success, both in entries and attendance. The advancement of the Yorkshire Canary in Ireland during the last eight years is worthy of note, as some of the finest specimens were exhibited, and it was pleasing to see the number of novices showing such good Yorkshires. The Rowan cup (£5 5s.) went to Bro. Ryan, and the runner-up medal also. The Hawkins cup (£5 5s.) went to Mr. J. Dowling; runner-up, Mr. W. Birse. Mr. Birse also got the prize for most entries. The number of exhibits far exceeded any young bird show ever held in Dublin—close on 90 birds. The success of the show reflects great credit on Mr. C. Holley, the hard-working secretary, who was assisted by the following committee:—Messrs. Dowling, Mulcahy, Callaghan, Briggs, Power, and Latimer. Mr. Sholedice acted as judge, and everyone expressed their satisfaction.

YORKS. CL. YELL. (5): 1, sp, Ryan, good size, fine head, wings and tail, stands straight, extra condition; 2, Steward, just as good, only for position; 3, Birse; vhc, Carolan; hc, Callaghan. HEN (7): 1, sp, Birse, stands straight, grand type, fine legs, good quality; 2, Lee, very neat, close on winner; 3, hc, Power; vhc, Carolan; c, McDonnell. BUFF (7): 1, Steward, very nice bird, good wings, fine legs, stands straight, nice head and neck, shade stout; 2, Holley, good all round; 3, Carolan; vhc, Birse; hc, c, Briggs. HEN (10): 1, Keogh, a true Yorks. in every sense; 2, Birse, grand type, close on winner; 3, Dowling; vhc, Stewart; hc, c, Power. VARIEG., ETC., YELL. (14): 1, Rowan's cup, Ryan, excels in quality, grand type and length, very neat; 2, vhc, Keogh, real nice bird, long, and well drawn; 3, Steward; hc, Holley; c, McKeon. HEN (8): 1, vhc, Holley, nice head and wing, fair size, good quality; 2, Stewart, excellent shape; 3, Ryan; hc, Power; c, Carolan. HEN: 1, Hawkin's cup, Dowling, fair size, good one for condition and quality, lovely shape; 2, 3, Birse, both very nice birds; vhc, Stewart; hc, Briggs; c, Callaghan. CREST (1): 1, Birse. C.B. (1): 1, Birse, bold head, good brow. NOR. COCK (1): 1, Birse, good size, fine head and neck, extra good condition. HEN (1): 1, Birse, good type and quality. MULE (1): 1, Birse, very nice Siskin Canary, teeming with quality. FIELD-MOULTED GOLDFINCH (4): 1, 2, Carolan, both good birds, leader nice blaze and bars. LINNET (2): 1, Carolan, rare type, one of the best seen in Dublin for a long time; 2, Holley. BULLFINCH (2): 1, Carolan, good.

SHETTLESTON.

Annual First Feather Show held Johnston's Rooms, July 6th. The weather was delightful and the members took full advantage of the genial sunshine and turned out in creditable fashion. Crest-breds, Plainheads and Borders were strong, both in numbers and quality, but Crests and Mules were few and quality scarcely up to the usual standard. The season has been fraught with difficulties, and many prominent breeders have little to show for their season's work. Mr. R. H. Living-tone, Rutherglen, made the awards, and his decisions met with entire satisfaction.

CREST OR C.B.: 1, spl, 2, 3, 4, Henderson, leader clear of nice size and condition, fine entrance, nice shapely, well cushioned head, ought to make up a good one; 2nd another clear, more massive in body and general substance, but not the head of leader, 3rd large variegated of good feather and substance, 4th nice even wing, dark crest. P.H.: 1, spl. best in hall, 4, Divene, leader a broken green of grand substance and type, well filled in at neck and front, good top end, nice carriage throughout, 4th tick on head, quite a nice one for feather and type; 2, 3, Berry, 2nd variegated buff, fine quality feather, good in substance and shape, will make a nice stock bird, 3rd clear yellow, fine quality and nice shape, good substance. BORD.: 1, spl, Henderson, even wing; mkd., nice shape and style, well filled in at neck; 2, 3, Baird, 2nd grand clear, fine quality feather, nice shape, jaunty carriage, well put down, 3rd heavy variegated buff, very shapely and of good quality; 4, Mackay. MULES: spl., 1, 2, Mackey, two dark Goldie Mules of similar size, leader little brighter in colour, otherwise little to choose between.

WIMBLEDON C.B.S.

A very successful young bird show was held July 8, at the Queen's Hall. The entry was very good, some twenty birds more than last year being benched. Mr. Robson judged. The feature of the show was the fine display of Borders. The "Wee Gems" have two valuable cups all to themselves, and these no doubt help to swell the number. Mrs. Thynne staged the winner, a very nice clear, which took the special for best lady's exhibit. Mrs. McGregor, Messrs. Owen, Gollop, Saunders, and the Rev. Soames also exhibited, the latter staging the winning Green. Norwich were good, Mr. Saunders, of Sutton, sending in a good level team, his winner securing the special for best Canary, another unplaced bird from the same nest being very much admired. Mr. Durham secured the special for best novice with a nice chubby Norwich, Messrs. Owen and Son that for British bird, and Mr. Lamb for best bird in show with his well-known Linnet-Bullie. There was a good gathering of visitors, among them many ladies. The members have mostly had a very good breeding season, which looks promising for the winter shows. Messrs. Smith and Stoakley managed the show in their usual able manner. NOR.: 1, Saunders; 2, Mrs. Smith; 3, Dixon. YORKS.: 1, Smith; 2, Rorke; 3, Miss Walker. YORKS. MKD.: 1, 3, Rorke; 2, Stoakley. DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Y.B. Show held July 2nd at Reindeer Hotel, Rye Lane. Considering the general complaint of an indifferent season amongst breeders, the collection was a good one. Two or three very smart Norwich were staged, and Yorks were good. The arrangements did Mr. W. Hodson, the hon. sec., and his colleagues in the management every credit. Mr. Hodson has few superiors in the art of winning fanciers to his side. There was quite a large assemblage of birdy men, and several ladies. It is getting to be quite the custom at Young Bird shows for the judge to be commandeered for a few words on the exhibits at the close of his duties, so that it would be well for budding aspirants to judgeships to study elocution. Mr. George Gardner, who judged, spoke upon the exhibits generally. A vote of thanks was cordially passed to Mr. Gardner. Mr. H. Lee won special for best in show with a really fine ticked Norwich. Other special winners were Messrs. L. J. Richardson, F. Tebbs, H. W. Tomsett, J. Bullen, C. Austin, and Cant.

CHAMP. NOR., CL. OR TKD.: 1, Lee, grand fellow, fine head, neck and body, lovely close feather; 2, 3, Thomas, 2nd a sweetly pretty bird, short and cobby, grand quality; 4, Matthes. MKD., ETC.: 1, 3, Richardson, former good shape and rare quality; 2, Cole, another promising bird, full of quality; 4, Thomas. YORKS., CL. OR TKD.: 1, 2, 3, Tebbs, good team, the winner well away, a broken buff; 4, Carpenter. MKD., ETC.: 1, Carpenter, leader nice in stand, good quality; 2, 3, 4, Tebbs, full of quality and style. NOVICE, NOR. CL. OR TKD.: 1, 3, Tomsett, leader buff, grand shape, nice silky feather, neat head and beak, took the novice spl.; 2, Hodson, lovely yellow, very level quality, nice shape; 4, Crawford. MKD., ETC.: 1, 3, Tomsett, leader good variegated, 3rd fine type, good bird; 2, Crawford. YORKS, CL., ETC.: 1, Bullen, stylish, moves well, good quality; 2, 4, Fairman, neat and good quality; 3, Clark. MKD., ETC.: 1, 2, 3, Reeks, leader bonny foul tailed green, goes up like a rocket, finely drawn, a nice team; 4, Bullen. A.O.V. CAN.: 1, 2, Cant. MULES: 1, 2, Fairman. REARING YOUNG BIRDS.

Something New in the Way of Feeding: An Extraordinary Use for Sour Milk.

Interesting Lecture by that well-known fancier, Mr. E. Pretty, one of our oldest living bird-breeders.

MEETING, July 6th, at headquarters, "Earl Cathcart," Osnaburgh St., N.W., Mr. Ransly in the chair. A very good gathering of members and friends attended Mr. E. Pretty's lecture on a new egg food for young birds from the first day of hatching. Mr. Pretty began by remarking that he had been a breeder of birds for the last 40 years, and the trouble he experienced was that the egg and biscuit food was too dry, as the old birds had not sufficient saliva to enable them to eject the food from their crops.

Sterilized in a Porringer.

The system he wished to put before the members was as follows: Take one egg and one piece of lump sugar and place in a porridge pot. Well beat the yolk and white of egg together to avoid any lumps in boiling, and sterilize same for 20 minutes. Then place one slice of bread in soak for one minute only; if exceeded the food will become too sloppy and stieky. Squeeze bread between piece of cloth until almost dry, then place with egg in pestle and mortar (as used by chemists) and mix until a thick paste is formed.

Birds can be fed from the first day with this food until they are old enough to be taken away from parents, when I use bread and milk, in proportion of a thick slice of bread to two lumps of sugar and half-pint of milk boiled. On no account be afraid of milk turning sour, as it is beneficial to the young. Years ago breeders had what they termed "stink pots"; these were pots of milk left for about three months, when the mildew was removed from the top and pieces of the sour milk placed between the wires of the cages for the birds to peck at. This was recognised as a certain cure for all ills. Green food should not be given to young when taken from parents, but in its place give maw seed, crushed hemp and canary seed. Marigold or nasturtium blooms may be given at any time, but first tear blooms asunder.

The Proof of the Pudding.

I have had a very successful season this year with the above dietary, rearing over 50 strong and healthy young ones. I might mention that the bread and milk should be given fresh daily, and colour food may be mixed with same if necessary. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Pretty for his very instructive discourse was proposed by Mr. Shakespeare and seconded by Mr. Harman, which closed a very enjoyable evening.—G. G. Stubbs.

Colour-Feeding the Canary.

A Lecture delivered by Mr. W. Bingham, before the Sheffield C.B.S.

IS it necessary to colour feed? I answer, yes, under present conditions of keeping and exhibiting birds, particularly Norwich. This question, to those who visit a show and notice the difference between a fed and non-fed specimen of any class, answers itself in the affirmative. Not only that, but in the standard for Norwich 15 points are allowed for colour, a very large margin with which to decide when finally placing the prize cards. Does it pay to colour feed? I am not now alluding to exhibition specimens, but merely speaking from a financial standpoint. Again the answer is yes, as to my mind a common Canary of any variety when colour-fed is worth at least 2s. 6d. more than the same bird would be if in its natural colour, and at my estimate of the cost of colour feeding which is from 4d. to 6d. per bird, this leaves a fair margin of profit. One point I would impress upon the Novice when disposing of stock, is always present them to your would-be customers in as clean a state as possible. It will pay you to do so.

Harmful or Otherwise.

Another question that arises is, is colour feeding harmful to our birds? My answer to this is, if the colouring agent that is in use to-day is administered in a proper manner, it is not harmful. The proper way to my mind to give it is to use the least sprinkle or pinch in the first place, and slowly, very slowly, keep increasing the amount until you get the strength you think sufficient to answer your purpose. It generally takes me at least three weeks to get my birds on food the full strength.

The method I adopt is to give the colouring matter in bread and eggs, exactly as I feed when rearing young, but with more bread added. About one large tea spoonful I allow for each bird. Another way that I fed one season only was to soak the bread thoroughly in cold water (crust as well as crumb) squeeze out all the water possible and then mix your colouring matter and sugar with the bread in as thorough a manner as possible. I found the birds came as good a colour by one way as by the other, but they did not take so readily to the last mentioned method, and some had to have their feed removed before they would eat it. This, however, is undoubtedly the cheapest way of administering the food as it saves your eggs, bread and seed; it is also impossible for the birds to waste the food when given in this form, as they do in the former case. You generally find that about four teaspoonfuls of pepper to one egg and bread is recommended, but I think that that is underestimated, and that five, six, or seven teaspoonfuls are more like the quantity where a real hot colour is being aimed at. Cayenne pepper I do not favour very much, though there is no doubt it is an excellent colouring agent, but owing to its hot nature it is not very much in favour with me. I use it very moderately indeed, about one in fifteen or even less than that, and sometimes none at all.

Water Good; Sunlight Bad.

The use of the bath is a very important matter during the time that you are colour feeding—in fact at all times—and it ought not to be neglected, as no birds look better or are in better condition generally than those that bathe freely and have the opportunity to bathe regularly. The light of the room must be toned down considerably at this period to keep the colour in your pets, as nothing draws the colour out or fades it much quicker than the sun. You will all have noticed the effect of the sun on wall paper with delicate tints, and have heard the wife's complaint about faded paper and furniture—how quickly she draws down the blinds to keep the sun out. It has exactly the same effect on birds, hence the reason for protection from its rays.

The difference in birds from a colouring standpoint is also very great; some birds have a natural colour to commence with far in excess of what other birds possess, which accounts for your birds which may have all been fed exactly alike coming out in so many varied tints and shades.

Cochineal said to be Useful.

During the moulting season I like to put a corn of cochineal in the drinking water, as I think this helps to a quick moult, aids the colour and acts as preventative against colds. When birds are about half way through the moult I also add a little linseed meal and gold of pleasure seed to their egg and colour food, as this finishes off their plumage in a tight and polished manner, which I think cannot be obtained by any other method of feeding. Birds colour-fed and kept for show ought to have, at least once a week, all through the show season a little colour food given to them, to keep up the colour, and so that if they lose a feather or two at any time, which they often do, they may come again the same colour as when first moulted.

Singing Contests for Canaries.

A Sport Said to be "Catching On" in Yorkshire.

ONE of the many interesting happenings in Leeds, Castleford, and Barnsley concerning which ordinary mortals know nothing are the bird singing contests, says a contributor to the "Yorkshire Evening Post." The iron-workers of Leeds have a curious affection for Canaries, while Yorkshire colliers know nearly as much about Linnets and Larks as they do about their terriers. There are Linnet-singing contests nearly every Sunday noon in half a dozen licensed houses in Leeds, while, after September, there will be Canary contests on Sunday evenings in the same bird houses. They never fix these contests in the same room for the same assembly, for the dear little birds are such mimics the Canaries would be sure to begin to "chop-chop-chop"—a terrible sin in Canaries—while the Linnets would be certain to burlesque the Hartz Mountain Rollers' wonderful runs. Besides, Linnets like to go to sleep early, while Canaries are in prime singing form towards evening.

The "Distribution Night."

Bird clubs are old institutions in Leeds. The contribution to a Canary club is usually 2d. a week, and some of these have fifty and sixty members. When each member has subscribed some 8s. or 9s. they send to a London, Liverpool, or Leeds importer for a supply of genuine Hartz Mountain cock Canaries. The distribution night is a great event. On that night the birds are all on view in the club room in separate cages. Each member draws a number from a bag, and becomes the possessor of the cage similarly numbered with its live occupant.

It is quite a lottery what kind of a bird one draws. Some are not worth 2s. as match birds, while others, after skilled training, could not be bought for £5. Silver teapots and other useful articles form the prizes competed for at these singing contests, the purchase money being supplied out of the entrance fee money, plus additions by the landlord and other philanthropists.

How the Cages are Hung.

For competition purposes the bird cages are hung on pegs against the wall, sometimes in two's sometimes in three's. If the entries are numerous, they are tested in three's. The owners draw for places. One cage goes on the upper peg, a second immediately below, and a third to the side where it can be seen by the other two. The last position is a bit of a handicap, for no sooner do the other two birds see it hung than the proud creatures stiffen their wings and begin their jealous song, thus getting a good start. The cages remain hung for five minutes; and, with well-trained birds, there is rarely any waiting.

No one must smoke in the room lest it should affect the feathered songsters' voices. Nor must anyone speak, or chirp, or even breathe loudly, perchance the noise might put one of the competitors off its music.

Judging the Music.

There are usually two judges and a time-keeper, and the decision is based on the length of run, quality of note, and perfection of turn or trill. Any harshness of voice or introduction of chop-chops—"muck," the Canary experts call it—is disastrous.

A good bird wins good prizes, and its marketable value rapidly appreciates. Some of the most successful prize winners are rather fond of a sip of old port after an exhausting contest.

Appearances Deceitful.

All these German birds are cage-bred, and are very poor fliers. Appearances are deceptive, the most insignificant and ugly feathered birds frequently proving the best songsters. They are very delicate birds, and need most careful feeding. A specially prepared Canary food, in which German rape forms an important part, is their chief diet, though a bit of clean lettuce or watercress does them no harm.

The Linnet clubs are conducted on much the same lines, though the subscription is generally merely nominal, as young Linnets may be bought for from 3d. up to 1s. each. Bird-catchers bring boxes of twenty or thirty to the rooms on club nights and retail them to members. A prize singing Linnet will realise £2 to £3. The singing career of a Linnet is generally shorter than that of a Canary. It may last three or four years, while some Canaries have been known to continue in prize-winning voice for ten or eleven years.

For Patrons, Presidents, &c., see last week's issue.

Mr. Fulljames is taking a short holiday and, in consequence, the usual "Notes by the Secretary" are postponed. Associates are poining in very large numbers, and all are welcome to take advantage of the offer which has been conveyed in these columns during the past few weeks. A coupon will again be found in this issue, and all that readers have to do is to sign one of these and get five of their friends each to sign another. Then forward the six, together with a penny stamp addressed to the Secretary, and an enamelled badge of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE will be sent by return, and the sender of the coupons will be registered an Associate member of the LEAGUE.

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

PATRONS.—A donation of not less than Ten Guineas in one amount, or an annual subscription of not less than Two Guineas, shall constitute the donor or subscriber a Patron.

LIFE MEMBERS.—A donation of not less than Five Guineas in one amount shall constitute the donor a Life Member.

VICE PRESIDENTS.—An annual subscription of not less than Half-a-Guinea shall constitute the subscriber a Vice President.

HONORARY LIFE MEMBERS.—The payment to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE of a legacy of £20 and upwards shall constitute the administrator or executor making the payment an Honorary Life Member. A form of bequest will be sent, post free, on application.

ORDINARY MEMBERS shall pay an annual subscription of Two Shillings and Sixpence.

BADGES.

Neat and unobtrusive badges are supplied to members, without any charge beyond their subscriptions as above. The badges may be had either in button form, or mounted in rolled gold in two forms, one as a brooch for ladies or for cycling caps or coat lapel, and the other as a pendant for bracelet or watch-chain. The kind required should be specified clearly.

CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Certificates printed in seven colours, and suitable for framing, are supplied at One Shilling each. Each certificate bears an enlarged facsimile of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE Badge and Motto, and is signed by the Secretary.

MEDALS.

Gold, Silver, and Bronze Medals are offered for competition among CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members at Open Shows. The terms under which these will be given may be had upon application.

CAGE BIRDS FREE TO PATRONS.

SEALS AND HEADED NOTEPAPER.

GUMMED SEALS printed in gold and colours in facsimile of the LEAGUE BADGE are supplied for affixing to note paper, postcards, or envelopes. Price eightpence per hundred, fivepence for fifty, post free.

100 Sheets, Two Shillings and sixpence.
250 Sheets, Four shillings.
500 Sheets, Five shillings and sixpence.
1,000 Sheets, Eight shillings and sixpence.
All post free.

Members are entitled, if application is made at the time of joining, to a free copy of a sixpenny pamphlet on British Bird Culture, or a similar treatise on Canary and Hybrid Culture.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of CAGE BIRDS have written to say that they would like to join CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the LEAGUE, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of CAGE BIRDS' LEAGUE, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the LEAGUE. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same.

OBITUARY.

Mr. A. Frankland.

We hear with great regret from Mr. W. H. Dibb, Guiseley, of the death of the above well-known fancier and exhibitor. Mr. Dibb writes us as follows:—

"As a reader of your valuable paper, I should esteem it a favour if you would insert in your next issue the news of the death of an old and respected fancier, Mr. Arthur Frankland, Guiseley. As a member of the Guiseley, Yeadon, and Dist. Society, he was a most energetic worker, being one of the first in its formation, also a true fancier to all the shows in the Yorkshire Union. His death took place at the Royal Infirmary, Bradford, July 8, after a serious and painful illness."

We hold our next meeting, writes Mr. Wm. Elliott, sec., West Stanley and Dist. C.B.S., at Club Room, Commercial Hotel, on July 13, instead of the ante-room at Co-op. Hall. Will all members please turn out, as this is the last meeting for the schedule for the annual show?

I started this season with one pair of Canaries and am now the possessor of eleven young—not so bad for a novice. My success I attribute to your book, "Canary Breeding for Beginners" and to CAGE BIRDS, of which I am a regular reader.—C. F. Baker (South Bermondsey.)

Pendleton and Salford O.S. are holding their first feather show to-day (Saturday), at the Irwell Castle, Lower Broughton, and we hope to find that well known judge, Mr. Beswick, Stockport, something to do, as we are expecting a very large entry, including about 6 light Mules, write Messrs. Chritchley and Metcalfe.

Applications for the patronage of the Midland Counties Yorkshire C.C. must be received by the end of July. Societies in the Midlands holding open shows and wishing to see their Yorkshire classes a success should apply to Messrs. Beck and Andrews, School House, Rookery Road, Handsworth, Staffs.

The Green Canary Association's patronage will be allotted July 25, writes Mr. Geo. Green, hon. sec., 36, Lord Nelson Street, Liverpool. Full particulars on application, which must be made prior to July 22.

Schedules have been sent to all members for first feather show. Anyone overlooked, please apply to me, writes Mr. H. Boothman, hon. sec. Manchester and Northern Counties O.S., 10, Parker Street, Levenshulme, Manchester.

I have been appointed hon. secretary to the Bristol C.B.S., writes Mr. T. J. Keegan, 6, York Street, Barton Hill, Bristol, and I shall be pleased to welcome new members and give them any information they may require re the society.

Readers will find an interesting rearrangement of the advertisements at the end of CAGE BIRDS this week. This new feature will be permanent, and one that we hope will be satisfactory and lead to good results for advertisers.

"CAGE BIRDS" FOR RESULTS

In our issue of July 6 Mr. A. Coffey, of Liverpool, inserted an advertisement under the heading of Mules, giving us instructions for two issues. He offered his stock to the first sender of a £10 note. On July 9 we received the following from him:—

"Kindly withdraw my advert. Mr. J. Wood, of Tamworth, gets the birds, his being the first letter opened containing the money. Several other men very much disappointed."—(Signed) A. Coffey.

Kindly give my thanks to all who have sent me offers for my young Rollers advertised in CAGE BIRDS. I have disposed of the birds and could not answer all enquirers, only those who sent stamped addressed envelopes—It would cost the advertiser a lot of money if he were to answer all applications.—L. Walker (Huddersfield).

NEED WE SAY MORE?

Fanciers should use no other Peppers than Ramsden's. They are pure and sold free from any admixture. Young birds thrive on Ramsden's Peppers, and do not die, as they often do when fed on the common feeds so often offered for sale at a low price. Buy Ramsden's, and have the finest the world produces.—Advt.

I was surprised and pleased, writes Mr. W. Walker, to see the picture of my winning Green on the front page of the leading bird journal, CAGE BIRDS. It has always been my ambition to breed and exhibit a Yorkshire Green fit to grace the front of CAGE BIRDS. I must thank your artist for his splendid work. May CAGE BIRDS always prosper.

Owing to the extraordinary number of show reports sent to us this week, we have been unable to publish all in this issue. Despite the space devoted to them, and the fact that no fewer than 41 reports actually appear in print, we have had to hold over until our next number accounts of the Barrow, Queen's Park, (Glasgow), Eccles and South London fixtures.

At the annual monthly meeting, held July 2, writes Mr. John Dunwoody, jun., sec. of the Holywood and Dist. C.B.S., arrangements were made for our annual show in November, and if we get the same support from the Irish fanciers this year as we did last, our show will be a huge success. We have secured a new hall that was specially built for exhibitions and entertainments—an ideal place

Who had hottest coloured Norwich at Crystal Palace, 1912? Mr. Davies, winner best Canary in show, championship diploma, three 1sts, 2nds, etc.; also N.P.C. Cup winner; also Mr. Smeaton, winner three 1sts, etc.; also great Scotch winner. Who had hottest colour in Cinnamons? Mr. Dorner, Godley, Deason, who won between them every 1st, 2nd, and 3rd prize. Who had hottest coloured Yorkshires? Mr. Binns, winner two 1sts, one 2nd, with three entries, against all champions. All above used from 28lbs. to 56lbs. Sandiford's Royal Red. Not one or two pounds so as to be able to compete for other specials. I could fill this paper with other names. Messrs. Haigh and Son, oldest breeders in Yorkshire, been using another feed for few years. This year they have ordered 28lbs. from Sandiford's. (See advertisement.).—(Advt.).

Young White Canary at Chester.

Quite the feature of Chester young bird show (writes our representative) was the white Canary exhibited by that keen enthusiast, Mr. Richards. It is only five weeks old, but is showing the true Yorkshire type. I was informed that Mr. R. bred it from a self-green Yorkshire cock and a clear buff hen bred from Greens—an "albino Canary," I should call it. Let us hope it lives to provide competition at the Palace.

Giving the Game Away.

A sporting parson had a Parrot. He was a good man as well as a good sportsman, and attended a race meeting for the pure joy of seeing the best horseflesh. Unhappily his bishop, who knew him well and liked him, died, and the new bishop disapproved in toto of anything and everything connected with the turf. It so happened one day that after a violent thunderstorm, the bishop took refuge at the parsonage. He made the acquaintance of the Parrot, and was talking to it, and praising it to the unsuspecting rector, when suddenly the bird put its head on one side and called out in stentorian tones: "Two to one bar one." The bishop was electrified, and the rector struck dumb; but worse followed. Before either could speak, the Parrot gave a chuckle, and said, in the rector's voice: "By Jove! if the bishop heard you!"

A Bracket Perch.

Sent by L. Grinell, 37, Fredgrick Street, Heath Town, Wolverhampton.

Here is a sketch of a quickly and easily removed perch. Cut a piece of ¼in. wood to shape shown. Screw perch to back of this, the length of perch to be about two inches less than the depth of the cage, so as to prevent the bird from lying against the wires. Fix two screws in cage back with heads projecting to the thickness of the bracket. The perch may be removed in a moment for cleaning, or for repainting cage.

An Improvement in Double Breeders.

Sent by T. Stanley, 212. Rookery Road, Handsworth, Birmingham.

When double breeding cages are used, the wood dividing rail which runs from the front rail of cage and level with it to the back of the cage, in bought cages, often has a channel for the partition to slide in which is awkward to clean, and when the slide is out soon gets filled with dirt. Young birds will peck into this, and it may mean the loss of one's best youngster. The enclosed sketch will explain a simpler and much cleaner way of holding slides:—Glue a narrow strip of wood into the slot mentioned above to fill up the groove, and smooth off to make level. Then drive in two wire nails 1in. long, and make them incline to back of cage, and two more nails in the correct position at the top (AA). For preference use a tin slide which has been enamelled and with the front edge folded as shown. This can easily be made on a kitchen table without more tools than a hammer, and has the advantage that it will not warp when washed. At B is shown a section of the dividing rail with nails in position.

How to Catch the Bullfinch.

I advise the use of a decoy, and small twigs may be substituted for the esparto. No bird answers more readily to the decoy than the Bullie. The ordinary method is simply to place the decoy on a hedge or bush, and surround him with the twigs. I have sometimes had to deal with a "sharped" bird, and my method then was to tie a few bunches of dock or nettle together and arrange them near the decoy, inserting the limed twigs or grasses in the bunches. A stuffed specimen mounted on a flexible spring so as to be agitated by the slightest breeze, gave the set a more unsuspicious appearance than when arranged in the manner first described. I always gather a few good nettles, docks and thistles during autumn for setting purposes, the latter for Goldies. The seeding off process is as I described for the Chaffinch, but plenty of well-damped hemp and teazle should be supplied, gradually reducing the quantity of the former. All food should be on cage bottom, and water inside. The placing of a well-caged specimen along with the new capture prevents sulking, and incites him to partake, but if care is taken to graduate the change from the wet seed, little danger is to be apprehended. I will next deal with the final species, the Thrush.

A Widely Popular Family.

Many confuse the various members of the Thrush family, and really there is a confusing number of terms applied, which tends to cause misconception. I will endeavour to explain these for the benefit of the novice. Thrushes have the scientific name Turdus, but this includes Blackbirds, etc., and in this paper I purpose treating only of four species, viz., Song Thrush, or Mavis (Turdus Musicus), indigenous. Mistle Thrush or Storm-cock (T. viscivorous), indigenous. Fieldfare (T. pilaris), winter migrant, and Redwing (T. iliacus), winter migrant (there is another named after the famous naturalist, (Turdus Whitei), but its occurrence is so rare as scarcely to merit recognition as a British species). Now, despite the fact that these species are definite, and permit of no further division whatsoever, we find the first-named sometimes gets various prefixes, such as "Brook," "Bank," etc. These terms, like those applied to the Goldfinch and Linnet, Pear-tree, Thorn, Rose, Whin, etc., imply something, but in fact mean absolutely nothing. The Mistle is often confounded with the Fieldfare. In Scotland the common term for the former is "felty," while in various parts of England a very similar term, "felfit," is applied exclusively to the Fieldfare.

The Song Thrush is distinguished from the Mistle by being considerably smaller and more profusely spotted; the eggs of the Mistle more closely resemble those of the Blackbird than the familiar blue egg, with spotting on thick end, of the Song Thrush, and the slate colour of the back, and conspicuous patch on the upper tail-coverts, of the Fieldfare, permit of his easy recognition, and the distinct eye-streaks and red mark on side (not wings) render the Redwing's identification an easy matter. The term Thrush is not popularly applied to either Fieldfare or Redwing. The feeding habits of the first three of the above birds are very similar, largely insectivorous, in a lesser degree frugivorous, and least of all granivorous. In a confined state, they can readily adapt themselves to a direct reversion of this scale, but my experiences with the Redwing convince me that he is more insectivorous than the others, and should have a slightly more generous diet. With this exception, and, of course, the reservation that any remarks on hand-rearing cannot apply to winter migrants, the method of feeding I shall advocate applies to all four.

How to Feed Thrushes.

There are quite a few good brands of Thrush foods in the market now, the price of which are such as to render it inadvisable to economise further by mixing the various ingredients ourselves. Besides, being prepared by baking, such foods are much more assimilable than any mixture of raw meals simply moistened or even scalded. Fanciers who keep a number of the more delicate species may mix the residue from their dishes with a proportion of game or dog meal, making the mass just crumbly moist with boiling water. Any grocers' currants or other dried fruit should be added before scalding, but salad, such as chopped lettuce, grated carrot, etc., is best added after the mass has cooled, as such prevents the rapid decomposition of the vegetable matter, especially during warm weather. Therefore, with a good brand of game or dog meal as a basis (free from grit or splinters of bone) the changes can be rung by the addition of hard-boiled egg, grated cheese, boiled sheep's heart, insects, fruit, and salads.

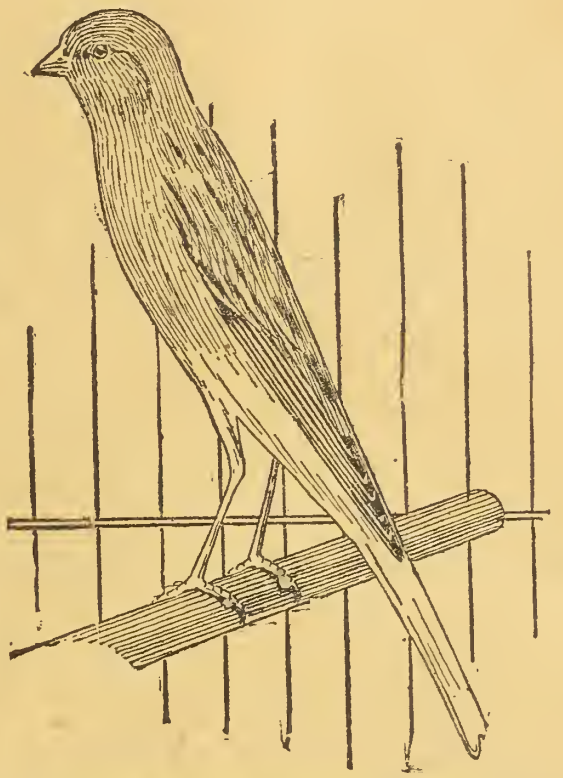
I have seen many recipes for Thrush food, some of which I should think would be rejected by any self-respecting rooster, and others which approached the opposite extreme. Silkworms, dried flies, ants' eggs, and flake are expensive, and the fancier who uses much of these for Thrushes, soon begins to think he has adopted something like a white elephant. While I am strongly opposed to any cheap, and nasty, methods of feeding, I am convinced that for such a comparatively coarse feeding species, these may quite safely be omitted, and any form of live food is much preferable. In gathering such, the procedure is so different from any that I have hitherto described, that I may describe the best and most acceptable forms of insects for this species.

Various Kinds of Live Food.

Caterpillars. Those of the white or cabbage butterfly, are very good, but difficult to procure. Another, found under turfs and stones, especially in damp places, such as those parts of a river bed which are occasionally submerged, is dirty brown in colour, and fairly plentiful. Dock grub. Large, white, found burrowing in the tuberous roots of common and bird-dock Click beetle. This is the most plentiful of the lot, and I have found constitutes a large portion of the food supplied to the wild nestlings. These are found under dried cow dung in old pastures. The use of a pair of tweezers is advisable for placing them in the box. If stored in the partly dry dung, which is not in the least offensive (being a common fuel in Egypt and India) they will keep for a few weeks. In colour they are dirty white, invariably curled up when found. I have taken over fifty from one small heap of dried dung. Another, which I cannot name, is found in large numbers in the root of the plantain ("Rat's-tail"). Snails, especially when shelled, are much liked. A stone should be placed in the aviary for him to smash them on, but for a caged Thrush I break the shells myself with nutcrackers (it's quieter).

Wasp or bee grubs are obtained by marking the entrance to their nest in daylight, and going after dark with a lamp and lighting and inserting a slow cartridge, which has been prepared by rolling a newspaper wrapper round a ¾-inch pin, gumming firmly and charging same with a mixture of gunpowder and sulphur. Mix well together and test by lighting a very small portion, it should burn freely, give off a suffocating fume, but not flash. After digging out the nest, place it in a close covered box, as many wasps may hatch later. If so, place box on stove; these wasp grubs may be preserved for winter use by evaporation. Strangely enough, though earth-worms are greedily devoured by Thrushes when at liberty, yet a very short period of captivity generally results in their contracting a distaste for such plebeian fare. Beetles also are procurable by trapping, old beer being the most enticing bait.

(To be concluded)



A FIRST-CLASS COLOUR-PRODUCER.

This very heavily green-marked Yorkshire Cock was exhibited by Mr. F. A. Tebbs (Battersea), at the Horticultural Hall Show, and secured Second Prize in the Novice Section. It should be a good stock bird for producing colour.

Plain Hints on How to Colour-Feed.

A Lecture given by J. W. Ramsden on July 4th, before the Newcastle-on-Tyne C.B.S.

THERE was a large gathering of Newcastle-on-Tyne fanciers on July 4 to hear Mr. J. W. Ramsden lecture on colour feeding. Mr. T. C. Crawhall presided at the meeting, and spoke of the pleasure it gave him to introduce Mr. Ramsden. Mr. Ramsden commenced by saying: I am afraid there is nothing I can tell you about colour feeding that has not been told before. However, I hope that there will be a discussion and plenty of questions from which both audience and lecturer may learn something.

The Three Chief Points.

I propose to deal with the subject briefly, and under 3 heads, viz., What to Colour Feed; How to Colour Feed, and How to select your colouring-agent.

1: It is customary to colour feed all Canaries excepting Crests, Borders, Liverpool Greens, Lancashires, and Belgians, though some of these are colour fed on mild feeds that slightly improve the natural colour. Most British birds are colour-fed, all Hybrids, and a good many foreign birds. In the case of colour-feeding British and foreign birds, great care must be taken. You must decide what colours you want improved, and feed accordingly.

2. How to colour feed. Commence by breeding for colour. See your stock has plenty of green blood running in its veins. You will no doubt in so doing get more marked birds than you want, but your clear and ticked birds will be teeming with colour and quality. The green bird needed as a stock bird is the bronzed golden yellow green in preference to the Liverpool green.

Do Fanciers Over Do It?

Young birds should be placed on the colour food when 6 weeks old, and old birds as soon as they commence their moult. Colour food should be given daily in small quantities—most fanciers overdo the colour feeding. I believe the birds get sick of seeing colour food before them day after day and all day long. Most of you no doubt like duck and green peas for dinner, but if this dish was served up to you for every meal for six weeks, you would be heartily sick of duck and never want to look one in the face again. It is just the same with the birds. Give them the colour feed every morning and remove it from the cage after, say, 2 or 3 hours. I am sure you will have better results by so doing than by leaving colour food in the egg pan all day long.

I also believe in giving the birds a change of diet during colour feeding. One day use biscuits for the egg food mixture, the next day bread, the next bread and biscuit mixed, so that the birds have a constant change. There is no doubt that egg food is the surest way of administering the colour. You can colour feed without egg food, for many birds will eat tasteless pepper in the raw state, but egg food is the usual and surest method.

The Ways and Means.

I always use 1 hard-boiled egg to 2 oz. of bread or biscuit, 2 teaspoonfuls of fine sugar and from 1 to 4 teaspoonfuls of tasteless pepper, commencing with one and increasing the quantity till 4 is reached. A small teaspoonful of this mixture per day is ample for any bird. In fact, many a bird colours well when colour fed on alternate days, though daily feeding is the most satisfactory. The seed box containing plain canary seed need never be removed from the cage. During colour feeding it is best not to give green food, as the vegetable colour food is in itself a laxative. Baths can be given freely; they are most beneficial.

Light has an effect on the plumage, and it is advisable to shield the birds from a strong light. This can easily be done by using a yellow or red linen blind at the window of the bird-room. There is no need to cover each cage up as some men do. The cages should be kept clean and free from red mite. Red mite, not only worry the birds, but suck from them the blood that is needed to colour the plumage.

Hints on Choosing the Pepper.

3. How to select your colouring agent. There is to-day no better colouring agent than what is known as tasteless pepper. It is ground from the pods of the sweet capsicum, and is grown in various parts of the world. I produce some pods for your inspection, also peppers ground from these pods. The colour of the pepper depends on the colour and quality of the pods used, and upon whether they have been stripped of stalk and seed. Some experts even would declare that this best sample was artificially dyed, but such is not the case. If you will watch me, I will strip this bright pod of stalk and seed, and now anyone of you can grind the husk and you will have as bright and deep a coloured pepper as the sample shown you. Good peppers command a good price. The cheap peppers are generally the poor coloured pods ground and dyed with aniline dyes in oil.

Good for the Linen Trade.

You probably have no conception of the strength of colour in the best tasteless pepper. If one of you will hand me your handkerchief I will stain it with tasteless pepper, and if you can wash, scrub, or boil the stain out I will give you a medal for your trouble. (A handkerchief was handed up and duly stained, there being roars of laughter as Mr. Ramsden quietly marked the corner with an indelible pencil, so that he could identify the handkerchief when returned.)

Mr. Crawhall spoke as to the pleasure he had had in listening to the lecture, and said he had yet to see the bronzed golden yellow green Canary mentioned by Mr. Ramsden. He invited those present to "go for" Mr. Ramsden with questions, in reply to which Mr. Ramsden said the best way to keep red mite down was to keep every nook and corner of the bird-room clean, to soak the nest pans in a solution of carbolic acid before use, and to sprinkle a teaspoonful of insect powder between pan and nest lining before the hen nested. As regards hot cayenne feeding, he failed to see any advantage in it for feeding Canaries, but used it in the proportion of 1oz. to 1lb. of tasteless for feeding Hybrids and British birds. It was also useful for starting or re-starting the moult.

Birds are Fond of Sugar.

He did not care for the use of the Cinnamon in improving colour; he would rather rely on the Green. As to the use of sugar, it preserved the egg food and many birds liked the food sweetened. As regards oil in pepper, the best sun-dried pepper pods contained quite enough oil, but a pepper ground from absolutely dry pods could have 1oz. sublime olive oil added to each pound with advantage. Iron acted as a tonic, and was supposed to fix the colour. A piece of sulphate of iron the size of a pea could be added to a quart of water and used as drinking water twice a week, with beneficial results.

Mr. Crawhall and others having spoken as to the useful hints they had picked up in listening to the lecture, the meeting closed at a late hour with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Ramsden.

Questions and Answers.

Queries will be answered under the following conditions:—

(1)—All questions must be clearly written in ink (or typewritten) on one side of paper, and must conclude with either the correct name of querist or a pseudonym, or initials.

(2)—The proper name and address in full of querist must always be written on a separate sheet of paper, and enclosed with the query. In no case must the address appear on the query.

(3)—Queries intended for different specialists must not be written on the same sheet of paper.

(4)—Queries must not include or be included in orders for books, instructions re advertisements, or any other matter for publication.

(5)—The department to which the queries refer must be stated in bold letters on the left-hand corner of the query.

(6)—If an answer in the same week's issue is desired, queries must be posted to reach us by Monday's first post at latest. Queries will be dealt with in the order in which they are received, and only as space permits. The earlier queries are received the better attention they are likely to have.

(7)—Queries relating to illnesses of birds, except enquiries as to cause of death (for which see Post Mortems will be answered by return of post on receipt of a postal order for sixpence and an addressed stamped envelope. Queries of an ordinary nature will be answered by post, if desired, on receipt of a postal order for one shilling and a stamped addressed envelope.

(8)—All who require letters of complaints written to advertisers must state grounds for doing so clearly and fully, and enclose a fee of sixpence, otherwise their letters will not receive attention. All the fees received from this source will be handed over in full to the "Referee's" Poor Childrens' Fund (London).

(9)—All queries must be addressed to the Editor, "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C. Only queries so sent will be answered. Postcards are not admissible.

NOTE.—If an answer is required concerning the proper mating, etc., of Norwich, Yorkshires, Crests, Cinnamons, Greens, Borders, Lizards, Scotch or any other variety of the Canary family, we shall, should the querist desire us to do so, be pleased to submit his questions for answer to some leading specialist of the day on the variety concerned.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

HEN CANARY SINGING (W. Butcher).—Assuming you did not mistake a young cock performer for the hen, it would be a trifle uncommon for a hen to commence singing as you say this hen did. But such occurrences are by no means rare. I have had a hen act in a similar manner this season soon after the cock was removed, but now the novelty of being alone again has worn off, she has ceased her vocal exercises. Some few hens, however, go on, and make just tolerable singers.

A SWOLLEN JAW (W. C. S.).—Which do you call the jaw, the horny part of lower mandible or its junction with the throat? You should have sent a rough sketch showing exact position of swelling, and also given some idea of its size. It is probably a small tumour. Carefully paint the swelling with tincture of iodine three times, allowing an interval of two clear days between each painting. Use a small feather or camel hair pencil for the job. Report progress in a fortnight, and give above-named particulars.

SITS ON PERCH (M. Hind).—See that the bird is quite free from cold draughts. For the next month feed on a staple of plain canary only. Every third day allow half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and on two other days each week give just a pinch of a mixture of equal parts maw, inga, teazle, and gold of pleasure. Give a liberal supply of green food daily, either chickweed, flower buds of groundsel, watercress, lettuce, or dandelion. In the drinking water add six drops of dandelion juice, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the next week give instead six drops of tincture of gentian and three of sulphuric acid every second day. Then repeat the two weeks in the same order.

SNEEZES AND BREATHES NOISILY (W. Cahill).—The Norwich hen is probably in the early stages of asthma, and is not likely to do her duty towards the solitary youngster she has. I suspect the chick is dead by now, if you did not transfer it to another hen, or adopt such treatment for poor feeders as has been given here nearly every week for some time past. The restlessness in nest is probably due to mites. Examine into this matter. See that bird is not exposed to direct draughts. Add six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much sulphate of soda as will cover a sixpence to the water every second day for a week, and in the next week give six drops each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, and three of eucalyptus oil well shaken in the water every second day. As regards clear eggs, you should have said how you treat your birds. See reply to "J.N.O." last week.

A PECULIAR RESULT (Mrs. A.G.L.).—The spraying with quassia solution could not have caused the skin to peel off in patches as you describe. Again, red mites do not live on the body of the bird, as your letter seems to imply. There are several points about your letter I cannot understand. I fancy the explanation must lie either in the nature and strength of the solution, and subsequent drying of the bird. Was it prepared from chips or essence? Is it possible the bird was dried too quickly before a fire; and how old is it? It would be interesting to know these things. Give the bird a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, every second day for a fortnight, and a pinch of maw on the alternate days. Dissolve as much boric acid as will cover a threepenny-piece in its bathing water for a week or so.

CANNOT PERCH (Mr. Roberts).—Judging from your remarks about condition of bird after handling him for examination, I suspect there is some physical injury accountable for the inability to perch or use its legs. Not unlikely it is a fractured leg, the hurt being in the upper portion, or so-called thigh. In such a case the best treatment, so to speak, is to leave it severely alone. Place bird in a moderately small cage, with one or two perches only, placed quite low down, and make seed and water vessels very easily accessible to the bird without any straining. If this cannot be accomplished, place seed and water inside on the floor in shallow vessels, such as deep egg drawers. Keep bird as quiet as possible, and do not incite it to move about or flutter it at all until it resumes an active condition voluntarily.

IS IT UNUSUAL? (Pom).—No, it is not very unusual for a hen Canary flying loose in an aviary of British Finches all in pairs to go tonest and lay a clutch of eggs. When a hen is in high condition it is only what might be expected. The only wonder would be if in an aviary filled with healthy Finches there were not plenty of males whom the wiles of this feathered Eve did not tempt from the paths of moral rectitude. You may find yourself the possessor of a brood of mules. A clutch of seven is a large one, but by no means a record. It would not be possible without microscopic help to tell whether such eggs had been fertilised by breaking one. Let the hen sit on them her full time; that's the only rational way of testing them.

TOO WIDE (Harry).—(1) If you are colour-feeding a staple diet of good sound canary is quite sufficient when moulting. A sprinkling of maw may be given with the soft food, a pinch of summer rape about every second day, and a pinch of mixed seed twice a week. If not colour-feeding, give the same staple, and add a pinch of rape separately every second day, half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, bread and milk, or egg food, strewn with maw on the alternate days, a small teaspoonful of mixed seed twice a week, and a little green food four times a week. Towards end of moult, add a pinch of linseed three times a week, and dissolve a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a large hemp seed in the water twice a week. Nothing else necessary in normal cases. (2) Birds go "rumpy," as you put it, and go off song from so many and varied causes that it is folly to attempt to advise a treatment to apply to all cases. You must particularise a little more. (3) See Mr. Weston's column next week for Linnet reply. It should have been on a separate paper.

SIX-SIDED (J. James).—(1) Either your management is very faulty or you have been exceptionally unfortunate to have 19 hens out of 20 refuse to rear young. See reply to "R. Rennie," on June 29th, or get Part VIII. of "Our Canaries," or "Canary Breeding for Beginners" for details of management at this stage. (2) Yes, it is always a good plan when breeding high-class birds to keep a few common pairs as foster parents if required. Rollers, Borders, or Norwich of a common kind are about the best, though any nondescript Canary of a good feeding strain will do. (3) It is certainly very late, and little, if any, good can be expected from hens going to nest after this time. Still, if you have one or two that seem very forward and likely to lay soon you might give them one more chance in the forlorn hope of not drawing the season blank. (4) There must have been something wrong with your treatment of the young you tried to rear by hand. See reply to "Beginner" on June 29th. (5) For stock birds and normal cases it is a very good plan to moult out in flights. Birds that show signs of trouble and moult badly cage up separately, or in couples. (6) Many birds begin to "get thin on the top" about this time. The feather will be reproduced at the moult. Do not allow any of these birds to nest again, but treat them between now and the moult as advised to "M. T." last week. Do not put anything on skin unless there are quite bare places.

should consult St. John's "Canary Breeding for Beginners" (7d.); House's "Canary Manual" (1/2); Battye's "Yorkshire Canaries" (1/1½); House's "Norwich Canaries" (1/1); Weston's "Stock Book" (7d.); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping (1/1); Norman's "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); Ramsden's "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); "Seeds and Foods for Cage Birds" (1/2); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 5 "The Pet Canary," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 10 "The Roller," No. 23 "The Border Fancy," No. 24 "Green Canaries." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free, from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

MOULTING QUERIES (Beginner).—It is advisable, though not absolutely essential to keep the sexes separate whilst moulting. Cocks may be moulted together in groups or couples if necessary, as also may the hens. A double-breeder with the slide removed will accommodate four or five birds. A single-breeder will do for a couple, or at a pinch a trio of birds for moulting and colour-feeding, if strict attention is paid to cleanliness. When the moult is getting advanced and the new plumage is showing, cover about three-fourths of the fronts with thin buff calico or paper in the case of likely show birds. Your question if young birds get their flights directly they have finished moulting is rather vague. Young birds of the year do not lose their flights or tail at the first moult. Certainly the young will be eligible for showing as soon as they have finished moulting, and are fine in plumage. Thanks for remarks about the information received from these replies. Glad you find them so useful.

A PANTING ROLLER (A. Tyrrell).—You are feeding the bird incorrectly. Give a staple diet of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give half-a-teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and sprinkle it with equal parts maw and gold of pleasure seed. On the alternate days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, and teazle. Give a spray of green food daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, for three consecutive days, and afterwards four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week. At the end of fortnight stop all drugs and reduce in frequency the extra item of food by one-half. See that the bird is not exposed to cold draughts, excessive fluctuations of heat, or impure air. Do not saturate his plumage with a spray, by any means. You may give him now and again the least puff from a sprayer to just slightly bedew the plumage, and then immediately put on a bath and let it remain on half-an-hour or so. If he does not complete the bath himself, let him go unwashed. If you persevere in this method he will in time begin to bathe himself.

A TRIO (Novo).—(1) Yes, if Canaries are bred of a hardy stock, and reared under normal conditions, they are quite able to stand the winter outdoors. Hundreds of Canaries are so kept. If free from damp the greenhouse would probably make a very fair aviary. Much depends upon its structure and position. It would be advisable to paint the glass on top with "summer cloud," and if the birds are not so hardy as could be desired, you should get movable shutters made in autumn to cover a good portion of the glass, and thus help to maintain a more equable temperature through the winter. (2) It would be quite correct to turn both sexes and old and young into a large aviary, where they would be practically at liberty. But in ordinary indoor aviaries and large cages it is best to separate the sexes. See reply to "Beginner" in this issue. From middle of February to beginning of March is about the best time to cage them to prepare for breeding. (3) The birds will moult quite well in a large aviary, and may be all the better for doing so. But in moulting exhibition birds they should be caged up to ensure better control, and keep the birds steady. Here also see reply to "Beginner."

TROUBLE WITH HENS (Yorkshire Breeder).—In the first place you do not mention in what way the youngster of the quarter-bred Belgian was crippled. If it was simply inturned toes you certainly might have tried some treatment. The young that were fed up to a fortnight old should have been quite easily saved by hand-rearing. You say nothing about your methods of management, feeding, or where the birds are kept. I am rather inclined to think that these hens have been accustomed to treatment quite different from yours, and probably to a warmer room. The manner of the quarter Belgian at night is certainly indicative of the early stages of so-called asthma, and you would do well to look up this point in the chapter on Diseases in "Our Canaries," where it is dealt with by Dr. Bowes. For one week give her a diet of plain canary and a plentiful supply of green food, and add to the water every second day six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence. In the next week add a little rape to diet, and give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake, with four drops of sherry, and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of equal parts maw, inga, and gold of pleasure, and in the water add 20 drops of whisky, five each of oxymel of squills. Ipecacuanha wine, and two of oil of eucalyptus, well shaken together, every second day.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

SINGING BIRDS (Rita).—The Siskin Mule should turn out a good bird for you, and the price is about right. By watching the advertisements in "C.B.," you should be able to procure both an Alario and Cape Canary, which is also known as the Grey-necked Serin, or better put an advertisement in yourself. The little Serins are well and singing lustily in the open.

FEATHER EATING (A.T.H.).—This is practically incurable once the bird becomes confirmed in this vice. You give me no details at all, and before I can attempt a reply, you must tell how long it has been doing this; how long you have had the bird, and how it has been fed and treated while with you. Meanwhile, if you carefully read replies in last week's (July 6), you will be able to give palliatives while you are waiting for a reply. Your query arrived too late for a reply in our last.

RIBBON FINCHES (G.W.L.).—Yes, the Ribbon Finches all breed in a cage and should do fairly well with you. Do not have stiff, formal perches in the cage, but put a twiggy spray at each end of the cage, and at the back of each put a Hartz travelling-cage, first removing perches and fittings, and put a little hay at the bottom of each; supply a Canary nest-bag and leave the birds to do the rest. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet; green food, grit, and water for drinking and bathing, and when they have young to feed, preserved and live ants' eggs and a little of some good soft food mixture. Do not interfere with their nesting arrangements, most foreign species resent this.

CORDON BLEUS (Cordon).—For the conditions you name I should advise a pair of Budgerigars, and get our Nutshell, "Budgerigars," 2½d. post free from our Manager, to tell you how to keep them. These are hardy, beautiful, and would interest a small boy immensely with their antics, and in a roomy cage would breed. At all times seed, green food, and grit will meet their modest requirements. The general colouration is bright grass green, with dusky black marking above, yellow forehead, face and throat, and some black and blue spots, and their value is 5s. to 6s. 6d. per pair. The cere of the male is bright blue, and that of the female ruddy brown, but get our Nutshell, as above, and read it up before getting either cage or birds.

RED MITE AND WAXBILLS (T. A. Holmes).—Remedies to be of any use must be severe, and perches, utensils, etc., must be alike treated. Paint the cage thoroughly with crude paraffin, especially all crevices and holes, leave for a couple of hours, then repeat the operation, and after another two hours well swill out with boiling water, thoroughly soaking and searching every part. A final swilling with cold water and leaving in the open to dry, should leave the cage quite free of the pests. Of course, you must treat the birds with quassia solution or other insecticide, or the cages will soon become infested again. Note: cages need an annual treatment for this pest. As regards Waxbills, the rarer kinds are: Sydney and Violet-eared, the former are on the market at the present time, the latter are very uncommon and beautiful, and would cost (none obtainable at present) £4 to £5 per pair, according to number arriving. All the Waxbills are beautiful—Grey, St. Helena, Golden-breasted, and Orange-cheeks, 4s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. per pair, new arrivals sometimes cheaper.

AILING COCKATOO (W.D.E.).—I certainly advise you calling in a vet. to ascertain the real nature of the swelling, and if it calls for an operation, such had better be performed (with operations the risk is about the same as with humans), and the bird would probably be saved much suffering. On the other hand, if you wish to try a little longer, foment as already advised, dry with a cloth, and paint the swelling with tincture of iodine daily, so long as the skin remains unbroken; if the skin breaks, fomenting can be carried out as usual, and after drying anoint the sore or blister with a little antiseptic ointment. Give any kind of fruit it will eat, sweet apple is very wholesome, and most Parrots are very fond of it, especially the core. As greenfood, offer lettuce, green peas, green oats, or other cereals, seeding grass, chickweed, groundsel, the prunings of fruit trees, if obtainable, would amuse the bird; as regards nuts, all the following can be given: Brazil, walnut, Spanish, "monkey," a variety is good for the bird. I do not mean all at once, but vary the kind with each fresh supply you get in. In all other respects treat as per first reply. If the voldings become at all watery, give the magnesia less frequently. As a last word, if the swelling does not soon begin to yield to the treatment, call in a vet., as surgical treatment will probably give immediate relief.

MOST SUITABLE FOREIGNERS (Mick).—Before I can answer I must know (1) Size of room; (2) what amount of sun it gets; (3) are the birds to fly loose or be kept in cages? (4) are soft or hardbills, or Parrakeets or Finches preferred? If you will repeat query next week, giving the above details, I shall be pleased to supply the desired information.

WHAT PARROT? (Constant Reader).—Your bird is the Australian Roseate or Rose-breasted Cockatoo. I have heard really talented birds of this species, but the majority of them do not do much in the talking line. However, as some do, why not yours? Do not give it table scraps, tea, coffee, or milk sops, but at mealtimes have a little of something wholesome to hand so as to satisfy it; for instance, a piece of bread moistened in chemical food and warm water. Fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, and seed mixture should form its diet, and grit and cuttlebone must be always in the cage. First win its confidence, then keep it where it can see and hear plenty of your "home life," also teach it by constant repetition short sentences or words—not a mixture, but keep at one till it is learned and it should prove responsive to some extent.

REARING CUTTHROATS (C.A.W.).—Some pairs are uncertain and irregular, others just the reverse. I cannot, of course, point out where you have failed, as you do not state size of aviary or number of inmates, but it would appear very probable that your indoor aviary contains too many birds for regular breeding results. The diet you are giving is quite in order, and, other conditions being equal, the young should have been reared. If others are hatched out try a little live food—gentles and a few mealworms, and a little of some good insectile mixture (soft food) in lieu of the moistened sponge cake. If you can procure them easily, live ants' eggs are the very finest form of live food for such species. I am inclined to put your failure down to the interference of the other occupants of the aviary, though as a rule Cutthroats are able to hold their own in almost any company.

SAFFRON FINCHES (K.K.).—Many pairs of Saffron Finches are very pugnacious, and in confined quarters should not be associated with Canaries or birds weaker than themselves, or feathers will fly; they also disturb the nesting arrangements of other birds by their obstreperous demeanour. They require much the same treatment as a Canary—white millet, canary, and a little wild Finch mixture, with greenfood, grit, cuttlebone, and water is about all they need on ordinary occasions, but when they are feeding young, soft food (insectile mixture), and a few live insects, should be given. They have reared young in a cage. Their eggs closely resemble those of the English Sparrow.

ZEBRA FINCHES, ETC. (H.J.F.).—Very irregular with new arrivals, as a rule it does not last long, and usually takes place either in July, August, or September. Zebra Finches breed any time between March and October, except during the moult. "Double breeder" was merely used as a familiar type and size; your cages are very suitable, and as soon as the birds have settled down you should have some luck with them. As regards nesting period, this is similar with all three, but the Bengalese are a manufactured variety, and there are many infertile eggs, young dead in shell, etc., but a few young, at any rate, should be reared annually. With new acquisitions, it is a matter of making a start; some pairs take a few months to settle down, but afterwards go steadily on, and rear two, three, or more broods per season.

CARDINALS, AVADAVATS, ETC. (T.G.S.).—(1) The cross has occurred, and the young were successfully reared. The element of uncertainty is very strong in all Hybrid breeding; still, it is very probable they will do so. Earwigs are appreciated by many Finches as well as softbills, but it's a matter of individual taste; if he'll take them, let him have his fill. (2) These are merely local races, of which there are several. The bird with red blotches is the cock coming into colour, the other is probably the hen. Her plumage does not change. The period is variable, but usually this month or next, both for these and the African Weavers. (3) It all depends on size of aviary, etc., but if they have room for exercise, and the situation is not damp, it should do well enough. In several quite Northern counties Cordon Bleus exist quite happily in an outdoor aviary all the year round, but it is in aviaries with roomy flights and well lighted shelters. During periods of severe weather the birds are kept shut in the shelters, but no heat is given. I note your remarks. The Chaffinch and Yellowhammer are not safe for the others. I fear the sequel will be tragedy.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

IS IT SHEPHERD'S PURSE? (L. T. Davies).—The weed sent me is pennycress, which bears very little resemblance to shepherd's purse. Why not get the coloured plate of wild seeds, which was issued by CAGE BIRDS some time ago? Then you could easily identify it. Send three penny stamps to the Publisher for a copy; it is a plate every bird-keeper ought to possess.

IS THERE A "GREEN LINNET"? (Wagtail).—"Green Linnet" is a name popularly applied to the Greenfinch; it is, of course, not a correct name. The Greenlinch is not even a close relation of the Linnet, but by scientists is classed as a Grosbeak, along with the Hawfinch, whereas the Linnet is one of the "true Finches," a group of birds coming between the Grosbeaks and the Buntings.

YOUNG CUCKOO (C. S. Traill).—My opinion of young Cuckoos as "pets" was fully given in my answer to T. Tong in our last issue. In my opinion this species ought not to be taken into captive life. As regards value, personally I would not "bang saxpence" in acquiring your bird. I expect before the winter is well advanced, it will be as dead as a last year's railway time-table. I know of no external sex distinctions, except that on an average the hen is said to be the smaller. With regard to food, note another reply this week.

ANOTHER YOUNG CUCKOO (R. C.).—Why you head your query "Forcign Bird" I cannot understand; anyway, as you say you are rearing the bird by hand, I imagine it is the English Cuckoo you indicate. My opinion of this bird is given in the answer to T. Tong last week, and C. S. Traill in this issue. I wish you joy of it. A good food can be made by thoroughly softening (soaking) with hot water a tablespoonful of crushed Melox (or other good brand of dog food), and then adding about the same quantity of a high-class insectile mixture, dry. Several good foods are advertised in our columns at from 1s. 6d. a pound upwards. It is against the rules to recommend any particular one. For variety give now and again chopped hard-boiled egg, cut up greenfood (lettuce, watercress, etc.), shredded lean meat (beef, mutton, or fowl, or rabbit flesh), black beetles (cock-roaches), meal worms, well-scoured gentles, and anything living, in fact, which seems suitable (caterpillars, grubs, flies, etc.). In captivity Cuckoos are really very accommodating in the matter of food, and will gulp down anything from a gooseberry to a wire-nail, but as pets they are absolutely the last birds I should recommend anyone to keep. I have "had some," as the poet says, and more than once. They get bedraggled and dirty-looking, no matter how clean their cage, while it is very, very difficult to keep the plumage unbroken (and new feathers for some reason or other rarely attain to perfect growth); further, the nature of their excrement makes them offensive unless their cage is constantly cleaned out.

TWO LINNETS (Harry).—Your letter is both very brief and very vague, but I can assure you that when birds get "very rumpey," as you term it, they are as good as "genero"—treatment should commence before they reach that far-gone state. Why not invest 2d. in the "Nutshell" booklet on the Linnet, and another 2d. in that dealing with the Diseases of Birds? They might help you to put in that "stitch in time" which, so to speak, can patch up a bird's health. Give your birds the following seed mixture: canary and teazle 2 parts each, summer rape 1 part, charlock half part, and linseed half part, by measure. Also mix the following by weight: gold of pleasure, maw, plantain, sesame, and white lettuce, 2 ozs. of each, thistle and dandelion 1 oz. of each, and give a teaspoonful daily to each bird whilst ailing. As medicine get one ounce of dandelion juice (taraxacum) from a chemist, and give a small teaspoonful in two tablespoonfuls of drinking water fresh daily for five days. The birds should have plenty of ripe seeding heads of shepherd's purse, chickweed and groundsel, obtainable everywhere now.

STARLINGS AND SNOW BUNTINGS (Britisher).—At this time of the year the cock Starling has a yellow beak, whereas the hen has a dark beak. You can verify this by watching the pairs now busy feeding young, etc. Old birds and their broods come into my garden every day. The hen, too, has the larger spangling, and is not so intensely blue-black and "shiny" as her mate. The hen Snow Bunting is on the average smaller than the male. She is never so pure a white in colour, but more uniformly stained with greyish-brown, and she does not carry the black found in the wings and on the backs of the adult males; in her case it is ashen or brownish-black. I had two hens quite recently, one of them house-moulted, but never noticed them singing. The cock is a very nice songster in my opinion; I like his music well.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manuol" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviories, Bird-rooms, and Coges" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plonts" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr Clorke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylork," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Lorge Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly procticol ond instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Coge Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

ANOTHER GOLDFINCH IN TROUBLE (H. W. Whalley).—I presume you are feeding the bird on the lines I recommend. The soaked teazle (note reply given "Anxious" this week) is good to offer now and again. The slight hoarseness and cold should soon yield to a course of the following medicine: one ounce each of glycerine, oxymel of squills and ipecacuhana wine, mixed. Stir a small teaspoonful into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water fresh daily, for ten or twelve days, if necessary. I do not remember the previous letter of which you speak.

GOLDFINCH AND JAY (Woodford).—It is not a question of food so much as a question of conditions under which the bird is moulted. If a Goldfinch is moulted in a real big, clean cage, which has in it a bath of soft water (changed daily) into which he goes freely, he will come through as hard (tight) and glossy in plumage as can be desired. An early start and a quick finish are, of course, very helpful, while a free supply of thistle heads, and especially those with maggots at the centre when broken open, should be provided. It is not necessary to colour-feed a Goldfinch. Wash the eyes of your Jay two or three times daily in a weak warm solution of Condy's fluid—a few drops in a teacupful of comfortably warm water. Can't you form any idea as to the cause of the trouble in the region of the eyes? Blindness is uncommon.

IN TROUBLE (Anxious).—Personally I do not look with favour on canary seed as the staple diet of Goldfinches. I am not going to say that therein lies the cause of so many of your birds going thin and dying, but I certainly strongly recommend you to give teazle seed regularly (equal parts with the canary), with a teaspoonful of good, sound hemp-seed twice a week and a dessert spoonful of cracked sunflower seed twice a week (not both on the same days). The wild seeds you mention are all right. Give seeding plants (especially thistles, knapweed, cornflower, etc.) freely now. I don't think you'll have so many thin birds then. I consider myself that unless Goldies can be given the run of a large aviary they are better caged singly during the spring and summer months. If you have any birds queer now, let them have a free run at cracked hemp, and also niger seed, while give them plenty of soaked teazle seed—pour on some moderately hot water, let stand all night, strain, dab dry in cloth, and then give to the birds. Many fanciers have a great belief in the liquor the seed has been steeped in, giving it the birds to drink. The soaked teazle is a fine thing, anyway.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

J. James.—The hon. sec. of the Nottingham and Notts O.S., is Mr. G. Wilkinson, 86, Lenton Boulevard, Nottingham. (2) Give them daily a dessert-spoonful of a high grade insectile mixture (prepared in the usual way) and a dozen mealworms.

Herbert Howard.—There are dozens of kinds of bird-traps. For what species of bird is it required, and where do you propose using it? Must have full particulars.

W. How.—You can't "keep the smell of paint out" very well, but can reduce it to a minimum by keeping strong-smelling disinfectants in the room for a time—even "Sanitas" might do, but everything depends upon the circumstances and the power of the smell (i.e., amount of painting going on).

J. Gallacher.—Obtain from a chemist a length of the rubber tubing used for the old-style infant's feeding bottle, and cut it into suitable short pieces.

BRISTOL F.A.

First summer radius show, Kingsley Hall, Old Market Street, July 3. The classes were rather scantily filled in places, owing, no doubt, to moult, and bad luck in breeding. The attendance was very good all day. The cage bird end of show looked very attractive, being decorated very beautifully with roses and sweet peas, from Messrs. Magg's (the secretary's) gardens, which readily turned into cash at the end of the evening. Mr. W. G. Bull judged.

THATTO HEATH.

Held July 6, in the Bowling Pavilion, Railway Hotel, when only a very few youngsters turned up. Why members who have bred a few did not send their birds, it is difficult to understand, and this is not the way to advance the society in the district. Those who did show sent a few very nice birds. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged. Mr. Macdonald is now Hon. Sec., and the members have a good man in him, whom they ought to support. NOR. YELL. (5): 1, R. P. Bixter, leader very pretty clear; 2, 3, H. H. CHESTER C.B.S.

This newly-formed society held their first nest feather show on July 3rd, in the club room, a very comfortable place indeed. It turned out a great success, over 80 birds being staged. Quality was well to the fore; some of the exhibits, with a decent moult, will want stopping. Some very good Norwich were on view, while Yorks. were strong, but not quite up to the type of the former. Some nice British were staged by Messrs. Hemings and Brereton. The show was well patronised, being full all the afternoon. The secretary, Mr. R. N. Williams, knows his duties well, and everything was in excellent order. He was well served by Messrs. Dutton and Simpson. The society is 40 strong, and has Mrs. Way as President, and Mr. S. Whitlow as Vice-President. The latter soon supplied some bread and milk when one or two of the exhibits went "down" a bit. Messrs. Jones and Chester were the fortunate winners of the Thompson Cup. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool), who gave entire satisfaction, placed the cards.

NORWICH, CL. YELL. (5): 1, Jones and Chester, rare type and quality, full head and neck, clean cut; 2, Gardner, real good, bit small; 3, Lloyd. BUFF (8): 1, Lloyd, close feather, bonny head and neck, smart carriage; 2, vhe, Woodfin, another good one; 3, Jones and Chester. TK., ETC., YELL. (4): 1, Lloyd, boat shape, good head and neck, put down in faultless form; 2, Jones and Chester, near thing only failing in bead; 3, Bracegirdle. BUFF: 1, Jones and Chester, variegated, very cobby, good head, neck and back, staged well; 2, Gardner, nice quality, broad back, and clean cut away.; 3, Bracegirdle. YORKS. CL. YELL. (14): 1, Jones and Chester, long, excellent type and quality, wants a little more training; 2, Farrell, straight as a gun barrel, rare quality; 3, Williams. CL. BUFF (grand class) (13): 1, 2, Lloyd, two eye-openers, leader great length, well braced wings and tail; 3, Jones and Chester. YELLOW (8): 1, Williams, Cin. cap mark, very sweet, well balanced, plenty of leg; 2, Hemings and Brereton, rare length, fine wings and legs; 3, Davies. BUFF (5): 1, 8, Davies, topper for size and condition, grand legs, very straight; 2, Jones and Chester, erect and fearless, beaten length only; 3, David. A.O.V. GOLDFINCH (2): 1, Hemings and Brereton, expansive blaze, well cut, fine tanning, good one; 2, Whitlow, rare size and colour, beaten blaze. LINNET: 1, Hemings and Brereton, excellent nut-brown, rare pencilling, shone like silk; 2, Richards, big one, good pencilling; 3, Whitlow. SELLING (6): 1, 2, Dalton; 3, 4, Gardner.

WALLASEY.

Held July 6th, in the "Fairhaven Institute," when somewhere about 90 exhibits turned up; some very promising Yorks., Yorks. Greens, a few nice Borders, and a nice show of Brit. Seedeaters. The fine group of special prizes got together largely by the efforts of Mr. T. Edwards, the hon. sec., and others, made competition well worth while. Mr. Edwards had matters well in hand, and the work was got through promptly. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged, and his awards were well received.

YORKS., CL. YELL. (7): 1, 3, Morton, slim, typical, A1 style, colour and quality; 2, R. B. Wright, fine feather and carriage. BUFF (7): 1, Alston, good all round youngster, in fine order; 2, Morton, fine shape, good head, nice quality, and condition; 3, Green. TKD. YELL. (5): 1, 3, Morton, very good pair, former tick neck, best all round bird; 2, Edwards, a bit broken in moult, grand bird all over. TKD. BUFF (6): 1, W. Young, wing mark, very neat all through; 2, Morton, grand feather and type; 3, Wright. YELL., GREEN YORKS. (7): 1, 2, 3, Benson, fine set of youngsters, leader rare good self, full of colour and type. BUFFS (5): 1, 3, Benson, leader very neat, A1 colour and type; 2, Edwards, very nice, bit smaller. FOUL BUFF (6): 1, 2, Wright, pair of very fine birds for colour and type; 3, Edwards, not far behind. BORD. GREENS, ETC. HULL C.B.S.

The annual F. F. show was held in the Oddfellows' Hall, on July 6th, when 122 entries were received, which must be considered very satisfactory, taking into account the unsatisfactory breeding season fanciers have experienced in this district. Some exceptionally good birds were staged, however, both by champion and novice members. Points gained at this show counted for the champion and novice cups respectively, the following being the position up to date (this show included): Champion (all varieties): Harland 95, Walker 84, Stamford 56, Stone 38, Frith 30, Clayton, A., 24, Pepper 13, Mason 9, Douse 8, Prentice 5, Barwick 3. Novice (Norwich): Sutton 34, Ware, C. W., 22, Calvard 13, Ridley 13, Potter, F. F., 11, McKay 9, Beckett 9, Cross 7, Clark 6, Potter 5, Heseltine 4, Hope, L., 4, Longhorn 3, Thirsk 3, Riley 1. Novice (Yorks.): Ware, Chas., 26, Sowden, W. E., 24, Smith 11, Sowden, H., 11, Ware, C. W., 10, Murrey 10, Gilson 10, Girling 10, Oaks 8, Parkes 7, Lambert 7, Potter, F. F., 5, Horsley 4, Lightfoot 3, Kemp 1. British: Riley 81½, Potter, F. F., 37, Thirsk 36½, McKay 29, Lambert 11, Beckett 9, Howe 9, Heseltine 8, Parkes 8, Cross 6, Calvard 2. A.O.V.: Howes 7, Potter 6½, Ridley 5, Sowden, W. E., 5. Mr. George Harland won special for best unflighted with a grand yellow Norwich, but only after a hard tussle with a very nice Yorks. belonging to a new member, Mr. Chas. Ware. Mr. Clews (Grimsby) judged all Nor. and A.O.V. Can., Mr. Charles Stephenson, Yorks. Mr. Fowl (Grimsby) was not present, and Mr. Geo. Harland kindly officiated over the Hyb. and Brit classes. The awards seemed to give every satisfaction.

CHAMP. NOR. CL. YELL: 1, 2, Harland; 3, Mason. BUFF: 1, 2, Harland. TK. YELL.: 1, Harland; 2, Mason. BUFF: 1, 2, Harland. NOVICE CL. YELL.: 1, McKay; 2, Sutton; 3, Calvard. F.; 2, McKay; 3, Riley. BRAMBLE FINCH, ETC.: 1, Stamford; 2, 3, Potter, F. F. A.O.S. HARDBILL: 1, Riley; 2, Lambert; 3, Parkes. SOFTBILL: 1, Frith.

WALLSEND & MID-TYNE C.B.A.

Seventh annual F.F. Show held July 6th, close on 100 birds being staged. Norwich and Borders were strong classes, and the Green and Cinnamon Borders attracted great admiration, while the judgment of a young judge, Mr. W. Ronald, was allowed by all to have done him credit. Mr. N. Hymass' team of Norwich were very promising, and only for wrong clasing one would have carried off the challenge cup easily. The cup was declared won by Mr. John M. Macdonald by two 1sts and one 2nd. Mr. W. McGinn had out another champion yellow. Mr. Elliott, a new member, staged a beauty, and a gold medal goes with the cup and one for runner-up, which Mr. McGinn secures. The gate receipts were a great success and will give a large balance. We were pleased to see so many visitors from kindred societies and we tender to them sincere thanks, as it is very encouraging.

NOR. CL. YELL. (6): 1, McGinn; 2, Newton; 3, Little. BUFF (11): 1, Elliott; 2, Macdonald; 3, McGinn. MKD. YELL. (3): 1, McGinn; 2, Newton; 3, Reeves. BUFF (8): 1, Hymass; 2, Reed; 3, Reeves. Four Greenfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids.

And Maybe More to Follow.

Sir,—Being a constant reader of Cage Birds, I noted Mr. A. Butler's Greenfinch Bullfinch Hybrid, and I am writing to tell you that I have reared three out of one nest of six eggs, and they are eight weeks old to-day—two cocks and one hen. I got another one out of the next nest of five eggs, and that is a cock five weeks old. This hen Bullfinch has laid 28 eggs to date, and is nesting again.

The Cause of Eggs "Drying Up."

Sir,—I thank Mr. Long for his kindness in answering my query. I can see my friend's opinion is all wrong, and it would be foolish for me to stick to an opinion which has been proved to be wrong, because I have the welfare of my birds to think of, and it was only my anxiety for them that caused me to ask the question, as I naturally thought that my feeding, or something else, was the cause of so many of the eggs "drying up." I may add that I also have had young sweated through using nest linings, and I discard them as soon as the young are hatched. I also greatly thank Mr. Claude St. John for his kindness in answering my query. I could not understand why one or two eggs were "drying up" while the others hatched out. I may say that I had always kept the eggs in bran; that was why I penned the query, as I was rather anxious to do the right thing to ensure success if possible. So now, with thanks to Cage Birds and to Messrs. St. John and Long, I will also "dry up."

After the Accident.

A Fancier's Joyful Surprise.

Sir,—In the splendid double Spring Number of Cage Birds I inserted a small advertisement. On the following Sunday, as the double number came out ou the Friday, while I was enjoying a cycle ride for the purpose of studying bird life, I met with a serious accident. I had to abandon my return journey and take to my bed at the house of a relative, who, as luck would have it, lived near by. As I laid on my bed in agony I was thinking of my Canaries and other birds, which I keep for breeding and singing, and wondering if I should get better in time to breed some youngsters from the pairs which I had put up, when I received a letter from home to say they had been receiving orders by nearly every post and also opening the door to many would-be customers. It was the splendid double number which had brought so many customers. After receiving this good news—I do not know if it was the medical treatment or the good news—I soon got better, and in a very few weeks returned home by rail. The very first thing I did on entering my house was to run as quickly as possible till I came to my outdoor aviary. I then had a good look at my lovely creatures. I had been inside some time, closely studying my pets, when I began to think to myself what a lot of strange faces there were amngst them. So I made up my mind to enquire how they came there. On entering the parlour I found my family laughing to their hearts' content, so after asking them how they all were, because this was the first time I had seen them since I came home, I asked: "What are you laughing at?" to which they replied: "Haven't you been to the aviary?" After keeping me in this suspense, I was told that they had been doing a little bit of Canary breeding while I had been away, with the pairs that I had put up for breeding, and the "strange faces" were the young ones. When I had got over this happy surprise, my people said: "Have you seen the breeding department?" I said "No; I will not worry the dear old pairs till morning." It was then getting very dark in the evening. Next morning, about five or a little before, I was up, and soon made my way to the aviary. It was a lovely morning. The sun was shining, and the birds in the aviary were giving their little lungs proper exercise, which I took to be a warm welcome for me. After looking at them from the outside, I made my way inside. I found most of the hens off looking for food for their young ones. In some nests there were eggs in various numbers from one to five, and some pairs which had just finished rearing one family, were making preparations for the next. When I had seen to their wants, I made my way to my room, and seated myself at my small writing table, and there my eyes rested upon a large number of letters which during my accident had been delivered. The letters were chiefly about Canaries, in answer to the small advertisement which appeared in Cage Birds. It is a good many years ago now since I started in the Fancy with a pair of Yorkshire Canaries and a breeding cage, and up into my little bedroom I took my beauties, so they would be quiet and comfortable. When the birds started building I got very excited going up to the cage and pulling the nest box out, then lifting out the nesting material to see if there might be any eggs underneath! I think I did this about six times a day! At last I was rewarded by seeing an egg—not in the nest box, but broken on the floor. And the three succeeding mornings I found the hen had laid on the floor, and then put her beak through the eggs. This ended number one round. After another week the hen started making another nest. Then in a couple of days she laid an egg, and this time in the nest box. Thought I, we are getting on. But on looking in the box the next morning the egg was gone, though another one, much larger, was there. I made up my mind to watch her. She went on building, and, of course, as she laid each egg she hid it under the nesting material. I left her the empty box and eggs. But she "did" me then, for she pulled out her own feathers and her husband's too, and so kept on hiding up the eggs! My first season was not a success as regards the rearing of young Canaries, but I learnt a most excellent lesson, and that was not to put my nose into other families' concerns—it does not matter if it be a Canary family or any other family. I may say I have, since my first season, been very successful right up till the present one, always keeping my Canaries and other birds in my outdoor aviary all the year round, with no heat whatever, and they are always in the best of health, both summer and winter, till old age kills them.

Does Supplying Egg-shell Make Birds Egg-eaters?

Sir,—In "Timely Hints" a contributor suggests the use of egg shell in grit. I have been told that this induces birds to eat their own eggs. Will any fancier verify or contradict this statement?

Challenge Cup for Best Bird First Time of Showing.

Sir,—I wish to inform you that your paper Cage Birds is very "infectious," for I came across an old copy about eighteen months ago and after I had read it I had the "bird fever." I commenced breeding, and the first season I reared twenty-five. This season I have over seventy youngsters. Having given £2 to £4 10s. per pair for the old birds, I thought I would "have a pop" at showing, so I joined the Barrow and Dist. C.B.A. three months ago. Our first show was July 6, so I took six birds—three yellows and three buffs, all Yorkshires. The result was 1st and 2nd with yellows, 1st, 3rd, and very highly commended and challenge cup for best bird in show with buffs. Not so bad for a novice. When I started breeding I went in for good stuff, and this is the result of my labour. I have gained all my experience by reading Cage Birds and your Annual for 1912. I wish Cage Birds the success it richly deserves.

THE STOCK BOOK.

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

It simplifies the operations in the Birdroom and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Gives also valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

A noted fancier says of this book, "It makes bird-breeding easy."

Birds which Deserve to be More Popular.

A Practical Account of Four of Our Buntings.

Sir,—The Snow Bunting I have found to be one of the best of the Buntings to steady, and if well looked after it will repay any lover of birds for any attention given to it. I have about 200 birds (different varieties), including nearly all known species of British Finches, Buntings, etc., but the Snow is my favourite. I have one bird we call "Tim," almost white; he has quite a charming song, and will fly about the room and perch on one's shoulder. This is after about three months in a cage, and I have others almost as tame. I like to get them with a good broad head; head, neck, and under parts white as possible, back as black as possible. They alter somewhat in winter—white tinged with ruddy brown. You can also trace the same colour in the black or darker parts. The hen is very similar to the cock, only of a more indistinct colouring, dusky in all parts. They should be, in my opinion, much like a good Norwich Canary in shape, deep in chest, and should measure about seven inches in length. I feed mine on plain canary seed for six days, and mixed seed on Sunday—any insects I can get, and a few mealworms daily. They will readily come to you for the latter. I should also like to mention the rest of my Buntings, commencing with the Cirl. This is very attractive, rather shy, but fairly easy to tame. I have one I consider a fine bird. The colour throughout is of a rich chestnut with a black tinge, head olive, back of neck ditto streaked with black, rump dusky greenish olive, yellow stripe above and beneath eye, black throat, wide collar of yellow, narrowing at back of neck, breast greyish olive. Length, six inches or a little over. The hen is of a more dusky colour, and without yellow face markings. I feed on plain canary seed; they are also fond of oats, chickweed, sorrel, mealworms, and garden worms. I might add that the Cirl is not much of a songster—very jerky, similar to a Yellow Bunting, but without the long drawn notes. The Yellow Bunting I like to get with a good broad head, and as yellow as possible (not a buff), with broad face markings as dark as possible, and a nice V mark from beak to back of skull. Unfortunately, I have just lost the best specimen I have ever seen. This bird measured, laid out, not stretched, 7 1-3in. from tip of beak to tip of tail, and across head ⅓in., has a splendid V mark on head 1-3in. wide, face markings very dense, ⅓in. wide, breast of a bright yellow slightly touched with ruddy brown specks all over—the brightest yellow tints it has ever been my luck to witness. Messrs. Cooper, Grahame, and Warley all admired and wanted this bird for exhibition purposes. I had never exhibited it myself: I had made up my mind to send out a team of Buntings to the leading shows this coming season, but have now given up the idea. I have sent this bird to be stuffed, and shall be pleased to show it to anyone interested. In fact, I am always pleased to show my birds to people, but should like to add that they are not for disposal; I disposed of all that I wished to part with through your paper by one advertisement some weeks back, and all that I have left will go to Australia early in March, 1913. The average length of this bird is about 6¼in. The hen is not so bright in colour as the cock, nor so clearly marked. The one I have in my possession is yellowish all over, with thickly distributed streaks and spots of ruddy brown and grey. I feed mainly on canary seed. This bird also likes soaked wheat, berries, and weeds from the garden, and is very partial towards mealworms, and will gobble up almost any insect. The Reed Bunting we used to call in the country the Reed Sparrow. I remember some twelve years back going to a friend's house to see his birds and having a quarrel with him over these. He had three, and exclaimed: "What do you think of these, my boy? Three of the best Buntings I have ever seen." I stopped him with the remark: "Let them out before they do you a bit of no good—they're only Reed Sparrows." And at the time he could not convince me to the contrary! I now think that if you get a good specimen of this bird nothing is nicer. At the present time I have about half a dozen—one standing out well from the others, having a jet black head with a pure white ring about ⅛in. wide round the neck; back a very rich ruddy brown; under parts greyish white streaked with a dusky colour, especially towards flank. This particular bird measures 6¾in., but the usual length is about six inches. The hen is very much like a hen Sparrow, but of finer structure—the white neck hardly shows, the head is brownish mottled, and the under parts reddish white with lightish brown spots. I feed on canary seed and a few mealworms; they also like a little green food and grass. In the part of the country I come from these birds are pretty plentiful. I have often seen five or six nests within a few yards of each other at the river side; they generally build in the rushes. The Reed alters, as does the Snow Bunting, very much in plumage at different seasons.

A Society Started at Bargoed.

Sir,—I am pleased to tell you that through your kindness in inserting my letter in Cage Birds, we have been able to gather a very creditable number of fanciers to form our society in Bargoed, to be known as Bargoed and District C.B.S. Our next meeting is to be held at Hillier's Hairdressing Saloon, Greenfield Street, Bargoed, on July 16, at eight o'clock, when any other new members will be heartily welcomed.

The Clashing of Shows in Ireland.

Sir,—Being anxious to exhibit at most of the shows in Ireland this coming season, and, like many more fanciers, not having two teams of exhibition birds, I find that it would be impossible under the present circumstances to do so, as Lurgan Show and Holywood are both held on the same dates. Bangor C.B.S are also holding their show on the same date as Dundalk, and within a day or two of the Belfast N.C. and Y.C.C. Show. To suggest any change to the Bangor committee would be useless, but in my opinion Lurgan C.B.S. are making a great mistake, as Holywood Show is bound to draw entries from the majority of fanciers. Lurgan should go with the times, and they would have the support of the present day exhibitors.

Is "Money" the Downfall of Shows?

The Novice Question Once Again.

Sir,—Why don't shows pay? The simple reason is that money is at the bottom of it. It is so easy for a novice to get his three firsts, and then he has to show amongst professionals. I have been to a first feather show this year where professionals and amateurs had to show together; five classes for or Yorkshires, one cancelled, and the other four only had seven entries; four classes Norwich, twenty-three entries. One amateur said: "I am not showing, for there is no one I can beat." Another said: "There are no sportsmen among the novices." Do they expect novices with only 20s. a week to compete with others who can buy birds which win firsts in the open? Are they sportsmen to show such against one who has to count pence as they do shillings? Those who have such birds should be forced to show in the open. Some members belong to two or three societies. In one society they are professionals and others novices. Such being the case, they should be forced to show in the highest grade. It is pretty evident that at the above show the first year's amateurs did not mean to fill the pockets of the professionals and older amateurs. At a certain society in Manchester a professional in Yorkshires wanted to join in December and let his subscription cover the next year, but the professionals and amateurs in the Norwich section opposed him tooth and nail. Were they afraid he might carry off the President's Cup? Others have joined in the same manner; so why was he not allowed to? Novices, now the shows are commencing, let the secretaries understand that you will not fill the coffers of their societies. Make them cater for you; make them put more classes on for you. You hold the ace of trumps. Why don't you play it? If you don't, then you deserve all you don't get.

Remarkable Singing by "Little Jimmy."

Sir,—The noted Linnet, "Little Jimmy," has completed an excellent, if not unique, record by his very consistent form in contest singing this season, and at the earnest request of our most worthy President, Mr. David Bentley, I venture to ask you if you will do the Blackburn and Dist. L.F.A. the favour of publishing the appended sings or contests that he has taken part in this season. I may state that "Little Jimmy" is the joint property of Messrs. Robert Airey and Fred Lea, of Blackburn. He has taken part in thirteen contests, winning nine 1sts, one 2nd, and three 3rds. The following are the respective places and times:—Mason's Arms, 9min.; Empire Hotel, 9min. 51sec.; Forrest's Arms, 9min. 53sec.; Empire Hotel, 9min. 44sec.; Commercial Hotel, 9min. 44sec.; Empire Hotel, 9min. 57sec.; Mason's Arms, 10min. (all at Blackburn); Oxford Inn, 9min. 35sec.; Nelson Hotel, 9min. 48sec.; Hall Inn, 9min. 51sec.; Commercial Inn, 9min. 19sec.; Oxford Inn, 9min. 34sec.; Talbot Hotel, 10min. (all of Burnley). So out of a possible 130 minutes, he has only lost three minutes and 44 seconds, a truly excellent season's work, finishing up, as he did, with singing the whole ten minutes at the last sing of the season; reckoned on an average, he has done 9min. 42sec. per sing, plus 10sec. He also won the silver cup presented by Mr. J. J. Neild, of the Empire Hotel, for the best time done in three consecutive sings, and the medal presented by the Association for the bird doing the best time in all the season's contests.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. Kills all insects. Harmless to everything else.

The Twite as a Hybrid Breeder.

Sir,—I always keep a few birds for a hobby, and have about thirty at present, in an aviary twelve feet long by six wide and eight feet high at back, six at front. I always breed a few Canaries and Mules. This year I had a cock Goldfinch which paired up with a hen Twite. The hen built a nest in a small cage, and one young one hatched out, which she fed for a week and then left, and I lost it, as I was not at home to hand-feed it. Two years ago I bred a Siskin-Twite Hybrid, but had it under a bad feeding hen Canary, and lost it when four days old. I have taken CAGE BIRDS since 1904, and would not be without it for anything.

HENRY S. MURRAY.

A Feathered Companion and Chum.

Sir,—My Roseate Cockatoo has just died. It was a bird I bought in the market a year ago, from a man who had had it a number of years and wanted to sell. The poor thing seemed to have been maimed at some time, and could only fly a few yards, but what a pet it got to be with us. You will not smile, I am sure, when I tell you its loss is a bereavement, though worth but a few shillings. It was never so happy as when on my shoulder, rubbing its beak on my face or thrusting its head behind my ear. It followed us all over the house, and would even climb the stairs step by step to get where we were. It was a real companion and chum, full of affection, and my wife and I feel its loss very much. I think it was getting old. I sat up all one night with it to try and give it ease and comfort, and am only sorry all our efforts to save it were in vain. I would we had such another pet.

New Light on Colour Feeding.

Sir,—After the perusal of an article under the above heading which appeared in your issue of June 29, I put the following problem in arithmetic before one of my little girls:—If a man has forty Canaries and gives them colour food two days in every three, at the rate of one spoonful to each three birds, during the months of July, August, September, and October, and the colour food is made up of one part red pepper to four of other ingredients, how many spoonfuls of red pepper will he require during the period named? The answer was something like the following:—July to October inclusive equals 123 days, less 1 in 3, 82 days; amount of colour food required each day to feed forty birds, one spoonful between each three, 13 1-3, 1,093 spoonfuls; less proportion of red pepper 1 in 5 equals 218 3-5. Answer: 218 3-5 spoonfuls, which is equal to 1½lbs. of Red Pepper, according to the writer. In the words of the poet: "I don't think."

H. E. T.

[We are afraid our correspondent hardly does the writer of the article justice. He did not say that he gave the pepper at a strength of 1 in 5 two days out of three right through the moult. Further, the fancier would surely be an unlucky man whose every bird spread its moult over four months and needed full strength colour food all the time!—Editor.]

Aintree Fanciers in a Fix.

A Show Under Difficulties.

Sir,—It was unfortuuate for the Aintree, Fazakerley, and Dist. F.S. that the Emanuel's Sunday School treat synchronised with their July show. The scene outside the Church Hall, Long Lane, Aintree, at eight o'clock on Monday, the 8th inst., was passing strange. Numerous boxes and baskets of various sizes and colour, some bearing initials in white paint, some inscribed "live birds," attracted public attention, a group of children being particularly interested spectators. Round the back of the hall a group of men were anxiously prospecting the building. To the casual observer it might have appeared as though a raid was imminent. How to get into the hall (without the key), that was the question. Because of the Sunday school treat the fanciers had been forgotten. What a disappointment. Pity the poor secretary! He was upset, and tried to engage a room at the Aintree Institute, but failed—no live stock shows permitted. Everybody looked at everybody else and waited, half expecting someone to come along with the "open sesame." First one member and then another made a suggestion. One man (certainly the least like a burglar) sighed for a crow bar, and with the instinct of a business man commenced to calculate the cost of a few new locks, bolts, and hasps. At last the secretary came to the rescue, and the show was held in his sitting room, his house being quite close to the church hall. It was a case of making the best of a bad job, and no one was more willing in this respect than the secretary's wife. There was a satisfactory entry in both sections. Among those present were Messrs. W. Hales (judge), J. W. Metcalfe (judge), and McNulty.

SHEFFIELD

The Type of the Present-day Norwich Plainhead.

Sir,—In my letter of June 29, I said I did not care to answer people who had not the courage to sign their names, because in my opinion, in instances of this kind, they are prejudiced people who would not like their names to be known should they be beaten in a fair argument. Now, sir, the one who signs himself "Novice" in his letter to you of July 6 quite proves my words to be true. He says that he visited the Norwich Show last October, which was held in the Corn Exchange, and what did he see? Why, the highest honours leaving Norwich, both in the Canary, British, and Foreign bird classes. Now, sir, of the sixty-three classes in catalogue I notice that two classes had no entries; therefore, that leaves sixty-one classes, and out of these sixty-one classes there were forty 1st prizes which went to the Norwich breeders, to say nothing of 2nds, 3rds, etc., also specials for best birds. I give the class numbers in which the forty 1sts, etc., were won by the Norwich breeders,—Classes 7, 9, 10 to 21, 25, 26, 29, 31 to 47, 49, 50, 51, 57, 59, and 60. Now if this is not prejudice and cowardice on "Novice's" part, then what is it? I think it a shame that your valuable space should be used for such false statements.

Bullfinches Breed Successfully in a London Kitchen.

Sir,—We were told that it is a rare thing for Bullfinches to breed in captivity. My pair of birds have hatched out two chicks, which will be a week old to-morrow (July 9). The birds were given me by my sister from her country aviary in March, 1910, as the cocks began to fight. That year the hen bird laid no fewer than twenty-six eggs, and last year only eight. We were told it was useless to try and let them build. However, this year my maid and I determined to let them try, and so I got a breeding cage. The little hen at once built a nest and laid four eggs, all of which were addled. She did not seem happy, so we let them try again. They built another nest, and she again laid four eggs. At the end of fourteen days we broke one—a failure; the second had a chick in it, so she was left alone, with the result that two were duly hatched out, and the little things seemed perfectly strong, and the hen was a most devoted mother. I may mention that our flat is within fifty yards of Oxford Street and the cage has been hung up in the kitchen. We never separated the cock and hen, but we have given them plenty of green food, groundsel, etc., and they are very tame. The hen has even fed a little chick when my maid held it in her hand to look at it.

Up the Chimney!

Remarkable Story of Cat and Canary.

Sir,—Herewith I beg to hand you a translation which I made of a cutting from one of the leading Dutch papers, and which possibly may interest the readers of your esteemed paper. It is from the "Haagsche Courant," and is headed "True Friendship." An old lady once possessed a cat and a Canary, which were the most intimate of friends. So happy were they when together that they were never long separated from each other. The Canary often flew round the room and then settled on the cat's back. Imagine then the surprise of the lady when one day the cat, with a loud mew, flew at her pet bird, seized it in its mouth, and ran off with it up the chimney! Whatever the poor lady did to entice it down, the cat refused to return with its living burden. She called to it in the most endearing terms; she even placed a dainty morsel of roast meat in the chimney. All was in vain. Ten minutes later, however, the lady perceived, to her astonishment, that a strange cat had slipped in through the door, and, of course, in her opinion, with no good intentions, and she therefore proceeded to drive it out without loss of time. No sooner had that happened than puss returned with the bird safe and sound in its mouth. It had evidently fled while the danger threatened its little feathered friend. It may therefore be quite understood that after this striking instance of confidence the lady never again had any fear of her four-footed comrade. The little bird had suffered no harm from its sudden flight up the chimney, and did not even betray the least fear.

Wild-Bird Life.

July Notes.

WITH the coming of the month of July we feel that we are rapidly passing the most interesting time of the year, from a bird lover's point of view. The seasons of courtship, love and marriage have in turn been noted by observers, and only second-brooded pairs are still busy with family cares. The bird world within the last few weeks has been increased by many thousands, and in some districts the numerous flocks are doing considerable damage to growing crops. The Blackbirds and Starlings have been particularly busy with the fruit. It is the young birds more than the old ones, that prove so mischievous. A brood of four Blackbirds will visit the strawberry bed or favourite cherry tree time after time, and will soon make a difference in the quantity of fruit to be gathered.

In his raid upon the cherries the Blackbird differs greatly from the Starling. He is not in a sense a wasteful bird; should he dislodge a cherry, he will instantly follow it to the ground, and fight willingly with his brother for possession, although plenty more are still hanging on the tree. But the Starling comes with the sole object of feasting, and will eat greedily from the branch quite regardless of any fruit he may scatter on the ground. Although such a common species, the Starling is certainly an interesting bird. In his nesting habits he is not at all particular as to site—any hollow or hole will suit his purpose, and he cares not if he and his partner are alone or nesting in company.

Some of these gatherings are large and might safely be called colonies. The writer recently visited one in an old oast house, the only access to which for the birds was by the cowl at the top. There were nests crowded together, all stages of incubation in progress, and rubbish of all kinds littered the place, the mess and dirt from young and old being almost beyond belief. In many ways young Starlings are quite unlike their parents, they resemble them only in shape and size. The old birds have a brilliant speckled coat with green and purple gloss, while the young are all dull brown, and their only cry is a raucous monosyllable, so unlike the many more-or-less musical sounds and noises omitted by the parents.

Teaching the Young.

Many birds cease to sing when the young birds are hatched, but the Skylark is an exception; he fills up the periods between feeding the young ones, with aerial flights, charming all listeners with his delightful melody. Perhaps his periods of song serve another purpose, for the young naturally hear their parents, and as naturally imitate him when they commence to warble on their own account.

How Bird Breeders Are Faring in 1912.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others. The communications must in each case be accompanied by the sender's name and address.

I am pleased to say that I have had a very successful breeding season up to the present, writes Mr. W. J. Minty (Frome), with twenty-six nice young Lancashires; while Mr. J. Perry has bred over fifty Borders, including Greens, Cinnamons, and Clears.

I have to report a very successful breeding season to date with my Siefert Rollers, writes Mr. C. Evans, of Aberystwyth. I have forty-seven young birds out and a few hens sitting, and all the young are doing well. I have not experienced any trouble from egg-binding, and have been fortunate in my hens being champion mothers and feeders. I attribute a large percentage of my success to following the advice given in your valuable paper week by week, to your CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, and to careful attention to my birds daily. This is my second year with Canaries. I reared twenty-one young birds last year. Bird fanciers visiting Aberystwyth this summer are cordially invited to pay me a visit. I wish CAGE BIRDS the success it so well deserves.

In County Down (Ireland).

At the monthly meeting of the Holywood and Dist. (Co. Down) C.B.S., held in the Old Masonic Hall on July 2, there was a fair attendance of members, and the following breeding results were handed in, showing a good season's work all round:—Mrs. Bruce, 23 Yorks; Messrs. Thos. Dunwoody, 42 young Yorks and Nor; R. Cowan, 26 ditto; Wm. Green, 12 ditto; J. Hamilton, 15 ditto; W. J. Hunter, 35 ditto: F. Cole, 25 ditto; D. Malcolm, 36 ditto; Jack Patty, 40 ditto; Charles Patty, 12 ditto; John Patty, 15 Mules and Hybrids; F. Devlin, 9 Mules and Nor. Several members have done well who sent in no report, and several rounds still sitting are not counted in above. The Norwich and Yorks have some good young ones among them, and there should be some keen competition this year among the members for the challenge cup.—J. Dunwoody, jun.

Country Rambles.

WIGAN FANCIERS HAVE A BROILING DAY.

About twenty members and friends of the Wigan C.B.S. met at headquarters, Legs of Man Assembly Rooms, July 7, to take part in their first ramble. The day was all that could be desired, and we all started off in good humour along Wigan Lane, where we hoarded a car to Boar's Head. Alighting, we proceeded down Chorley New Road. A little further on, our pleasant afternoon was almost marred. One of our members had the misfortune to get intermingled with a young lady on a bicycle, whom he brought to earth, fortunately very little worse for the mishap, and after making an apology we proceeded along Rectory Lane to Rectory Farm. With the bailiff's kind permission we were allowed to ramble through the woods and listen to our hearts' content to the various warblers of song. The Thrush, Chaffinch, Blackbird, Robin, Linnet, etc. Unfortunately, the weather was so hot that we had to cut our journey shorter than we anticipated. After having spent a very enjoyable time, we wended our way to Standish, where we quenched our thirst, and returned by car to Wigan, each and all more than satisfied at what we had seen and heard.—S.H.

GLASGOW BIRD-LOVERS' TRIP BY STEAMER.

On June 29 the members of the Queen's Park and Dist. (Glasgow) C.B.S., with their wives, children, and friends, spent the afternoon at Craigmarloch. They embarked on the "May Queen" at Port Dundas at 2.55, and arrived at Craigmarloch about five o'clock. Here fully an hour was spent in exploring the country. The usual picnic ceremony was performed, this time by Mr. J. A. Stewart, of Cathcart (the well-known Scotch Fancy exhibitor and judge), who took photos of the group. All being satisfied with their short stay ashore, they embarked again about six o'clock, but this time their attention was taken up at the tables in the dining saloon, and here every one enjoyed a substantial meal, especially the children. The return journey was greatly enjoyed, and the scenery was excellent. Between Kirkintilloch and Port Dundas on both journeys little urchins kept alongside the boat and performed acrobatic feats, and this kept the "good Samaritan" who had a pocket full of coppers in exercise, and also the party in amusement. The President was much complimented for the manner in which the trip was conducted, and he was assured that all had enjoyed themselves. All desiring a photo might write the secretary, so that the order can be placed.—Robert Heggie, sec.

BEAMISH (Durham).

Fourth annual Y.B. show, held July 6th at headquarters, the Bird Inn. Despite the very poor breeding season experienced, there was a very nice show, some 70 or 80 birds being staged, amongst which were some very typical specimens, especially the Nor. and Bord. British were a choice lot, the majority of the exhibits being staged in the pink of condition. The society is well favoured in the matter of officials, and it would be difficult to find a more hard working body of fanciers than the chairman, Mr. G. Davidson; vice-chairman, Mr. W. Gowland, and Messrs. L. Elliot, W. Elliot, W. Little, R. Coates, T. Nesbit, J. Robson, and Mark Crosby, all of whom gave of their best for the good of the society. The genial secretary, Mr. William Knowles, is evidently just the right man for the position, and the manner in which he gets through his duties is a credit both to himself and the society. The present show passed off without the slightest hitch, judging being completed in good time, and prize money paid out during the afternoon. Fine weather favoured the show, and we understand that the attendance and receipts were very satisfactory. Mr. W. Reid (Sunderland) judged.

ORMSKIRK C.B.S.

Concluding nest feather show took place at headquarters, July 1. Mr. R. Hunter judged. Principal winners:—Nor.: Price, Johnson, jun. Yorks: Walker, Johnson, sen. Bord.: Johnson, sen., Tiffen. The monthly meeting was subsequently held, Mr. Johnson, jun., presiding. Agreed to hold the annual show on Boxing Day instead of November, a change which the members thought would be beneficial to the society. Several valuable specials have already been promised, including a silver medal (given by the Chairman) for best bird bred by a member, 1912; also a silver cup. These should produce keen competition. Two judges were nominated for annual show. Mr. Hunter was warmly thanked for giving his services as judge, and other similar methods of "pay.ment" closed an interesting meeting.—T. H. Tiffen, Hon. Sec.

CITY OF BIRMINGHAM C.B.S.

Annual nest feather show held headquarters, July 3rd, many members reporting a very indifferent breeding season. No entries were received in Crests, Borders, or Mule classes, while Mr. Clay had Yorks to himself, and this usually our strongest section, for which eight classes were provided. Mr. Dipple won special best yell. Nor., Mr. Eckersley best Buff, Mr. T. Jones best Novice Nor., Mr. Broomfield best Cinn., Mr. Clay best Yorks. Point specials went to Messrs. Eckersley, T. Jones, Clay, and Derry. Mr. F. J. Weaver, of Wolverhampton, placed the cards, and his awards were approved. Nor. Cl. Yell. (3): 1, spl, 2, Dipple; 3, Broadhurst. British Softbill: 1, Jeffrey, pair of Wrynecks, very amusing and well put down.—J. H. Jones, Hon. Sec.

LONDON AND PROVINCIAL O.S.

Quite a large number of fanciers gathered at the Raglan Hotel, E.C., on July 4th, the occasion being the annual show of young birds. There were not quite so many birds as on some previous occasions, the general complaint being "a bad season." The arrangements were well carried out by the energetic and practical Hon. Sec., Mr. C. W. Law, who had everything in splendid order. Mr. Geo. Crabb, the popular president, was also in attendance, and amongst the company we noticed that veteran fancier, and hero of many shows, Mr. Thos. Heath. A good sprinkling of ladies graced the show with their presence, and one of them (Mrs. Salter) secured one of the specials with a natty little Border Fancy. The quality was good. The following were the special (medal) winners: Champion, Messrs. Matthes, Crabb, and Day. Novice: Mr. Crawford and Mrs. Salter. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and spoke a few congratulatory words on the exhibits generally, and received a hearty vote of thanks at the close.

CHAMPION NOR. YELL.: 1, Matthes, very nice bodied bird, lovely quality. BUFF: 1, spl., Matthes, very good build, fine tone of feather. YORKS., YELL.: 1, 2, Bullen, leader smart actioned bird, nice quality, should improve, well up on leg. BUFF: 1, Bullen. NOV.: NOR., YELL.: 1, 2, Crawford, leader very sweet bird, rare head and body, nice feather. BUFF: 1, sp., Crawford, lovely ticked bird, close as wax in feather, rare shape; 2, Cooper, clean, also a very charming bird, should do well later. YORKS., YELL.: 1, Ward, rare position and action. BUFF: 1, W. Salter, stands well, neat. A.O.V.: 1, sp., Mrs. Salter, jaunty little Border, very sweet, ran Norwich hard for premier specials. BRIT. HARDBILLS: 1, Bullen, very good Goldie, rich colour on face, nice chestnuts and whites; 2, Madame Madewell, a glossy, well marked, deep coloured Brambling; 3, Grisdale, nutty coloured, close feathered Linnet. MULES: 1, sp., Crabb, well-shown Goldie-Bullie, in nice coat. FOR.: 1, sp., Day, Black-vented Weavers, rich in colouring and splendid feather; 2, Madame Madewell, pretty Ribbon Finches

SOUTHPORT C.B.S.

Annual Y.B. Show, held July 6th, in the Phoenix Hall, Sussex Road. There was only a fair entry, but the quality of the birds, especially the Norwich, was very good. Mr. P. Waring (Preston) judged, and found his task no easy one, but his awards gave entire satisfaction. NOR. YELL.: 1, Sutton; 2, 3, Fawcett. BUFF: 1, 2, Sutton; 3, Johnson. NEWARK C.B.S.

Members' young bird show at headquarters, the Boar's Head Hotel, Middlegate, June 29. The birds were well up to the average in quality, but in numbers somewhat lacking, owing, no doubt, to the very bad results during the early months of the breeding season. There was a fairly good attendance of fanciers present during the evening, and the show was a pronounced success. Mr. W. P. Barnes judged, and his awards were well received. The special for best bird was won by Mr. W. Lidgett with an Australian Cockatoo, a winner of many first prizes. Mr. J. Lamb also sent a fine team of birds, winning four firsts and one third. NOR. CL.: 1, Lamb; 2, 3, Fitchett. TKD., MKD., OR VARIEG.: 1, Lamb; 2, Toynbee; 3, Smith. YORKS.: 1, 3, Spink; 2, Fitchett. BRIT.: 1, 3, Lamb; 2, Simpson. MULE OR HYB.: 1, Lamb; 2, 3, Toynbee. ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE O.S.

A most successful table show of young birds was held July 2, at club headquarters, the P.S.A. Rooms. Considering the bad luck experienced by many of the members, the muster of over thirty youngsters was very gratifying, more particularly as some very promising specimens were staged. Mr. Bladon, of the M. and N.C.O.S., acted as judge to the entire satisfaction of all, and placed this society under another debt of gratitude. Judging over, Mr. Bladon, in a neat little speech, entered into details regarding the exhibits, gave his reasons for placing the birds, and spoke a few words of encouragement to those exhibitors who were not in "the first three." A vote of thanks to the judge, moved by Mr. Lawton and seconded by Mr. Green, concluded an enjoyable meeting. Nor. Yell. (5): 1, 2, Foxall; 3, Sharples; 4, Dowling. Buff (15): 1, Foxall; 2, Dowling; 3, 4, Sharples. Yorks, Yell. (8): 1, 2, 3, Barnes; 4, Smalley. Buff (4): 1, 2, Smalley; 3, 4, Jackson.—J. R. Colville, Sec.

Dandridge showed a fine team of Yorks., while two fine teams of British were exhibited by Messrs. Gibb and Cadman Bros. The exhibits were well staged in a good light, and gave every credit to those who carried out the arrangements, Messrs. Sparks, Miles and Flook, to whom the Hon. Secretary is much indebted. Many fanciers looked in during the evening.—Will H. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Annual F.F. show, July 6th. The Forresters' Hall, in which the exhibits were judiciously staged, is an ideal venue. The entry was capital, upwards of 200 specimens. Yorks were a choice collection, C. L. Sampson (Stockebridge) doing the "hat trick," three lots, with bonny youngsters. Norwich were good, and Crests and C.-B. contained several very promising. In Brit. Mr. P. Walsh, the well-known local expert, gained the bulk of the honours. Foreign were undoubtedly the feature of the show—a superb lot, to be sure. The "old firm," Messrs. Colton and Dawn, took special for best in show with a very handsome Eclectus. Mr. T. Bishop (Sec.) with a bewitching pair of Lavender Finches, and Messrs. W. Baxby and G. Fletcher, are to be complimented on the gems they put down. The novice classes contained many likely birds, the pick being the Crestbred (winner) and the Crest that stood 4th (minus his tail, or would easily have won), both the property of Pr A. M. Deane (Dewsbury). Special winners were Messrs. Colton and Dawn, P. Walsh, G. L. Sampson, Howe and Senior, J. Evans, R. Smith, and W. Simmonite. Busy and hard at work were the worthy Chairman, Mr. T. Dawn, Mr. J. A. T. Woodall (Vice-Chairman) and Messrs. G. Fletcher, C. W. Marshall, H. Bishop, and P. Walsh, while Mr. T. Bishop (Secretary) is never at rest, and can always be relied upon to do the right thing at the right time. All prize money was paid out same day. Mr. R. Colton, of Mule fame, acts as Assist. Sec., and those who know "Bob" know his sound abilities. Mr. J. W. Drabble is also a valuable asset. Visitors were many from far and near. A grand display of plate, vases and so forth, artistically decorated with flowers, sent by Mr Bishop (Bamford) graced a large table, and many envious eyes were cast in the direction of these very valuable specials. Mr. J. C. Barnes, the judge, declared the show near on, if not the best, ever seen in the cutlery capital as a first feather exhibition. His awards gave every satisfaction.

FALKIRK (Good Intent) C.B.A.

Meeting held Oddfellows' Hall, June 22, J. Muir presiding. Matters were arranged for First Feather Show, July 27, Mr. Robert Reid (Shieldhill) judge. Books will be closed for old members on that date, young fanciers up till the October meeting.—Walter Clarkson, Sec.

NOTTINGHAM AND NOTTS O.S.

Meeting held July 9, Mechanic's Institute. Accounts for Nest Feather show were passed and ordered to be paid. Decided that there should be no monthly meeting in August. Next meeting, second Tuesday in September, to make arrangements for the open show. Two new members were elected.—J. G. Royce, Asst. Hon. Secretary.

NEWCASTLE (Novice) C.B.S.

A meeting, Purvis's Cafe, Clayton Street, July 4, Mr. A. Gordon in the chair. Proposed that we alter the committee rule (2), and make it that the committee be arranged into six novices and 6 professionals; also that second prize will take the place of first of its same value, which was carried. Mr. Lumsden intimated that he will give a gent's bicycle as a special prize. Vote of thanks to chairman brought meeting to a close.—T. W. Lumsden, Sec.

ISLINGTON F.A.

Meeting held Congregational School-room, Holloway, July 2nd, Mr. A. King in chair, supported by a large number of members. Passed that subscription should be 3s. A great number of specials are promised in addition to challenge cups for the annual show. Will all fanciers desirous of joining kindly communicate with the secretary, Mr. G. Wainwright, 23, Tibberton Square, Islington, N., or to the assistant sec., Mr. H. A. Brown, 11, Beresford Road, Harringay. Meeting closed with vote of thanks to chairman.—H. A. Brown, Assist. Sec.

SOUTHERN NORWICH P.C.

Rule 3 (a): Will members kindly read this rule before the end of July, as some have not paid for last year, the matter having slipped their memory? Bye-law I. A novice is one who has never won a first prize in open competition, or three 1st prizes in open novice classes. Many novices have won 20s. for 3s. 6d., the club fee covering the whole season's show exhibits at our shows; why not join at once? New rule books will be out as soon as patronage is allotted for 1912. If any member wishes to take a space for breeder's card in rule book, I still have a few more to fill in for second page; it will pay to do so.—F. S. Matthes, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW C.B.A.

Committee meeting July 2, in Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Ingram Street, Mr. Park presiding over a fair attendance. Secretary reported that following had kindly consented to act on committee:—Messrs. Jno. Brown, E. Barron, F. Taylor, M. Craig, and J. C. Sinclair. Springburn were represented at meeting, and promised association every support. Messrs. Brown, Bowman, and secretary were appointed as sub-committee to look out for most suitable hall, and report to next meeting. Decided to alter date of show to November 22 and 23, so as to avoid clashing with so many shows. Classification was taken up, and a few alterations on last year's schedule were made. Judges were nominated and appointed. —Wm. Hutchison, Sec.

YORKSHIRE C.C.

Committee meeting held at Market Tavern, July 6th, Mr. H. H. Towers, President, in chair. Messrs. T. Head and J. H. Walker, Harrogate, were made members; the resignation of Mr. W. Spencer, Hebden Bridge, was accepted. Additional prizes were granted to the Bailey Trophy and Ramsden Cup competitions. Mr. A. Sutcliffe, Halifax, and Mr. A. Cooper, Bradford, presented cabinet value 2 guineas, and a pair of paintings on glass, value 30s., for 1st and 2nd most points respectively in open novices. The secretary was instructed to ask for tenders for the printing of the Club's handbook. Patronage granted as follows: The Bailey Trophy, Newcastle-on-Tyne; Hartlepool, Sheffield, Halifax, Bradford East, Rochdale, Bradford National, Scottish National, Bradford West and Crystal Palace. Ramsden cup and open novice competitions, Huddersfield, Great Horton, Windhill, Blaydon-on-Tyne, Horton (Good Intent), Harrogate, Bradford National, Skelmanthorpe, Bradford West and Crystal Palace. Junior novice competition at all Yorkshire Union shows (novice section). The application from Swansea arrived too late.—John Greaves, Secretary.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, Thursday, July 4, Mr. T. C. Crawhall in the chair. Correspondence was read from Mrs. Irwin, thanking the members for their present on the occasion of her marriage. Cinnamon C.C. re open show. This letter was left for the committee to deal with. The following new members were elected: Messrs. Jos. A. Carr, 42, Theresa St., Blaydon; T. Fletcher, 11, Townley St., Rowland Gill; W. Forbes, Rowland Gill; J. Bremner, 64, Normanton Terrace, Newcastle; C. J. Graham, 66, Heaton Road, Newcastle; W. Crow, 10, Office Row, East Holywell, Shiremoor; W. Fox, 73, Elsdon Road, Gosforth, Newcastle. The Secretary gave a very short account of nest feather show, saying this year we had a balance, against a loss last year. Mr. Potts proposed, Mr. Curry seconded, a vote of thanks to the judges, Messrs. Hermeston, Crawhall, Johnstone, and Addison, which was carried with acclamation. A vote of thanks to the Secretary and the stewards, Messrs. Coltman, Laidlow, Hope and Irving, was also carried. Mr. Crawhall spoke about a rumour that was going about re the bird belonging to Mr. J. Mackenzie, that won the British and Foreign Cup, and explained that a gentleman asked Mr. Mackenzie to keep it for him, but afterwards changed his mind and said he did not want to purchase it. Mr. McKenzie also said a few words and verified what the Chairman had said. Mr. J. W. Ramsden, of London, gave a lecture on "Colour-feeding," and dealt with the subject in a masterly manner, and at the close answered a great number of questions. Mr. Ramsden was accorded a hearty vote of thanks, and in reply said it had been a pleasure to be with us, and that he was always willing to do what he could for the Fancy. The nest feather cups will be presented at next monthly meeting in August. Committee meeting, July 18, at 8. Will members let me have as many specials as possible by next meeting. I shall be pleased if those members having tickets for nest feather show will let me know as soon as possible how many they have sold. Members who have not paid their subs. before August will not be able to show at reduced rate at open show. August is the last month for electing new members to enable them to participate in benefits of open show, so intending members hurry up! I shall be pleased to give any information.—J. W. Reed.

BRISTOL C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held July 3rd at headquarters, City Hotel, Mr. W. H. Manley in chair. Mr. T. J. Keegan was elected hon. sec., and Mr. O. Coggins, assist. sec. Decided to hold annual open show Nov. 6. Mr. J. H. Roe, judge. We have three silver cups to compete for, and our membership is open to the kingdom. Will members who have not paid their subscription kindly do so by next meeting to be able to compete for cups.—T. J. Keegan, Hon. Sec.

STOKE-ON-TRENT C.B.A.

Meeting held July 1st. There was a splendid attendance. Prize money and specials won at the recent young bird show handed out. Decided to engage the Sutherland Assembly Room, High Street, for annual open show to be held in November. It is to be hoped that the committee will be well rewarded for their enterprise. The room is a very fine one, splendidly lighted, and capable of accommodating 800 exhibits. Arrangements were made for the annual ramble. Decided to visit Rudyard, July 14th. Train leaves Stoke at 2.30. We are anticipating a very enjoyable outing, and shall be pleased to welcome any friends.—J. Pitchford.

QUEEN'S PARK (Glasgow) C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, June 26th, in the Maria Stuart Halls, Crosshill, Mr. Andrew Hunter presiding over a well attended meeting. The classification for the annual event was drawn up, there being very little difference on last year's schedule, 18 classes for Nor., 4 Crests and C.-B., 6 Borders, 5 Yorks, 2 Mules and Hyb., 6 Brit., 2 For., 1 Sell., 1 Gift, in all 48 classes. It was also agreed to again have 2 open classes for Norwich. Cash prizes in all classes. The show is to be held in the Victoria Rooms, Victoria Road, South Side, December 7th. The judges appointed are: Messrs. Allan Chalmers and Charles Campbell, and with these inducements it is hoped a record entry will be established. Four new members were elected, bringing the total to almost 50, which is very satisfactory. It was arranged to have no meeting in July owing to holidays. Next meeting, August 28th, at 8.—Robert Heggie, Sec.

MID-RHONDDA AND DIS. C.B.S.

General meeting held headquarters, White Hart Hotel, Tonypandy, July 4th. Mr. Wm. Morris presided over a good attendance. Annual open show was discussed, and date decided upon was Dec. 11th next, and that just as many classes should be given as we could pay out prize money for, which everyone thought would be fair for the Society, and also for the exhibitors. The secretary was instructed to write Messrs. J. H. Payne and J. Robson as regards judging. It was decided to advertise our show in CAGE BIRDS (see Show Dates Fixed column this week). Then came the question of a hall, and we were told that the hall is now almost completed over the White Hart Hotel, a very large place, with several private entrances, and we have to thank Mr. S. Barkaway, the proprietor (our Vice-President) very much indeed for offering such a fine place. Our President came to explain why he had called a meeting at Penygraig on June 18th to form another society. Mr. Morgan wished to come to a general meeting and explain the matter. He said he felt very sorry that he had acted as he had, but that he had been misinformed by an unscrupulous fancier or fanciers (as they call themselves). Mr. Morgan, after explaining a few things he was told by those persons, said he wished to resign his position as President, but after his explanations, it was unanimously decided not to accept the resignation, and Mr. Morgan thanked all present for their kindness. He said he would do a great deal more for the society in future, and not listen to any outside talk again. A hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman closed a most enjoyable evening.—A. H. C. Legg, Hon. Sec.

SHEFFIELD O.S.

Monthly meeting held July 2, Rose and Crown Hotel, Waingate, Chairman Mr. Thos. Dawn presiding. Owing to the terrible weather, the attendance was not so large as usual, only thirty odd members being present. Our worthy vice-chairman, Mr. J. A. T. Woodall, gave a lecture on moulting and colour feeding. This subject Mr. Woodall is no stranger to. The lecturer first of all explained that he is a great believer in Green blood, saying it is no use trying to get good rich colour without you have the good colour to fetch out, and this can only be got by the introduction of Green blood. Mr. Woodall spoke of the various colour foods on the market, saying he had done just as well with one as another. He had also on view the pods from which the present-day foods are made, and explained how the food was made before being ready for use. He then gave his methods of mixing the food to be given to the birds. Mr. Woodall just gives enough for each bird to eat, and is not a believer in "bedding the birds down" with colour food. He said a great many made a mistake in letting the colour food bill be so large, as it is not necessary for the birds to be crammed. When birds were nearing the end of the moult, care should be taken not to get any feathers broken or knocked out, as the birds will be apt to come patchy in colour should they be taken off food before the new feathers are replaced. He is also in favour of the free use of the bath; the more a bird bathes the better the quality and condition. He never sent out to any show before his birds were through the moult and thoroughly hard; by so doing birds stand the rough handling of the railway better than if only quite soft in feather. At the close of his lecture, questions were invited, which he answered in masterly fashion. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Woodall for such a grand lecture, to which he suitably replied. Messrs. Wm. Hickinson, T. Smith, W. Simmonite, W. Wragg, and J. Barry were enrolled new members. Next meeting Tuesday, Aug. 13, so as not to clash with the holiday week.—T. Bishop, sec.

YORKSHIRE C.C. OF SCOTLAND.

We have had to change the date of our meeting for allocating patronage, from 20th August to Saturday, 3rd August. All applications must therefore be in my hands by the latter date. Club members will be notified in due course. This change was made necessary by the fact that both our President and myself will be on holiday at the end of August, and it was fixed for a Saturday to suit convenience of country members, most of whom we hope to see present.—R. B. Gibb, Hon. Sec.

MIDDLESEX O.S.

Meeting held July 4 at St. John's School, Southall. Two new members were elected. Mr. F. Easterling was invited to judge the August young stock show, and the classification is to be the same as the June show. Agreed, to advertise the August show in CAGE BIRDS. A pleasant surprise was a visit from Mr. J. Shepherd, late chairman of the Northern Border and Scotch Fancy C.C. Mr. Shepherd gave us a little of his experiences, which was highly appreciated, and a hearty vote of thanks to him was carried by acclamation.—Jeffery Jefferis, Hon. Sec. and Treas.

SCOTTISH PLAINHEAD CLUB.

Will secretaries desiring the patronage of S.P.C. kindly forward application early. Our club show falls to be held in the North this year, and societies wishing to house this event should have their applications in my hands by 1st August. Secretaries of club shows, eight of whose members are also members of S.P.C. are hereby reminded that they are entitled to the club patronage, and I shall be pleased to hear from any such early. Will members please note that subscriptions for 1912 are now due. I would also ask members when sending their fees not to forget the special prize fund, which should reach respectable dimensions by the time Committee meet to allot Club patronage. Lovers of the Norwich Plainhead are earnestly requested to join the Club. All particulars from the Secretary, J. Brown, 599, Duke Street, Glasgow.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Monthly meeting, held Oldham Hall, June 27th, Mr. F. Handley in the chair. The following were elected members—Messrs. Little, Parker, Wilson, and Walker. Mr. W. Jones, Birkenhead, was nominated for membership. Owing to the inclement weather, and consequent dearth of exhibits, the night show was cancelled. It was decided to hold the show on next meeting night, July 25. Classification, specials and judges as before. The Committee trust there will be a good response. Members are requested to forward their subscriptions for 1912-1913 as early as possible, thereby saving delay in allotting the season's specials. Nominations for membership should be in before the 25th inst., otherwise points cannot count at the early shows. The July meeting is set apart for allotting patronage. Members are requested to turn up in full force.—Geo. Green, Hon. Sec.

GRIMSBY AND CLEETHORPES ROLLER C.S.

Monthly meeting June 29 at Club Room, when a very interesting evening was passed. The chairman gave out to each member present slips of paper with a question on breeding written on each. Each slip was numbered, and the holder of No. 1 had to read out his question and then answer it to the best of his ability, after which discussion was invited. The holder of No. 2 followed, and so on, until the lot—twelve in all—were finished. Although it was rather late in the season for such a subject, it was thoroughly enjoyed by those present. We were very fortunate to have in our midst Mr. Walton, of Leeds, who is a member. He gave many little hints which were highly appreciated by all. Next month Mr. Rawcliffe will give a paper on "Training," which should interest all members.—F. Mason, hon. sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, July 4, in the Wentworth Cafe, Penstone Street, Mr. F. Jones (President) in the chair. The ramble to Edwinstowe, fixed for July 13, has been altered to suit the members to July 20. The destination is Bradfield Dale. Meet at Malin Bridge Car Terminus at 2.30. An outing has also been fixed for August 25 to Torksey; also a fishing match, Messrs. Tomlinson, Drabble and Bennett are the committee to make all arrangements. Future meetings will be held on the first Thursday in each month. This will prevent us clashing with the Walkley and Attercliffe societies. Next meeting, August 1st. Special table show of young birds. 12 classes. Prize money 3s., 2s., 1s. A most interesting lecture on "Colour-feeding" was given by Mr. W. Bingham (a past secretary of the Society), many instructive points being raised as he answered the several questions put to him. Mr. T. Sweet was elected a new member. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Bingham.—J. Woolhouse, Assist. Sec.

OPEN NORWICH P.H.C.C.

Committee meeting, held Market Tavern, Bradford, July 6, chairman, Mr. A. Hirst, Accrington. Resignations of Messrs. Eyre, Moore, Pawson, Parkes, Shackleton, Shorney, and Mrs. Sunderland were accepted. Eleven members were struck off the books for non-payment of subscriptions. The resignation of Mr. O. Mitchell, secretary, on account of ill-health, was accepted with deep regret, and a letter conveying such regret and expressive of high appreciation for valuable services rendered, and the hope that complete recovery would soon be forthcoming, was directed to be sent to Mr. Mitchell. Mr. Frank Rhodes (Bradford) was unanimously elected as secretary. Committee was completed by the addition of Messrs. Johnson (Leeds) and Mottram (Halifax) to the 18 elected by the annual ballot. A sub-committee of seven was appointed to transact any business of minor importance. The following were elected: Messrs. Cowgill, Simonett, Fortnam, Chittenden, Western, Wilcock (Sam), and Hammond. Competitions were arranged similar to last year, and the club's patronage was granted to the following shows: Oct. 5, Huddersfield O.S., J. H. Payne; Oct. 12, Leeds C.B.S., J. H. Roe; Oct. 18-19, Newcastle C.B.S., J. C. Barnes; Oct. 25-26, Manchester and N.C.O.S., W. Booth; Nov. 1-2, Sheffield O.S., W. Vardy; Nov. 8-9, Halifax O.S., A. G. Davis; Nov. 15-16, Hull C.B.S., H. W. Battye and J. Robson; Nov. 22-23, Rochdale O.S., C. A. House and W. Mundell; Dec. 6-7-9, Bradford National, J. Robson; Dec. 31-Jan. 1, Scottish National, H. W. Battye. Firms were selected from whom to ask for tenders for printing of handbooks. The name of and conditions of competition for the rose bowl presented by Mr. Joe Thomas were left for further consideration. A grant of one guinea was made to the secretary (pro tem.) for his services during the past 12 months. With expressions of his sincere appreciation of the kindly act, it was handed back to the club for next season's prize fund.—Fred Hammond, Hon. Sec, (pro tem.).

WELSH C.B.C.

Meeting held Market Vaults, Neath, July 2nd, Mr. D. A. S. Longden presiding over a good attendance. Mr. S. H. George (Swansea) was elected on the committee in place of Mr. Dan Thomas. New members: Messrs. W. Gibbon (Milford Haven), H. Phillips (Ebbw Vale), and F. Heal (Swansea). Decided to again exchange medals with Toronto C.B.S. Alterations to rules and classification were completed, and from now on only part of show rules will be published in schedules. The classification for Cage Bird Societies has been struck out altogether. Mr. Sandiford offers this year a case of dessert cutlery for birds fed upon his feed. Decided to give £5 in cash as specials to our members at shows held under our patronage. Patronage was given to Swansea Pentrebach, and Pontypridd, the question of medals to be dealt with later on. It is quite possible we shall patronise other societies, and when I obtain full information the balance-sheets can be printed and sent to every paid-up member. I shall be pleased to give full particulars to any fancier wishing to join.—A. E. Brown, Hon. Sec., 66, Clare Street, Merthyr Tydfil.

PREPAID ADVERTISEMENTS

UNDISPLAYED.—6d. for the first eighteen words. One Halfpenny per Word for each word over eighteen. Name and address to be reckoned. MINIMUM, 18 words 6d.

IMPORTANT NOTE.—Two or more Advertisements coming from the same advertiser, even if sent in different names, are reckoned together, and, after the first Eighteen words, are charged at two words a penny, but no single advertisement, even if accompanied by others, will be charged at less than the minimum price, viz., Sixpence.

Headlines or Footlines, 6d., 9d., 1/-, 1/6, according to size.

ADVERTISEMENTS UNACCOMPANIED BY CORRECT REMITTANCE WILL NOT BE INSERTED.

Postal Orders must be sent as far as possible. All moneys should be made payable to F. CARL.

The Proprietor reserves the right to refuse any advertisement, or to cancel any advertisement ordered for a series, at any time, without assigning any reason for so doing.

Advertisements must in all cases bear the bona fide name and address of the advertiser, and no advertisement will be inserted if addressed to a receiving office, or similar place of call.

Small prepaid advertisements of a general nature and not connected in any way with the Cage Bird Trade are inserted at the rate of ½d. per word throughout. Minimum 12 words 6d.

Advertisements close Tuesdays first post in each week, and should be sent to the advertisement Manager, CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London. Terms for Display Advertisements on application.

REPEATING OF ADVERTISEMENTS

Advt. Manager. "Cage Birds."

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

Cock Linnets, 2/6 dozen, 3/- picked birds; one dozen bright aviary birds, 1/-: W. Fenn, Beck Row, Mildenhall, Suffolk.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Look; money that was deposited with "C.B." Linnet, £3, with a London gentleman; Linnet, £2 10/-, Whitehaven Show; Linnet, £2, singing Linnet £2, Linnet, 28/-, Linnet 35/-, Linnet 32/-, Linnet 30/-, Linnet 25/-, and scores at a guinea and under; all the above were sent on 7 days' approval; every one of the above was purchased, and the money paid to me by the Editor of this paper; all these birds were sent to private gentlemen, and they all came from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world, so you see what good judges pay for Linnets. Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world. They make the gamest Linnets ever carried to a contest for length, turns, and form; they stand alone, and for voice they have no equal. This class of bird has won the English Derby, and all the English championships, and the world's greatest contests. I sold one Linnet for £16. Good birds will sell anywhere. They are at working men's prices, 1/-, 1/6, and real gems, 2/-; new cages with any of the above, 1/- and 1/6 extra; a few Linnets, singing grand, with new cage and my book of secrets, taught by the champion Linnet of the world, a treat to hear, 3/6, and a few extra gems, 4/6. I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. Very large cock Hawfinches, 4/6; German cock Canaries, singing grand, 4/6; hundreds of British and foreign birds in stock; no waiting; post card before birds; only honest dealing done with me, so send to your old friend: Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries, 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 and 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 25 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, H. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner, showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Notice! The breeding of mealworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., or from any of our agents. CHEAP, CHARMING FOREIGNERS.

Such, in short, are Budgerigars, which are among the most beautiful and lively of man's feathered pets. The breeding of "Budgies" is a work of patience, but, owing to the possibilities in the production of varieties, it is very profitable. Difficulties there are in the way, many and serious, but they can be overcome. Food, and the construction of cage and aviary are very important items. Full particulars as to proper feeding, caging and management in captivity, with hints on sexing, breeding, moulting and exhibiting will be found in "Nutshell" No. 13, "The Budgerigar," post free 2½, from CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet-st., London,

WAXBILLS. WAXBILLS.

Golden-breasted, Orange-cheeked, Grey and St. Helena Waxbills, favourites with foreign bird-keepers. One cannot fully describe the beauty of these little birds, which make a pretty spectacle disporting themselves in the aviary among the green plant life. They thrive best in an aviary, and this is easily and cheaply made if you follow the directions given by Wesley T. Page, in "Nutshell" No. 20, along with all the other hints necessary, if you would be successful in keeping and breeding these lively and vivacious pets; post free 2½d., from the Publisher, 154, Fleet-st., London, E.C.

BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking-guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

WIDNES (Lancs.) O.S.

Annual F.F. show, July 6th, in Conservative Club Room, an admirable one, being free from draughts and well lighted. The secretary, Mr. S. Andrews, had everything in the usual tip-top style. The Yorks. classes did not fill, but the Nor. Bord. and Brit. contained birds of more than ordinary merit. Mr. S. Hadwin (Liverpool) judged, and gave general satisfaction. NOR. BUFF (5): 1, Johnson, good head, col. and chest, nice substance; 2, Andrews, very similar; 3, Jenkins. NOR., GREEN, YELL. (3): 1, Bloor, good col., well filled chest and head, nice shape; 2, Lea, good level col., neat shape; 3, Andrews. BUFF (3): 1, Bloor, good level col., well moulded, good one; 2, Lea, level in col., not quite the substance; 3, Jenkins. BORD., CL., and TKD. YELL. (3) 1, Andrews, smart and typical, good col. and position; 2, Hampson, neatly drawn; 3, Johnson. GREEN, YELL. (5): 1, Johnson, little gem, very smart, typical, and good level col.; 2, Johnson; 3, Hampson. GOLDFINCH: 1, Leicester, good blaze, nice condition, steady; 2, Collins, not far behind; 3, Johnson. LINNET (6): 1, Murray, grand col. and markings, rare condition; 2, Jones, fine condition and colour; 3, Leicester. NOV., NOR. (8): 1, 2, Jones, buff, eobby, good chest and col, 2nd, good; 3, Yates, larger, good, not quite so compact.

LONDON C.B.A.

Meeting, July 10th, at "The Feathers," Gt. Chapel Street, Westminster, the President, Mr. R. L. Crisp, in the chair. Messrs. Dewhurst and Sayer gave a report of the last Federation meeting, at which it was decided to have a Federation show on January 17th and 18th. A free pass to each exhibitor who made three entries was proposed. Messrs. Robson and Crisp were nominated for judges. Mr. Campbell was nominated for membership. Mr. Marley gave a most interesting and lengthy lecture on British Birds. He dealt with the feeding of the following varieties in summer: Chaffinch, Lark, Redpoll, Twite, Yellow Bunting, Swallow, Swift, Martin, Blackbird, Thrush, Wren, Spotted Flycatcher, Blue Tit, Wagtail, Field Fare, Redwing, Hedge Sparrow, Treecreeper, Woodpecker, Hawfinch and Kingfisher, also the migration of birds in autumn, general feeding of wild birds in winter, Goldfinch and Linnet missing a moult and moulting afterwards the following year. How to select show specimens and chief points to be considered in selection:—Goldfinch: Size, type between the Norwich and Yorkshire, chestnut tan breast, deep square blaze, and a broad, round bead. Linnet: Size, Norwich type, chocolate colour, well spangled head, perfect wing carriage and good markings. Twite: Similar to the Linnet, but darker colour. Greenfinch: Size, Norwich type, colour yellow, large head broad back, and avoid hollow necks. Siskins: Size colour yellow, yellow wing bars, regular black bib and cap. Chaffinch: Size, Norwich type, wine colour, good blue metallic head, good wing and tail carriage, shoulders pure white. Bramhlefinch: Size type between the Nor. and Yorks., good breast colour, spangled head and back mantle. Hawfinch: Size and colour. Yellow Bunting: Size, good head marks, clear crown, clear heart shaped breast, clear cheeks, good lacing and spangling. Mr. Marley also dealt with selecting field moulted specimens, purchasing fresh caught birds, training, free use of the bath and wild food, colour feeding and staging for exhibition, and birds suitable for novices. A discussion followed in which Messrs. Dewhurst, Crisp, Robson, Boxall and Mugford ably took part. Amongst the subjects under discussion were the domicile of the Waxwing, and the merits and demerits of colour feeding. Mr. Crisp moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Marley for his valued lecture. Mr. Robson seconded, supported by Mr. Boxall, and it was carried unanimously. Next meeting, September 11th.—W. H. Mugford and F. Knight, Secs.

The Shows.

BETHESDA.

Bethesda show was held in the new public hall on July 13th, a grand room, with plenty of light, and well ventilated. The weather turned out to be most favourable, and the hall was full of spectators as soon as the judging was over. The entries exceeded our expectations, numbering 152, and all specials were given. The quality of the exhibits was good in all the open classes, and some of the locals contained nice birds. Yorks, held pride of place; some of the old birds were in rare fettle, others breaking in the moult, which handicapped a few to keep their positions. Young birds were a good class of 15, the only class provided for 1912 birds, and we hope to see another for Norwich at the next show. Mules made a grand display, and Borders were very fair. Goldies were good, but not so numerous, the season telling on a few. Chairman, Dr. J. Bradley Hughes; Vice-chairman, Dr. R. Lumley Roberts; Treasurer, Mr. H. Laurie Jones. Mr. J. W. Prichard (North Wales C.B.S.) made a very efficient and courteous secretary. Sergeant Evans, the well-known fancier, shared in the work, and also won the silver cup for most points, Mr. W. Nolan being the runner-up, with his birds, as usual, staged in good order. Extra specials for members of the N.W.C.B.S.:—Best Nor., E. D. Owen, the old winning yellow; best hyb., Mr. R. E. Griffith, with his well-known Siskin Mule; best Brit. and best Bullfinch, Mr. W. H. Williams. Mr. J. E. Owen's special was won by Sergt. Evans, also most points in local classes. Mr. W. A. Cowgill (Bradford) made the awards, and gave general satisfaction.

The Critique.

NORWICH YELL. (6): 1, sp, 2, E. D. HORNSEY, WOOD GREEN C.B.S.

Initial young stock show, July 10th, at the "Three Jolly Butchers," Wood Green. The society has not long been formed, but judging from the entry and quality of the stock, and the attendance of local fanciers (including quite a large sprinkling of ladies), it is already well on the road to success. The room is a splendid one, well lighted and free from draughtiness, while capable of sufficient ventilation. Mr. P. Brooks, the hon. sec., had made complete arrangements for the comfort of the exhibits and convenience of exhibitors, while his prompt provision of catalogues, was deserving of high commendation. The chairman of the society and other officials did their best to help, and everything passed off well. Special for best bird went to a beautiful feathered, cobby ticked Norwich, shown by Mr. J. Griffin (novice), and the award was universally endorsed. Mr. Griffin also annexed the sp. for second best with a very smart Goldfinch, while the sp. for 3rd was awarded a very nice cl. yell. Nor. shown by Mr. Titchner. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and his awards were generally endorsed.

CHAMP., NOR. CL. OR TKD. YELL.: 1, Titchner, cl., nice body and quality, just breaking into moult; 2, 3, Brooks, both nice quality, very neat. BUFF: 1, 2, Titchner, good substance and quality, very fair heads and necks; 3, res, Brooks. VARIEG.: 1, 2, Brooks, leader fine quality of feather, should be very useful by and bye. AMAL., YORKS: 1, 2, 3, H. Clay, leader smart positioned yell., that should do well later on. NOR.: 1, Pledger, very nice head tkd., grand quality, rich in under colour. NOVICE, YORKS.: 1, 2, Richards, winner stands up well, nice action and leg; 3, res, To free, nice position, hardly so well cleaned off. NOR. CL. OR TKD. YELL.: 1, Hayes, good quality, nice body; 2, Griffin. BUFF: 1, 2, Griffin, leader sp. best in show, good body, silky feather, sweet head and beak, well filled neck, but nervous; 3, Bates, very young, rich colour and quality, one of those which cause speculation (buff or yell.), the judge made it a buff; res, Game. VARIEG.: 1, Game, nice substance, quality and head; 2, Griffin. GOLDFINCH, rich flush face, clean cut, good size, nicely burnished; 2, Pledger, another nice Finch, better in tanning, hardly the width of face; 3, Brooks; res, Cobden. LINNET, ETC.: 1, 2, Griffin, nutty Linnet and fairly good coloured Bullie. A.O.V. BRIT.: 1, Griffin, very chubby Greenie, won easily; 2, Brooks, another nice Greenie; 3, res, Pomeroy. MULES: 1, Griffin, good sized Greenie-Can. NON-COMPETITIVE CLASSES: YELL.: 1, P. Brooks, clear yell. Nor., old winner, clinking good one; 2, Pledger, also a winner, well balanced, good one; 3, Griffin, very nice baby, did well on merit, in this mixed class; Cobden. BUFF: 1, Brooks, topping buff Nor. res, hen; 2, Pledger, variegd. buff Nor., typical, good quality; 3, P. Brooks.

ROTHERHAM C.B.S.

N.F. show, held at Mail Coach Inn, Wellgate, July 13. Birds were well up to the average in quality, but small in numbers, especially Yorks, and we had to cancel open Yorks. and Brit. There was a fairly good attendance. Mr. F. Gregory judged. OPEN NOR.: 1, 3, Hunt; 2, Gascoigne; 4, Bagnall. YOUNG YORKS., CL.: 1, 3, Bagnall; 2, Stringer. TKD., ETC.: 1, 2, Stringer; 3, Bagnall. PRESTON O.S.

Annual F.F. show, held in St. Wilfred's Rooms, Corporation Street, July 13. There were about 60 entries, which was very good considering the fanciers in Preston have not had a very successful breeding season. Mr. J. W. Cleminson judged, and gave every satisfaction. Chief winners in Open Norwich section were Messrs. J. Nickson, H. F. Marsh, and R. Anderton, and in Novice, Messrs. T. Barton, F. Brewer, and J. A. Danson. The silver trophy for the best bird in the show was won by Mr. J. Nickson, who, although a novice, competed in the open section, and his success was very popular. This fancier also carried off the medal for best bird opposite colour to the trophy winner. OPEN NOR., YELL., CL., OR TKD.: 1, 2, Marsh; 3, Anderton. BUFF: 1, Nickson; 2, Marsh; 3, Issott. LIVERPOOL B.B.A.

Second N.F. evening show, July 11, when 84 youngsters were put through their facings. It has been a wise move to abandon the all day nest feather show, and to substitute the night shows, for whereas a promising youngster may go wrong by being in a strange and sometimes draughty room for 24 hours, it does them good to bring them out for an hour or two at night. It was quite a surprise to see so many strangers in the club room. Prospective members we hope. Secretaries Eccleston and Lloyd inform us that 110 have paid their subs., and there are all the old hands to come in yet, so it looks like being a record year. Treasurer Jones was beaming with delight when he stated to the members he had £12 in hand. There is a fine list of cups and specials for the novices; Mr. S. Hadwin has promised a Border Fancy Club medal for a season special. Mr. W. Jones, of Birkenhead, staged a topping Self Yellow Yorks. Green, which, with a bit of luck should give a good account of itself later on. Messrs. Gregory and Whiteside took the honours in the Clears. Friend Cutmore made a bold show in Norwich. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe judged, and gave general satisfaction. YORKS., YELL. (9): 1, 3, Gregory, leader straight as a rush, real good one; 2, W. Whiteside, another stormer, will make a better stock than show bird. BUFF (15): Bouncing lot. 1, Gregory, fair neck, well moulded, exquisite quality; 2, Whiteside, variegd., well up on leg, round as a bottle, very straight; 3, McMahon, small, but full of type, deserves its place. GREEN YORKS. (8): 1, W. Jones, topper, full of swank, rare pencilling and quality; should make up well; 2, 3, W. Bell, two nice youngsters, grand type. BUFF (7): 1, Malone, immense length, good feather; 2, McMahon, sweet little chap, full of type and quality, foul tail; 3, Jones, big one, fair shape, breaking up. NOR., YELL. (4): 1, 2, Cutmore, two smart exhibits, put down in master style; 3, McMahon. BUFF (7): 1, 2, Cutmore, again good one, round as an apple, should make up; 3, Crowe, big fellow, fair head and neck, put down in style. NOR., GREEN, YELL. (2): 1, Rumishy, rare size, good pencilling and colour; 2, McMahon, good front and wings, only half grown tail. BUFF (7): 1, Runishy, real good one, short wings and tail, bold head and neck; 2, 3, Brotherton, full of type, very compact. BORD. GREEN, YELL.: 1, Wilcox, neat little chap, round head, and put down well for a novice; 2, Brotherton, a nice exhibit, not so neat in style. BUFF: 1, Wilcox, again nicely staged, well cut away, free mover; 2, Brotherton, close up. GOLDFINCH: 1, Lloyd, fair blaze and tanning, good bars; 2, Jones. BULLFINCH OR CHAFF.: 1, Lloyd, nice Chaffinch, steady; 2, Bell, Bullie, good cap. LIN.: 1, Bell, fair size and colour; 2, T. R. Jones, very steady. GREENFINCH: 1, Pullman, good head; 2, Lloyd. SISKIN, ETC.: 1, Pullman; 2, 3, Lloyd. Most points for specials: Cutmore 18, McMahon 18, W. Jones 16, Gregory 16, Whiteside 13, Runisby 13, Crowe 12, Bell 12.

PAISLEY, NORWICH, &c., SOC.

Annual F.F. show of the Paisley and Dis. Norwich, etc., Society, held July 13, in Painters' Hall, Causeyside, when the birds were turned out in fancier-like spirit to greet the judge, Mr. R. H. Livingstone (Rutherglen), who handled the classes with care and to everyone's satisfaction. CRESTS: 1, R. McLerie, nice size broken green, fair top and body feather, just breaking into moult; 2, 3, Gemmell, both nice ones; 4, O'Hara. CREST-BRED: 1, 3, Gemmell, took the right stuff, in the best of condition; 2, McLerie, well up to leader; 4, Bonnor. NOR. CL. OR TK. YELL.: 1, Poling (2), cl., nice size and substance, good in quality; 2, 4, Laidlaw, leader well up to winner; 3, Sinclair, nice type and quality. BUFF; 1 and cup, Laidlaw, grand cl. hen, all there for type and quality, sweet and chubby throughout, one of the right sort; 2, Paling, cl., larger in build, not so short and typical; 3, 4, Gemmell. YELL., VAR.: 1, and runner up for cup, Gemmell, large made, heavily mkd., shapely fronted and broad well-filled shoulders; 2, 3, Sinclair, sweet ones for type and A1 quality; 4, Potts. BUFF: 1, Paling, grand one for type and quality, good head and neck, well across the perch; 2, 4, Boyd, nice ones, similarly marked; 3, Potts, has quality and type, inclined to be unsteady. YELL. BORD.: 1, 4, W. Briggs, leader nice jaunty carriage, fine colour; 2, Graham, well up, just beaten in colour; 3, Potts, nice one. BUFF: 1, 2, 4, Potts, leader excels in head points, but all are of nice boxy feather and good type; 3, Graham, good. MULE: 1, 2, 4, Graham, leader Goldie-Greenie, only needs size to make a good one; 3, Potts. LARGE BRIT.: 1, 3, 4, Pirrie, leading with a nice Thrush; 2, Barr. SMALL BRIT.: 1, 2, 3, Pirrie, Yellowhammer, Bramble and Linnet respectively, all good exhibits, in capital feather; 4, Potts, nice Bramble.

OFFICIOUS INTERFERANCE WITH LONDON FANCIER

A Word with Show Secretaries.

NOTES BY THE SECRETARY.

Patrons: Mrs. TINNISWOOD MILLER, London; The Hon. MARY HAWKE, Tadcaster; Sir R. J. CORBET, Bart., Shrewsbury; E. J. BROOK, Esq., Eccleefechan; the Rev. G. H. RAYNOR, M.A., Maldon; A. EZRA, Esq., London; HAROLD BLACKETT, Esq., Sunninghill; Vice-Presidents: Mrs. M. B. PARTRIDGE, Worthing; Miss C. M. E. HILL, Exeter; H. D. ASTLEY, Esq., M.A., F.Z.S., M.B.O.U., Newbury; G. E. Oppressive Action at Brixton.

From a reader of CAGE BIRDS who is not a member of our LEAGUE comes a story recalling memories of what happened a year or so ago at Millom, and some other towns in the North Country. In these towns bird-keepers were served with a peremptory notice that they were to give up their birds within a fortnight, but, owing to the stand they were able to make in being members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, matters did not go beyond the serving of the notices, and they are still in possession of their birds.

In the Brixton case a bird-lover who is the owner of the house in which he is living, and who has spent a very considerable sum in erecting spacious aviaries, has had his premises visited by the sanitary inspector during his absence, and his wife frightened by the demand that all the birds must be got rid of within a few days.

Our Editor has advised the latest victim of officialdom as to his proper proceeding in the circumstances, and I am only mentioning the matter here to emphasise the danger of interference to which all who love the hobby of bird-keeping are subject, and to point out the urgent necessity of every bird-lover becoming a member of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, one of the objects of which is to defend bird-keepers against such oppressive and unwarranted measures as are daily becoming more and more in evidence.

What Bird-keepers Should Do.

It is the avowed intention of the opponents of our hobby to put an end to the keeping of any kind of bird in any kind of cage or aviary, and it is the bounden duty of all bird-lovers to join the only organisation which has ever been established in their defence, and not wait until they themselves are individually threatened. This organisation is CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. The subscription is only half-a-crown annually, and full particulars of membership will be found below. Leaflets explaining fully the Aims and Objects of the League will be sent post-free to all applicants, and I hope that every reader of our organ, CAGE BIRDS, will heed the warning hereby given, and join the LEAGUE, which is here to protect our hobby from threatened interference.

Our Gold, Silver, and Bronze Medals.

The show season will soon be upon us, and many societies are entitled to one or more of these. It is not possible for me to discover exactly how many members of any particular Society are members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE, and I shall, therefore, not know how many medals are due to a Society unless the secretary himself supplies me with the information. Consequently, no medals will be granted except upon express application from society secretaries stating the number of their members, who are paid members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE. Members of the LEAGUE should, in their own interests, see that the secretary of their individual society counts their subscription as helping the society to a medal or medals. Societies are entitled to one silver or one bronze medal for every five shillings paid annually as subscription to the LEAGUE by the whole of their members, or to one gold medal for every thirty shillings so paid as subscription.

No condition whatever attaches to the way in which the medals may be allotted by Committees, excepting that they are for competition among members of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE only, whether these are or are not members of the society holding the show. The fact that the medals are for competition in addition to the ordinary prizes offered in any schedule should materally increase the entry fees, and secretaries will be acting in the best interest of their own societies in making sure that they get the full number of medals to which they may be entitled.

Overdue Subscriptions.

The renewal subscriptions to the LEAGUE are in the very great majority of cases being paid by members as they become due. There are a few, however, who have overlooked the fact that a year has elapsed since they joined the LEAGUE, and I hope that these few will lighten my labours by sending along their renewal subscription, and so save me the trouble of writing them individually.

TERMS OF MEMBERSHIP.

PATRONS.—A donation of not less than Ten Guineas in one amount, or an annual subscription of not less than Two Guineas, shall constitute the donor or subscriber a Patron.

LIFE MEMBERS.—A donation of not less than Five Guineas in one amount shall constitute the donor a Life Member.

VICE PRESIDENTS.—An annual subscription of not less than Half-a-Guinea shall constitute the subscriber a Vice President.

HONORARY LIFE MEMBERS.—The payment to CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE of a legacy of £20 and upwards shall constitute the administrator or executor making the payment an Honorary Life Member. A form of bequest will be sent, post free, on application.

ORDINARY MEMBERS shall pay an annual subscription of Two Shillings and Sixpence.

BADGES.

Neat and unobtrusive badges are supplied to members, without any charge beyond their subscriptions as above. The badges may be had either in button form, or mounted in rolled gold in two forms, one as a brooch for ladies or for cycling caps or coat lapel, and the other as a pendant for bracelet or watch-chain. The kind required should be specified clearly.

CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIP.

Certificates printed in seven colours, and suitable for framing, are supplied at One Shilling each. Each certificate bears an enlarged facsimile of CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE Badge and Motto, and is signed by the Secretary.

MEDALS.

Gold, Silver, and Bronze Medals are offered for competition among CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE members at Open Shows. The terms under which these will be given may be had upon application.

CAGE BIRDS FREE TO PATRONS.

SEALS AND HEADED NOTEPAPER.

GUMMED SEALS printed in gold and colours in facsimile of the LEAGUE BADGE are supplied for affixing to note paper, postcards, or envelopes. Price eightpence per hundred, fivepence for fifty, post free.

The Young Naturalist.

*A Queer Nesting Place.

Where my father is gardener there is an iron gate, and in the post of the gate, which is also iron, a little "Black-cap Tit" has built its nest. The entrance to the nest is the slot hole for the bar of the gate to slide in, which is only three-quarters of an inch wide, and 1½ inches long, and is in an upright position, which makes it difficult for the birds to get in and out, as they have to turn on their side, and it is very amusing to see them. There are some young ones in the nest, and the parent birds keep bringing caterpillars to feed them.—Sent by Miss A. Hodgson (aged 11 years and 4 months), 10, Church Hill, Baildon, near Shipley, Yorks.

A Homing Goldfinch.

My father has a Goldfinch which he has kept in a cage all the winter, but it having turned out to be a hen, he let it fly away into the garden. Not thinking it would ever return again, he put a Linnet into its cage. A few hours later he was surprised to see the Goldfinch sitting on its old cage trying to get to the seed and water. Father then took out the Linnet and left the cage door open, when the Goldfinch at once entered the cage again. The cage hangs on the garden wall with the door left wide open, and the Goldfinch flies about in the garden, going in and out of the cage during the daytime for seed and water, and returning at night to sleep.—Sent by Ivy Olney (Age 13), 24, White Friars, Chester.

*The Thrush's Nest.

Within a thick and spreading hawthorn bush,
That overhung a mole hill, large and round,
I heard from morn to morn a merry Thrush
Sing hymns of rapture, while I drank the sound.

With joy, and oft an unintruding guest,
I watched her secret toils from day to day,
How true she wrapped the moss to form her nest,
And lined it well with wood and clay.

And by-and-bye like heath bells gilt with dew,
There lay her shining eggs as bright as flowers,
Ink spotted over—shells of green and blue,
And there I witnessed in the summer hours

A brood of nature's minstrels chirp and fly,
Glad as the sunshine and the laughing sky,—
Sent by Louisa Barnes, 77, Alexandra Road, Grangetown, R.S.O., Yorks.

Mr. A. Wellings, Prescot, will judge Northop Hall and Dist., Aug. 10, and Preston, Nov 15.

Mr. G. H. Wharam, sec. Derby C.B.S., writes that Mr. G Colledge will judge Crests at their open show.

Societies desiring patronage of the Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C. please note applications close Saturday, July 20, writes Mr R. Garnett, sec. pro. tem.

I have about 43 youngsters (32 on the sticks), and I owe all my success to advice obtained through reading CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. Geo. Plant (Tamworth).

Owing to my leaving the district, writes Mr. Joseph Nutt, all communications for Cumnock and Dis. C.B.S. should be addressed to Mr. Alex. Wyper, secretary, Market Place, Auchinleck.

All societies desirous of having the patronage of the Southern Yorks. C.C., must make application for same without delay, writes J. W. Rennie, hon. secretary, Junction Hotel, Andover.

Walkley C.B.S. are joining us, writes Mr. Woodhouse, assist. sec., Sheffield C.B.S., on our ramble on Saturday, July 20th to Bradfield Dale. Meet at the Malin Bridge car terminus 2.30; all friends invited.

Will members and friends joining our ramble on Sunday, July 21st to Rock Tavern, meet at Crown Point at 2 o'clock. Leader, Mr. Gavin, writes Mr. Hopwood, Sec. Denton and Dist. C.B.S. A hearty invitation is given to any fancier or friend.

Mr. Benjamin Hawker, of New House Cottages, Mosterton (Dorset), saw a Blackbird on July 14th which had a few white feathers on its back, and a pure white tail. About twelve months ago a White Swallow was observed at Mosterton during the whole summer.

The handbook of the Southern Yorks. C C. is to hand from the hon. sec., Mr. Rennie, Junction Hotel, Andover. It contains the usual list of officers and members, rules, etc. The points of an exhibition Yorkshire are clearly set forth. The balance-sheet shows a satisfactory balance in hand of £8 15s. 6d., an advance of 17s. 7d. over the amount brought forward.

Mr. G. Benson, judge of Anfield and Dist. Show, writes that for quality and quantity it has been the best young show held in the district for some considerable time, and for their first attempt reflects great credit on this new society. The bird allotted special for best bird in show is a real good youngster, a self yellow-green, and with a careful moult ought to make up a fine specimen of this variety.

A reall remarkable series of successes has been achieved by "Phosto" in the rooms of the many bird breeders who have given it a trial during the season now drawing to a close. This scientific preparation (phosphatic food) has drawn some glowing testimonials from delighted users. It is extremely economical, too, only a very small quantity needing to be mixed amongst whatever soft food is being used. It should not be overlooked, too, that "Phosto" is the ideal food for birds that are moulting, as it supplies exactly those elements of nutrition needed at this trying period to enable birds to keep strong and grow their new plumage quickly and easily. It can be given with great advantage to birds being colour-fed.

Mr. J. F. Dewar, the celebrated judge, writes as follows: "I cannot refrain from telling you that I think your colour food, for this season, is the finest you have ever offered to the public, and reminds me of the time when it cost 4s. 6d. a lb., now 20 to 30 years ago. It is marvellous in colour, very rich and brilliant, and full of natural oil, while the fact that you guarantee it to be genuine and free from adulteration, ought to commend it to all fanciers who value their birds' lives. I have used none but yours for many years, and judging by the sample now before me, it could not be improved on. My first order this year you will see is larger than ever, and I am sure you will have a great sale for it (signed), Jas. F. Dewar." Mr. Dewar's opinion is shared by known experts who unhesitatingly declare Ramsden's Pure Peppers to be the finest ever imported into this country. Wise fanciers will use no other.—Advt.

The Doncaster, Adwick-le-Street and Hemsworth Societies, writes Mr. G. H. Robinson, have arranged for an Inter-Club Nest Feather Show at the Forester's Arms, Adwick, on July 27. Classes: 1 Yell. Yorks, 2 Buff Yorks., 3 Norwich, 4 Crest or C.B., 5 Mule or Hyb., 6 British (house-moulted), 7 Brit. (field-moulted). Judge, Mr. C. Pressley (Bentley). All birds to be staged by 4.30; judging at 5 prompt. Will Doncaster and Hemsworth fanciers please note?

We are asked by Mr. Denham, hon. treas., of the Metropolitan C.B.A., to say that at the Show, held July 20, at All Saints' Parochial Hall, Prince of Wales's Road, Battersea, there will be offered, besides the three silver cups, two half-guinea specials, one for lady members on same conditions as cups, and the other, given by Messrs. Wood and Co., for most points with three birds. Competitors for the latter special must produce a shilling receipt of the donors as qualification.

The show of the Newport Pagnell and Dist. Horticultural Society, held Aug. 7th, is the first at which open classes for cage birds have been provided, and we guarantee full prize money in six days, writes the secretary, Mr. W. Murrell, and do not amalgamate; further, we have a good judge, and experienced steward will be on duty (with police) in tents all night previous to the show, as well as on show day. We hope birdy men will give us their support (see review of schedule in this issue).

Exhibitors should not overlook the advertisement of Cambridge Show in this issue. This Bank Holiday Monday fixture has established a splendid reputation for the excellence of its management, well-known and tried fanciers being at the helm; while the object of the "Mammoth Show" is a most admirable one, namely, the benefiting of the funds of the local hospital. Mr. C. A. House judges the 14 cage-bird classes (in separate tent), and there are a cup, medals, and other good specials to be won. Entries close July 27th.

OBITUARY.

Mr. J. C. Cowley, Sen.

We are sorry to record the loss sustained by Mr. J. G. Cowley in the death of his father, who passed away suddenly on Friday, 12th inst. Mr. Cowley is on the committee of the Sheffield C.B.S., and the sympathy of every member will be extended to him in his sad bereavement.

The July Avicultural Mag. opens with a continuation of Notes on Sexual Selection, by Mr. F. Finn. Mr. Bentley writes an appreciation of the Linnet as a Songster. Mr. H. D. Astley records his success, after previous disappointments, in breeding the Queen Alexandra Parrakeets, the first record in England. Mr. Phillipps writes on the Naked Bell-Bird. Mr. Workman gives practical notes on the construction of a small garden aviary. The usual Bird Notes from the Zoo, by the Curator, an article on Waders, by Mr. C. B. Smith, and correspondence and reviews complete a good issue.

Those on a study whose colour feed to use, just read these absolute true facts. I don't bonnee on men's names who have had a pound or two so as to compete for specials. Everyone below had from 28 lbs. to 112 lbs. Royal Red, Crystal Palace, 1912. Ten Open Champion Norwich classes, nine 1st prize winners, special best bird in show, champion diploma, best in section, were moulted solely on Royal Red by Messrs. Thomas, Davies, Smeaton, Turner. The one first moulted on another was a Buff, four champion Cinnamon classes, every 1st, 2nd and 3rd were moulted solely on Royal Red by Messrs. Dormer, D. Godley, Deacon. The above are classes where colour is everything. In Yorkshires, Messrs. Binns, Thomas, Hirst, Ellis, Dykes, all big first winners, moulted on Royal Red. If above is not a record what is? Just the same at every leading show. I can't give you the quality and extra big specials as well. I give guarantee that Sandiford's Royal Red costs £20 per ton more than any other in England. See advert. (Advert.)

Wild Birds Near Hartlepools.

At the last meeting of the General Purposes Committee of the West Hartlepools Town Council, following a discussion upon a letter from the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, it was resolved that the close season be extended to include the month of August.

As Things Should Be.

Our annual show will be held at Tavistock on Wednesday, Nov. 27th, writes Mr. John Young, sec. of the Tavistock and Dist. F.S., and we are amicably working with Launceston, whose show takes place the day before.

Sour Milk for Canaries.

In my report last week of Mr. Pretty's lecture before the London and Counties A.C.B., in referring to the use of "Stink Pots" I mentioned milk only as being left for three months; it should, writes Mr. G. G. Stubbs, have been bread and milk. Kindly rectify, and I shall be much obliged.

Wild-Bird Life.

Black Brothers.

ROOKS are particularly numerous in the writer's district, and nearly all the clumps of tall trees contain a few nests. This year the breeding season appears to have been unusually productive, and their numbers have increased enormously. The young are very noisy, especially in the early morning, and when one gets a lusty bird perched on the gable of one's roof at four o'clock in the morning, calling to a mate across the meadow, one wishes that they would go further afield before commencing to talk! These young Rooks are feathered quite to the base of the beak like the Crows, and can therefore easily be distinguished from their parents, who are quite bare round the face, which gives them a somewhat "elderly" appearance. The word "Crow" is used in a general sense to indicate any large bird with black plumage; but strictly speaking it means the Carrion Crow, a big black bird similar to the Rook, but with a glossy purple sheen on its plumage, instead of the blue sheen of the more common bird.

The Crows do not nest in colonies like the Rooks, but select a site frequently in the depths of the wood, which they use year after year. They are particularly attached to each other, and more than one case has been reported of one dying when its mate had been killed, the empty crop of the dead bird indicating that in its grief it had refused to feed.

A Crow's nest recently found in a wood by the writer was situated in an old oak tree. It was of enormous size, and had evidently been added to year after year by the then occupiers, and possibly their ancestors before them. Many of the sticks used in the outward parts were perfectly rotten, and would hardly bear touching. Bits of turf and heather from the neighbouring downs, moss, roots, and leaves had all been used, but the interior was particularly warm and cosy, rabbit's fur, feathers, and wool being the chief materials used. Although the cup was smooth and beautifully rounded, it was exceptionally shallow. As a rule, nests formed in trees are much neater and better built than those found upon cliffs, although hardly so bulky.

'PHOSTO'

THE MARVELLOUS

PHOSPHATIC FOOD

For Canaries and Cage Birds.

One of the Latest Opinions.

Park House, Worksop, Notts.,
July 11th, 1912.

Dear Sir,—

I should like to tell you how splendidly my young Canaries have done this year. They have been fed on egg and biscuit with a pinch of "PHOSTO" put in the feed each time it was mixed, from the time of hatching.

The young birds are a month old, are nearly as large as the old cock; they are in PERFECT PLUMAGE, very strong and upright, and have NEVER AILED ANYTHING. I could not have had more satisfactory results—for I have never seen any young Canaries so fine for their age,—and they have been no trouble at all to rear.

Faithfully yours, (Miss) R. ALDERSON.

An Irish Fancier's Favourite Quartette:

The Siskin, the Redpoll, and the Yellow and Reed Buntings

By R. COBAIN (Crawfordsburn).

This article was awarded one of the prizes in our last Essay competition.

I HAVE chosen these four birds for this essay because they are favourites of mine, and because I think they do not get a fair share of commendation. The Siskin and Redpoll are the smallest of our British Finches, and although very different in appearance are much alike in many respects, as I will endeavour to explain as I go on. The Yellowhammer is a favourite with almost all Bunting fanciers, but the breed (to my mind) does not get the notice it deserves.

The Beautiful Little Siskin.

The Siskin is a most beautiful little bird, to my way of thinking. The colours are: Breast yellow; back greenish, with darker marks termed pencilling; black cap; black spot on the throat termed the "bib" (a good many Siskins are without this bib); wings black with yellow bars and yellow sides to the flights; tail black, with yellow sides to the outer feathers; lower parts of the body white, with dark marks down the thighs termed "lacing." The beak is white and sharp and strong, much resembling that of the Goldfinch. The legs are dark brown in colour, turning white when the bird has been house-moulted.

The above is a description of the male bird. The hens are easily distinguished, being much plainer in appearance; the breast and back of the hen are grey, with dark pencilling, and almost the only yellow is to be seen in the wings and tail. She has no cap or bib. The lacing on the sides is the same as in the cock, and often more pronounced.

The Siskin goes to nest about the beginning of May. The site usually chosen is a larch tree, although they sometimes choose other trees, such as the fir, birch, beech, or sycamore, and even smallish shrubs. The nest is a neat structure, usually composed of small roots, moss and wool, lined with horse or cow-hair. The eggs are four or five in number, and very pale blue in colour, with reddish spots towards the larger end. The incubation lasts about thirteen days.

Both Parents are Workers.

The young are fed by both parents, and leave the nest in about a fortnight after hatching. The parents feed from the crop in the same way as Canaries. Young Siskins come to maturity very quickly. When in the nest feather the young resemble the mother, except that the cocks have more yellow in the wings and tail than the hens. During the nesting time Siskins go about very quietly, so that the casual observer would scarcely notice them. The "call" at this time is given in a very low tone. The song is very pleasing to listen to, though not to be compared to the Goldfinch or Linnet.

The natural food of the Siskin during the spring and early summer consists largely of insects. They may be seen gathering these from the willow trees. Of course, Siskins at this time eat a great many seeds as well, such as dandelion, sow thistle, groundsel, chickweed, and the seeds of various grasses. In the autumn their favourite seeds are those of the hardhead and thistle. They are just as fond of this last mentioned as the Goldfinch. During the most severe part of the winter they are invariably to be found on the alder trees, busily engaged picking the seeds out of the little burrs which grow in clusters on these trees, the leaves of which are almost round and a very dark green in colour. The flowers grow in catkins, something like those of the willow. The burrs hang on the trees for two or more seasons, and the birds can still find seed in them. I have given this description of the alder tree, as I find some fanciers confuse it with the elder tree, which has white flowers and purple berries, of which some of our insectivorous birds are so fond.

Fishing for the Cock Birds.

The Siskin is very easy to catch, with a call-bird and limed twigs, when feeding on the alder trees. A good plan is to get a long rod, similar to a fishing rod, with a limed twig on the end. The birds will be found so busy at this time, that one can lift them off the tree with the rod. The great advantage of this plan is that one can pick out the cock birds. I may say I have caught a great many in this way.

The Siskin is a bird which takes readily to cage life, and soon becomes very tame. A healthy specimen is never still, and will sing almost without ceasing. A good cage for the Siskin (indeed, for all our British Hardbills) is one of the box type, wired only in front. About fourteen inches long, by about nine wide, and ten inches high, is a suitable size for this bird. As a stock food I find that Siskins do well on a mixture of canary, rape, and hemp seeds, with a little inga and teazle. They should also be given a regular supply of their natural food mentioned above. If one lives in the country, this can be gathered when in season. If not, one can mostly get what is needed from advertisers in CAGE BIRDS.

Breed More Easily than Canaries.

I would like to mention here that Siskins may be bred in cages almost as easily as Canaries; indeed more easily than some Canaries. The pair intended to breed from should be run together during the winter; a single breeding-cage will suit them at this time. The best green food for bringing them into condition, I find, is dandelion. The leaves should be given before the flowers appear, and afterwards the flowers and seed heads as they appear. About the month of April contrive to fix a smaller cage to the end of the one in which they have spent the winter. In this cage place an ordinary nest-pan; also an old Blackbird or Thrush nest in a little bush. Give plenty of the nesting materials mentioned above. This is an important point, as I find few Britishers are inclined to go to nest unless provided with their own natural nesting material. Your Siskin may choose to go to nest on the cage bottom. I had one which built her nest in the cage bottom close to the bars of the cage, and a very neat little nest she made.

It is a good plan to get the Siskins to eat egg-food. Most of them will do this. If they do not, you need not despair if you can get a good supply of their natural food, as they will rear the young equally well on this and their own stock seed food. When the young leave the nest, give plenty of seeding green-food and crushed hemp seed, and they will soon feed themselves. When they commence to eat they should be removed to another cage and their parents allowed go to nest again. Siskins have three broods in a season. By the above method one may get quite as good birds as any which are caught, and they become so attached to their cage, that if let out they will return to it again.

As an exhibition bird and Hybrid producer, the Sis[kin] stands in the front rank; as a pet he cannot be excelle[d]. The principal points of an exhibition Siskin are—goo[d] colour, size as large as possible, good bib (although the[re] are winners without this), good lacing and pencilling o[n] the sides and back. They require to be colour-fed to w[in] in some shows. To my mind this is a mistake, as the[y] look much better in their natural colour. A word abou[t] moulting: With care a Siskin will improve after bein[g] house-moulted. At this time they should have a good sup[-] ply of seeding green-food and no hemp-seed.

Lettuce "Licks" the Lot.

My idea is to adhere to nature, and put all artificial foods, medicines, etc., on one side. A few years ago, when fairly started with bird breeding, I had a fine lot of lettuce growing in my garden. I gave a little to each of my pairs, and found the hen Canaries would eat nothing else while this was about, so I chanced my luck with one pair, and gave them as much as they could eat, renewing the supply three times a day, being careful to remove all stale leaves, etc. The result could not have been better—five of the healthiest birds I ever bred. The egg-food was never touched. The result was, I treated all pairs alike, and have done so ever since with the most satisfactory results. I intend continuing doing so, and I would not put this in writing if I was not sure what I am writing about. I came to the conclusion that the best things for Canaries, etc., were a clean, good sized cage, plenty of clean gritty sand, and cuttlefish bone, plenty of clean water in well cleansed fountains, a good supply of mixed seeds, with an increased amount of hemp, and a large lot of green food, if possible, given three times daily, taking care to remove all old when putting in new, namely, lettuce, tender dandelion leaves, and flowers, groundsel, shepherd's purse, etc. If the above is strictly adhered to, your percentage of birds will be greater and of a more robust and healthy nature all round. I have bred Canaries, Mules and Hybrids. Sow lettuce seed at once, and every alternate month. If you have not a garden, old boxes will do to sow in, and you can transplant and so insure a continual supply.—ROWLAND C. DAVIES (Ely, near Cardiff).

Ground Rice to the Rescue.

I have been a fancier of Canarics and British birds for 30 years, and have used egg-food in all its forms. But for the past three years I have discarded it altogether and used ground rice and new milk prepared in the following manner:—For each pair of birds daily put two dessert spoonfuls of ground rice into a small boiling pan, and as much sugar as makes it palatable, taking care not to make it too sweet. Add as much new milk as the rice will absorb, and a little over, to allow for the swelling. Place the pan upon a slow fire and boil until the rice is fully swollen, taking care to stir all the time with a spoon. It must not be "sloppy." Then scrape out of the pan, with the spoon used for stirring, into a clean earthenware dish. Leave until cool (but do not cover) and serve to the birds in the usual small egg drawers. Care must be taken with regard to cleanliness in the vessels used. Since I began to use the ground rice and milk, I have not had one death for every five that I had while using egg food. In the summer of 1909 I had a hen feeding four young Canaries. They were two weeks old, when the hen took a dislike to egg food. The birds were not getting on, so I told a brother fancier, and he brought the rice and milk under my notice. I had it prepared as I have described, and given to the hen, with the result that my birds throve every day after and never got any more egg food. At the same time I had a nest of Linnet Mules, which I placed on the same food, and they did splendidly. All the birds I have bred since have been fed on the same food, and have done well.—JOHN STEWART (Old Cumnock).

Oatmeal Extremely Satisfying.

Having reared numerous Canaries, Mules and Hybrids, and various British birds, I have had a varied experience in the upbringing of the young ones. Every morning the food vessels are changed and replenished with fresh oatmeal, which is slightly moistened with a little milk (or water) care being taken to avoid the mixture getting into a too sloppy state. In handrearing, a few dandelion leaves, or a little groundsel, chopped in the meal, is a necessity, and helps greatly the chances of successful rearing. I, at any rate, have had extremely satisfying results by this method of feeding.—J. DAVIES (Cardigan).

Bread Brings Butter.

In rearing young birds on home-made food I have proved very successful. My husband is a farm labourer, and last year he brought me home three nests of Linnets, 12 birds in all, and one Bullfinch's nest with two young, and one Greenfinch's with four young, all at seven days' old, and I reared 16 birds, only losing one Linnet and one Bullfinch. I reared them on scalded bread and scalded rape seed, mixed. When they were old enough to leave the nest, they were placed in a large cage, and then I used to feed them through the wires. I sold 14 at 1s. 6d. each, and kept one Linnet and one Bullfinch, and both are now singing nicely.—MRS. SMITH (Horley).

Good Results with Baby Food.

I started with three hens and two cocks; result: 29 young, all of which were a lot bigger and stronger birds than their parents. I started feeding them with 1 part of biscuit, 1½ parts of rusks, and 1 part of Dr. King's patent malted food (for babies), made moist with water (milk twice per week). After the young hatched I put a pinch of castor sugar amongst it. When 3 days old I chopped up green stuff and put with the above mixture; it consisted of rape, grown in the house window. This is how I grew it. I got 3 plates and cut 3 pieces of flannel the shape of the plates, and soaked them in water and sprinkled the rape on, one, say, on Monday, another on Wednesday, and so on. I put these in a warm cupboard until the rape begins to grow, then take it out and put it in the window, when it will turn green. I have had greenfood this way all winter. Of course, you have to keep it well watered. The young at 6 to 9 days old in the first nest of 5 seemed a bit too loose, I thought, in their bowels, so I added a little cornflour to their soft food, and I had no more trouble, and some fine youngsters.—Mrs. A. Woodward (Bulwell).

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

RAPE SEED (H.B.).—The sample sent is summer rape, and although the appearances are rather against it, it is of very fair quality. It seems to have been in contact with mould, but is not at all musty. Possibly it comes from a bulk among which a small isolated portion got wet, and mould started to grow, the outer part eventually becoming mixed with the bulk. I do not think there is the least risk attached to its use; still, I should scarcely expect to pay "tip-top price" for it.

USING QUASSIA INFUSION (A Reader of "C.B.").—There is no risk whatever in adding a little quassia to the birds' bath. It is quite harmless; indeed, if the birds drank a little it would only act as a mild tonic. In the strength prescribed for bathing it is of little use as an insecticide, but doubtless gives an unpleasant character to the plumage from the insects' point of view, and thus helps to ward off their persistent attentions.

PLUCKS ITS FEATHERS (E.A.O.).—You do not say whether the bird is a cock or hen. An unmated lusty hen in high breeding condition will often pluck at its feathers a good deal. Try two or three weeks of the same treatment advised to "West Riding," but add six drops of dandelion juice to the water on the same days that you are giving the soda and potash, and see that the bird has a little green food daily—plantain stalks, sprays of seedy chickweed, and shepherd's purse.

CAUSE OF YOUNG DYING (L.S.).—In your case it is quite clear that "sweating" and non-feeding hens have been the cause of the losses. The hens have probably been out of condition, and to make matters worse your feeding seems to be very faulty. It is too late now to allow the hens to start nesting again this season. If you have any eggs still to hatch out, add a small crystal of sulphate of soda to the drinking water for one-half of each day on two days each side of hatching date, and offer a bath each day in which a little common salt has been dissolved. Get Part V. of "Our Canaries," for full details about feeding. CAGE BIRDS' ANNUAL would help you considerably, as also would many replies on non-feeding hens in this column in the past few weeks.

INSECT PESTS (Very Anxious).—There is no ground whatever for your fears respecting the grey lice. Neither these insects nor the red mites will live on the human body, or on the scalp, for any length of time, so their presence can only cause you temporary discomfort. If you wrap a band of linen around each wrist and saturate it with water in which you have mixed a little carbolic fluid when you are dressing the cages, it will prevent the insects getting on your body, as they are apt to do by swarming up the arms whilst the cage is being attended to. Thoroughly overhaul the cage and the birds, as per instructions sent you, and do not overlook the position where the cages hang or stand. Give a bath daily, and three times a week add a few drops of quassia essence to it. Give each bird a morsel of bread and milk with two drops of cod liver emulsion on it, and lightly dusted with soft sugar, three times a week for a month. On the alternate days give a pinch of maw. Give a little green food daily, and add 20 drops of Chemical Food to the water every second day for a fortnight. The plumage will doubtless come perfect at the moult, which will very soon take place now. You might give them a three week's course of the treatment advised to "M.T.," on July 6th, after you have cleared out the insects.

FEATHER EATING (West Riding).—If this has become a settled habit it will be very difficult to cure. Examine cage thoroughly for presence of red mite, and the bird for grey lice. If either are found exterminate them. Give a bath daily, and soak a few quassia chips in it for a few hours twice a week. Tie a morsel of string to the wires for it to play with, and give one or two mealworms daily for a time. Keep cage quite clean, and in addition to seed diet give a piece of bread soaked in cold milk, drained, and slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur three times a week for a fortnight. In the water add as much sulphate of soda as will cover a threepenny-piece, and the same quantity of chlorate of potash every second day for a week, and in the next week six drops of tincture of gentian and three of dilute sulphuric acid every second day. If there are any bare sore places anoint once with lanocyllin.

CANARY QUERISTS

BREEDING SINGERS (F.E.N., U.S.A.).—For breeding songsters pure and simple, the best mate for a Roller is another pure Roller of a similar type of singing strain. Thus, if your Roller is of the pure, long, hollow rolling strain, you want a hen, or cock, as the case may be, of a similar and ditto if it is of a more varied type of song. If you want to cross with another breed to get a better looking bird: a Yorkshire or Norwich, in the order named, will be best. A Yorkshire or Norwich hen would also be best for breeding singing Mules. Get a clear ben bred from clears for several years; if a Yorkshire, from a pink-eyed strain preferably. The Norwich cock and Roller hen you mention, if quite healthy and active, will do very well for mating next year. As long as they remain perfectly healthy, robust, and active, either sex may reasonably be expected to breed successfully.

THE MANCHESTER COPPY (F.E.N., U.S.A.).—The breed known in your parts as the Manchester Coppy is the same as the one known to English fanciers as the Lancashire. Years ago the Lancashire was known here as the Manchester Fancy and Manchester Coppy, but now both these terms are quite obsolete with us, hence the reason you never see this name in our paper now. Had you read Parts X. and XI. of "Our Canaries," containing chapter on the Lancashire, you would have found this point made quite clear. It is the largest of the Canary tribe. The Roller is undoubtedly the best breed for singing. If you do not consider this an English breed then the Border Fancy comes nearest to it, and would be the best English breed.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

ROSELLA PARRAKEETS (A. Mason)—It would appear that you have two hens, unless they are quite young birds. Every hen does not possess a patch of green on the nape (some young cocks have it, in immature plumage) yet I have never come across, or heard of an adult cock with a patch of green on the nape. An advert in our columns would probably secure you an exchange. They seldom settle down to breed the first year. Yes, your aviary is large enough, you could also have pairs of Madagascar and Blue-winged Lovebirds.

PROPOSED AVIARY (W.G.)—Your suggested aviary should answer well, but make it 6ft. wide if you possibly can. All glass must be covered with wire netting on the inside. I think your Cockatiels failed owing to their accommodation being insufficient, they will do better when in the aviary. You have drawn the right conclusion re the Budgerigars. You could keep in the aviary pairs each of Rosella Parrakeets, Cockatiels, Budgerigars, Madagascar and Blue-winged Lovebirds, but you would have to remove or sell young as soon as they were able to fend for themselves. Use only natural branches as perches in the aviary, and you must provide double the number of husks and barrels or logs, that you have pairs of birds. Keep up a continual supply of grit, old mortar rubbish, and cuttlebone in the shed.

MOST SUITABLE FOREIGNERS (Mick)—I see no reason why you should not be able to sell or exchange your Britishers for Foreign species, try an advert in our columns. Of course in separate cages you are not limited to Finches only. All the following have bred and reared young in cages: Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, White Java Sparrows, Budgerigars, Bluewing Lovebirds, Long-tailed Grassfinches, Bengalese, Silverbills and many others, but any of the above would suit you. If you only keep Finches, why not make a wire lobby inside the door, cover the window with wire netting, the floor with lino, furnish with twiggy branches and nest receptacles, and let the birds all fly together in the room. Cages take a lot of keeping clean! Kept flying together in a room birds take very little time to feed and keep clean.

SICK GREY PARROT (A.H.).—Give as often as you can without the voidings being watery-loose, one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in one ounce of water—this to form the drinking water for the respective days. Whatever the condition of the bowels I should give three doses with two days between each, and then as required to keep the bowels moving freely. On the days you are not giving the magnesia put half a teaspoonful byno-phosphates in the daily supply of drinking water. Induce bird to take more seed and less boiled maize; an adult Grey should not need the latter—in fact, is better without it. The diet should be gradually confined to a seed mixture with ripe fruit (ad. lib.), nuts, and plain biscuit or stale crusts of household bread. If the bird insists on the latter being damped, then lightly moisten it with byno-phosphates and water. A pinch of grit (not sand) should be added to the daily supply of seed mixture, and clean cuttlebone kept continually in the cage. Our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," would help you in the general treatment of the bird. The bird will be the better for a little outdoor treatment, in some unexposed position, on dry warm days, but not when gusty and cold winds are prevalent. When diarrhœa is severe, dissolve two drops of tincture of opium in a little syrup and let the bird have a few sips at intervals during the day. Metal drinkers must not be used while giving drugs, and the voidings should be promptly removed and destroyed (best burnt).

AMAZON PARROT (Newton Abbot)—Get a box of honey and borax from your chemist and put a little in the bird's mouth with a feather or camel-hair brush, once or twice daily, but whatever utensil you use it must be cleansed for each occasion, and only when quite clean should it be put into bulk of mixture. Keep the bowels moving freely, not watery-loose, by an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful to two tablespoonfuls of water. If there is any recurrence of running at the nostrils, spray or cleanse the nostrils with a dilute solution of glyco-thymoline once or twice daily and continue this while the trouble lasts. Diet: Seed mixture, ripe fruit, nuts, plain biscuit, grit, cuttlebone and water. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever.

WHAT ARE THEY? (J. Wood)—The two birds you describe are a male and female Saffron Finch (Sycalis flaveola). The others are Pope Cardinals, the Red-crested Cardinal is a different species. Neither male nor female Popes have crests. Both species would be better for a little live food, anything you can capture in the garden that they will eat—spiders, beetles, smooth caterpillars, etc., and when these fail, say two mealworms per bird daily. The other items of dietary are satisfactory.

WHAT BIRD? (F.J.P.)—They are West African or Red-faced Lovebirds (Agapornis pullaria), delicate and fragile when first imported and many die, but once established are comparatively hardy—the sexes are alike in plumage with one exception—the underside of wing in the male is black, in the female it is dark green. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet, greenfood, cuttlebone and grit and a little of any kind of fruit they will take. The Parrot-tribe (Psittaci) ought never to mix with Finches (Fringillidæ). Very many have lived for good periods in unheated rooms, but till established they should not be subjected to much exposure. New arrivals are only a few shillings per pair, but an established pair would command 30/-.

LAVENDER FINCHES (M. G. Lethbridge)—Lavender Finches have been bred and the young fully reared in this country, though the occurrence is very infrequent. Why yours were not reared I cannot say, as it is evident they did not want for food. It is a pity you did not send one or more of the bodies to our Mr. Yates for P.M. examination. It is quite possible they have too much company, but seeing they incubated, hatched out the young and were feeding them well, this cannot be the cause; only a P.M. could have revealed this. Continue present diet, but add thereto, if more youngsters are hatched, a little of some good insectile mixture (probably will not be eaten) and some live ant's eggs and gentles, also unlimited greenfood and spray millet.

INDOOR FLIGHT IN OUTHOUSE (A.B.C.)—If you can spare the room make the flight 3ft. wide. When you take out the glass a hinged light should be made to fill the gap, this can be closed at night and kept closed altogether during the winter months—you must also watch that when the door of the outhouse and the end of flight are open simultaneously that there is no draught. Start with say three pairs only, and the following would be almost sure to do well and probably breed this year: Zebra Finches (7/6), Cutthroats and Bronze Mannikins (3/6 to 4/6); prices given are approx. for a pair. Waxbills are not free breeders save in natural aviaries, but a pair of Golden-breasted Waxbills (4/6 to 6/-) could go with the others, they are very beautiful and if they do not breed are worth their room and keep. "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1/1½ post free from our manager would help you.

AVIARY QUERIES (Alpha)—(1) Twelve pairs at most, your breeding prospects would be better with half that number. (2) The best flooring for the shelter is six inches of rubble, pad it level, and pour in liquid cement, sufficiently thin to permeate the rubble, finishing off with some a little stiffer but yet sufficiently loose to run and find its own level; when dry this should be quite hard and smooth. It should be kept covered with one inch of gritty sand, renewing this as required. If there is any likelihood of rats visiting the aviary you must let half inch wire netting into the ground eighteen inches, bending it outwards so L; this will effectually keep them out. The floor of covered flight can be earth covered with sand or gravel—use twiggy branches as perches. For so small an aviary the "other end" would be better wood and glass; all glass must be covered on the inside with half inch mesh wire netting. (3) You cannot with safety mix Budgerigars and Finches, you had better make up your mind which you would prefer and repeat this query, also naming your county, when I will give you a list.

A SICK GREY PARROT (Mrs. H.)—If not too far gone, the treatment already advised should gradually pull the bird round, but when you first wrote the bird was in a very critical condition, and the remedies must have time to act. The bird must have taken something very unwholesome while out of your care. Give the tincture of opium as per instructions already given. While you must not allow the voidings to remain watery-loose, it is yet necessary that the bowels should move quite freely, and the magnesia is very gentle and also soothing in its action. Follow the treatment advised very closely for a few days and then report bird's condition fully. If it appears to need a stimulant a few sips of very weak brandy and water (chilled) may be given, but as the bird is so thirsty, do not leave water continually in the cage, but permit it to drink moderately every two hours. Keep it warm and strictly out of draught. As soon as it starts eating again recovery should be fairly rapid. The moistened bread or biscuit (see direction in first reply) while the appetite is poor should be beneficial if it will take it. Parrot troubles (that is speaking of established birds) can usually be cured if taken in time, and you must hope for the best.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

A YOUNG CUCKOO (T. Wilson).—No doubt you found all the information you require in the two answers concerning young Cuckoos which I gave last week. It seems as though the Cuckoo season is now on, so to speak!

BRAMBLEFINCH-CANARY HYBRIDS (F. J. Poole).—I have never seen a Bramblefinch-Canary Hybrid yet, nor do I know of anyone else who has done so. Consequently I cannot tell you anything concerning the sexing of them. Does your letter mean that you have bred some? If so, I think you are the first person to accomplish the feat. I hope it is true and that the birds may be successfully reared and moulted. I should be very interested to hear further from you on the matter, giving details of the plumage (colour, markings, etc.) of the birds, if now fledged. I should expect to find very little sex distinction in the plumage, however, until after the first moult a little later in the year.

TWO WEEDS (B. B. Fancier).—When your two specimens reached me they were so dried up and shrivelled as to be almost past identification, No. 1 in particular, which, however, is certainly not chickory, which has a largish blue flower (after the cornflower style), and quite different leaves. It looks very like the toad-flax. No. 2 is sorrel, often known as "sour dock." The latter is in common use amongst fanciers; the former I have never given to birds.

YOUNG MAGPIES (A. James).—It may be due (1) to the youngsters not being kept properly dry, (2) to the food not being sufficiently generous, i.e., deficient in bone and flesh-forming elements; (3) to the birds being kept in too confined a space when first able to leave the nest—they must have room for exercise. You must remedy either or all of these things if existent. Probably the best help to a cure of the weakness will be to get a bottle of cod liver oil and hypophosphites (combined) emulsion, ensure extract and hypophosphites, and mix a teaspoonful daily in the soft food.

A CORN CRAKE (E. L. Hyde).—You should get your young bird to eat a good brand of dog meal (such as Spratts or "Meiox"), or crushed dog biscuits, thoroughly softened with hot water; don't let it be "sloppy," but just moist. Mix small garden worms amongst it, with a few mealworms for a change; and practically anything in the live-food line that seems suitable (grubs, beetles, etc.) can be offered. Put some chopped-up green stuff amongst the food regularly, while canary and millet seeds are eaten, and wheat (allow it to soak until quite soft and "burst") is also relished.

IN AN AVIARY (Beginner).—Yes; it is the beginning of the moulting season, some birds, in fact, being now well on in the moult, and I have no doubt this is the cause of the loss of plumage you have noticed in your aviary. It is a somewhat trying period for birds, spells of cold wet weather being at this time especially dangerous to the well-being of birds in out-door aviaries. An occasional loss or two has, of course, to be faced by every bird-keeper. A varied and generous dietary should always be provided during the moult, and your birds would benefit by a free supply of the wild seeds mentioned in the "Nutshell" booklet (shepherd's purse and chickweed, also thistle and hard-heads, are very easily obtainable). For Greenfinches and Bramblefinches, good white sunflower seed should most certainly be provided, and Buntings should have a little insectile food and a few mealworms daily. Your aviary seems a useful, satisfactorily designed place, though you do not make it clear whether it is roofed all over; it would be better so.

A PET BULLIE (S. A.).—I am glad to hear your bird made so satisfactory a recovery under the treatment I advised. With regard to the piping Bullfinch, these trained birds (Germans) are rarely very large, the majority being about the size of the average British Bullie, but many are appreciably smaller. In my opinion the bird is sure to moult this season. Keep him in a warm spot, but if you put his cage in the sun, cover it over so that the direct rays do not fall on the bird. This will most likely cause him to drop into moult. Get one ounce of tincture of gentian from a chemist and stir half-a-teaspoonful into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water over a period of 7 to 12 days, as seems necessary.

A TRIO (A. M. Z.).—Your queries did not arrive in time for last week's issue; note rules. (1) Greenfinch Mules intended for exhibition must certainly be colour-fed. The procedure is the same as with Canaries, and it was explained in two articles given in last week's CAGE BIRDS. All exhibition Mules ought to be frequently offered a little soft-food (egg food or egg cake) to keep up their "taste" for it, and then the colour-feeding is an easy matter. The majority of Mule exhibitors favour a little hot pepper in the food—say two ounces of hot to one pound of tasteless. (2) A good stock mixture for use during the moult would be canary 3 parts, teazle 2 parts, summer rape, linseed, and white sunflower, 1 part each. Give a teaspoonful of the following mixture three times a week: Gold of pleasure, sesame, and thistle two ounces of each, maw, plantain, wild mustard, and cornflower, one ounce of each. A spray of seeding shepherd's purse can be given every other day without harm, and daily towards the end of the moult. (3) Greenfinch Mules are fine show birds providing they have the requisite size and substance and carry plenty of colour. Yours ought to be good, judging by your description of the parents. I hope they may win you plenty of prizes.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

Bert Lewis.—Yes; we certainly intend to repeat later on the feature you mention. Glad to hear that you consider it of such great assistance to fanciers.

A. E. Clark.—Thanks for your letter. You are not indebted to us for any fee.

PENDLETON AND SALFORD O.S.

Annual F.F. Show, held at headquarters, Irwell Castle Street, Broughton, July 13. Entries did not turn up to expectations, but quality was good, Mr. Siddall sending a grand team of Yorks. Mr. J. Beswick judged, and his awards were well received. YORKS., YELL.: 1, 3, Siddall; 2, Chorley; 4, Parr. BUFF: 1, Chorley; 2, Siddall; 3, 4, Slowby. TKD. YELL.: 1, 2, 3, Siddall; 4, Wilkinson. NOR. Mr. Storrar won medal best bird in show. It looks as if Dr. Dawson's cup for most points is to remain the property of Mr. Henderson for another year, unless members of the club who did not exhibit at this show will give him a good run for it at the open show. A meeting was held after the show; two members joined. Next meeting August 3rd; business arrangements for open show November 23rd.—Richard Hazzard, Sec.

PORTSMOUTH C.B.S.

Third annual F.F. show held Long's Memorial Hall, July 3rd. Entries were not quite so many as last year, but made up for this in quality, especially Nor. and Yorks., which contained many birds of great promise. The secretaries, Messrs. Lawrence and Joiner, with their excellent committee, carried out the arrangements in good style. Mr. H. Young again placed the cards, and gave every satisfaction. CL. NOR.: 1, Ninnen, bouncing yellow; 2, Hatter, grand buff; 3, Saunders. MKD.: 1, sp, 2, Hatter; 3, Rickel, all good type and high quality. CL. ECCLES C.B.S.

First Feather show held Diamond Inn, Liverpool Road, Patricroft, July 6, was an eye-opener. We had 60 birds staged, and a very nice lot they were. Yorks. were very good in quality and type, and took a lot of judging. Norwich were exceedingly good also. Some very good British were shown, and Mr. Barlow's pair of Budgerigars were very pretty in markings, colour and size. Mr. Dawson won points special with some shapely, typical and clean cut Yorkshires, and a Linnet Mule of good shape and markings. Mr. Peters won points special in Norwich with some good birds; Mr. Astley most points in British, and Gaskell Bros. most entries: Mr. Tims for best British. The Hon. Sec. would like to be enrolling a few more members; any wishing to join may do so by forwarding 1s. to Mr. Hall, 199, Liverpool Road, Patricroft, and 4s. per annum. Mr. Clowe judged, and his awards pleased all.

Feeding for Substance and Feather.

Are we too Conservative?

A Lecture delivered before the Halifax F.A. by Mr. C. A. House, on July 9th.

THERE was a large gathering at the "Plummit Line" Hotel, with Mr. Jackson H. Feather, the president, in the chair, supported by some sixty to seventy members of the Halifax F.A. and the Halifax O.S., the members of the latter society having been invited to the meeting.

Mr. House, who received a very hearty reception, spoke first of all on the constituent parts of a feather, showing how it was one of the most wonderful and perfect things in creation, how admirably it fulfilled the purpose for which it was created.

Dealing with the question of feeding for feather, the lecturer pointed out many fallacies which exist at the present moment, and asked how it was possible for success to be attained when the men seeking it were actually fighting against themselves. Fanciers generally were very conservative, and looked upon new ideas with a certain amount of suspicion. Thus we found breeders of to-day feeding their birds upon practically the same foods as did their fathers and grandfathers before them. Certain foods had been handed down to them from generations before as being the "correct thing," and the bulk of bird-keepers swore by them without stopping to investigate and think out matters for themselves. Do we not find, as a consequence, some breeders of long, heavy feathered birds using the same foods as those who breed short-feathered birds? It was positively certain that both could not be right—therefore one was wrong—yet both were seeking success!

Food that Spells Substance.

That food had an effect on structure was seen by the fact that in Scotland, where large quantities of oatmeal were consumed, the people were large, strong and brawny, possessing plenty of bone and sinew. Other nations there were who consumed much rice; these were small, slim, and possessed little bone. Why? Because oatmeal possessed great bone-making properties, whilst in rice there was scarcely a trace of bone-making matter; in fact, the quantity was so small that analytical chemists could not give it a percentage, and simply showed "a trace."

The lesson to be learnt from this was that in most breeds of Canaries, in which substance was a consideration, such foods as oatmeal, bone-meal, bean-meal, etc., were of great feeding value, whilst in those in which shortness and fineness of feather, and fineness of bone were desired, they should be used sparingly. On the other hand, in the latter breeds, rice and dari, which had not great bone or feather making properties, should be used. If fanciers would only use their thinking powers more, they would reap far more fully of success than they do. Birds need to be mated with brains, and also fed with brains, and the man who brought most brain-power into play, the one who was not tied down by tradition, would beat those who were satisfied to go along in the old ways.

A Believer in Green Food.

On moulting for colour, Mr. House said Canary breeders had left breeders of poultry and pigeons far in the rear, but it was quite as easy to colour the latter as it was Canaries, with the same substance, "Tasteless Pepper." It could be given in capsule or pill form immediately after the morning and evening feeds.

Iron in some form or other was of advantage, but too much should not be given. He believed in a moderate supply of green-food during the moulting season, because it kept the liver and kidneys working properly, and prevented the patchiness of colouring which was to be seen when the liver became clogged, as it often did when birds were fed for colour and no green food was given to them.

At the close a number of questions were asked, and satisfactorily answered, after which the chairman, who said they had listened to a lecture which had been most interesting, scientific, and instructive, proposed a vote of thanks to the lecturer; he was sure all would hope to hear Mr. House again. The vote was supported by Messrs. T. H. Hartley, Walter Horsfall, W. Quarmby, and others.

BARROW C.B.A.

Nest Feather and British Bird show, held Dalton Road Schools, July 6. Entries came up well, Borders, as usual, being the strongest section, 49 in the four classes, Yorkshires coming next with 22 in two classes. Mr. Woodward, a novice member, staged a rare team in this section, taking challenge cup with a lovely clear buff of nice length and style, also 1st and 2nd in yellows. Mr. Hudson won cup confined to Borders with a very smart clear buff, sweet head, neat wings and tail, in the best of feather and condition. British made a nice show, the winners being all birds of merit. Mr. W. Fryer's winning Goldfinch was greatly admired, also Mr. W. Johnson's Lesser Redpoll, which headed a strong mixed British class. The total entries were over 100, the disappointment of the show being Norwich, four in three classes. Mr. W. J. Douglas, Whitehaven, judged, his awards being well received. YORKS. CL. or TKD. YELL. WOOD GREEN F. AND F.S.

Table Show at Headquarters, Mayes Road, July 9th. Mr. G. T. Harris, the hon. sec., was well rewarded for his efforts, also the chairman and other colleagues for the attendance was good, the entry a nice one, and the quality a credit to any society. Mr. Pledger won the silver spoon for best in show, with a rattling yellow Nor., bonny type, level colour, and still holding feather well. Mr. Clay took the second sp. with a very neat buff Yorks.; Mr. Griffin third, with a buff Norwich., also a good one. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and at the close of his task spoke upon the exhibits, and answered several questions. Upon the question of colour transmission, one gentleman asked the interesting question, which was the best way to get colour, through the cock or the hen? Mr. Gardner said if you had plenty of colour blood bred in on both sides, he was of opinion that you could get as many (probably more) yellows of good shape from a typical buff cock and yellow hen as you could vice versa. A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Gardner at the close. YORKS.: 1, 2, res, Clay Bros., winner smart nervy buff, close in feather and well posted; 3, Cobden. NOR. BUFF: 1, 3, Griffin, leader, bold fronted, nice quality clean, rich undercolour, stands well across; 2, Ayling, variegated, rather long in flights if anything, but a really nice feathered bird; res, Pledger. YELL.: 1, Pledger, the spoon winner already referred to; 2, res, Ayling, former very soft, silky feathered youngster, good type; 3, Griffin. GOLDIES: Cobden, fullest face, best training; 2, Griffin, clean cut and neat. A.O.S. BRIT.: 1, 2, Griffin, nice coloured, marked, and conditioned Linnet and Bullie respectively; 3, res, Pettit, former smart Linnet.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Y.B. show, held July 6th, in St. George's Schools. Competition was very keen in Yorks. and Norwich, some very good birds being staged by Messrs. Chew, Hall, Farrar, and Beckwith in Yorks., and Mennard and Johnson in Norwich. Leaders for sectional gold medals are: Yorks., Chew 34 points, Hall 32, Farrar 32, Beckwith 21; Nor., Mennard 29, Johnson 29; Brit., Owen 25, Middleton 24. Mr. H. J. Chittenden (Bradford) judged, and his awards gave entire satisfaction.

More Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids.

Sir,—I am a constant reader of Cage Birds and I thought your readers might be interested to know that I have three young Goldfinch-Bullfinch hybrids on the "sticks" out of one nest of four eggs, and with the same pair two more young birds out of a nest of five eggs. I wish your paper Cage Birds every success.

Yorkshire Canary with One Wing.

Sir,—I have a Yorkshire, six weeks old, that has only one wing. It hasn't the slightest sign of a left wing, not even a stump, only small body feathers. It has the use of the right wing, feeds all right, and gets on the perch at night with the other youugsters. Up to the time of writing, it is doing all right, and can be seen at any time. I am a constant reader of Cage Birds, and this is the first I ever saw or heard of.

The Canary Up the Chimney.

Sir,—The wonderful cat aud Canary story given last week is certainly, as you surmised, a very hoary customer, appearing from time to time with but slight variatiou, in many places more notable for sentiment than practical knowledge. My first acquaintance with it was in the School Reader when I was imbibing these elementary arts, which is quite a good many years ago. Since then I have owned some uncommonly tame birds, and animals, and have lots of times seen a pet bird alight on my old cat's back, and nestle in his fur as he lay down, and I have seen the cat lick a bird as though "washing" it many a time. But I have yet to come across one of these cats possessing human powers of reasoning and deductiou.

Three Nests of Skylarks Bred this Year.

Sir,—I read in Cage Birds a short time ago of a gentleman who had been trying to breed Skylarks, but failed. I have much pleasure in telling you that this year, for the first time, I have succeeded in breeding three uests. I have also one hen sitting now. I have also a pair of Goldfinches at nest; they have young ones which are doing well. I have been a breeder of Goldfinch Mules for 40 years, and I think I am one of the earliest breeders in England, having bred Goldfinch Mules four years in succession on Jan. 3rd, 17th, 23rd, and the 31st. I believe I have done as much as any other breeder with Goldfinch Mules. I have bred from two Goldfinches in the summer, have moulted them in six weeks, and bred from the same Goldfinches in the autumn, with the same hen Canary. I have never bred Mules for points for show, although I have bred some very handsome ones, my particular fancy being for bird song. I have sold a Goldfinch for £6, also one to a blind man for £4 10s. I thought this might interest your readers, as I should be very pleased to know if this is a record.

New Light on Colour Feeding.

Our Contributor "Sticks to His Guns."

Sir,—Allow me to congratulate "H. E. T." on his daughter's arithmetic. His, or, rather, his daughter's, figures, are very accurate, but he only gives a hypothetical case. His figures won't work out in practice; at any rate, not in my case. If he will re-peruse my article, he will find that no bird is put on full amount of colour food until feathers are noticed dropping, and when they have finished with the exception of the head they will only get colour food twice a week. Again, some of the youngsters are on colour food before others which have to be fed are hatched, and are almost finished before the later ones are ready for feeding. It is now well into July, and my old birds are not showing any signs of breaking up; indeed, they are all breeding yet. So H. E. T. will have to modify his figures materially, which will make the problem more difficult for his little girl; this time it will prove a task for the parent. Let me ask him, however, to give my methods a trial. I can assure him he will have a healthier stock, and not a whit less colour. Indeed, I think that one of the secrets of getting a good colour is to have a healthy, quick moult, and my methods conduce to that state. I have heard of young birds this season being on colour food at six weeks old. Why, sir, it's absurd. I have now a flight of first roundors, the oldest of which were hatched on April 1st, therefore they are exactly 14 weeks old, at the time of writing, and they have not yet thrown a feather. Perhaps the date of hatching has something to do with it. Anyhow, some fanciers would have been giving them a teaspoonful each of colour from the age of eight weeks, which would all have been wasted, and more than wasted, because it would have been doing its share towards undermining the system. Of course I have these birds on colour food, but only twice a week, until I see them dropping. There is another point that I omitted from my article. If you will look into the cages of these birds which get their one and two teaspoonfuls a day, you will see the cage bottoms full of colour food that the birds have thrown about and wasted. My birds don't do that; they eat it ravenously—what bit they get. I shouldn't be surprised if my birds didn't really eat more than those birds which are supposed to eat a large teaspoonful, but which really gets scattered about the cage. But if I keep on, you will think I am writing a fresh article, and to conclude, I will admit that I didn't write it without expecting some adverse criticism. The Englishman is inclined to regard anything that opposes the orthodox as revolutionary. I thank "H. E. T." for his criticism; I believe it to be honest, much more so than that which took place in a barber's shop between two fanciers, one of whom never exhibited a Canary, and the other breeds only Rollers, therefore has never colour fed. For curiosity I measured in teaspoons one and a-half pounds of feed, and there are approximately 162 teaspoonsful, so "H. E. T." was quite right in using the poet's expression, "I don't think." Speaking from memory though, I don't think I claimed to have used only 1½ lbs. of feed. What I did say was that I got 2½ lbs. and had upwards of a pound left. In my previous letter, in which I made the statement which caused the article to be written, I mentioned that I had fed forty birds on 2 lbs. of colour feed; but "H. E. T." may take it from me that it was well under 2 lbs.

T. Johnson.

[We are puzzled by the latter part of Mr. Johnson's letter. If he had "upwards of a pound left" (i.e., some quantity exceeding a pound), then he must have used less than 1½ pounds.—Editor.]

Can a Mule Have Two Male Parents?

Sir,—I have a young Mule that has the marking of two different Finches, clear and distinct—namely, American Yellow Bird and European Goldfinch. It is bred from a hen Roller Canary that was in a cage with the two Finches. Would it be possihle that the same egg has been fertilized by the two male birds? I would be very pleased if some of your readers would enlighten me.

[So far as our own comprehension of life's mechanism goes, we think we are correct in stating that it would be highly improbable for a spermatozoon from two male birds to fertilise the same female ovum.—Editor.]

Queer Nesting Places.

Jackdaws Ferreted Out.

Sir,—Perhaps these few lines may interest some of your numerous readers, who delight in rural ramhles. A few days ago some boys who were nesting, found two wild ducks' nests. One was upon the top of the stump of a willow tree, about four or five yards from the ground. The top of the tree had been cut off, and the spring hranches had shot up again. The other one was in a fork of an oak tree some twenty feet from the ground. The question would be how would the young get from the nest? Both nests were close to a poud, one had six and the other seven eggs in. Both nests and eggs were afterwards wilfully destroyed by some boys; as the eggs were hard sat upon and no good to them, they were smashed. A great many other birds' eggs, which are sat upon are served in the same way. If you remonstrate with them on the wilful destruction, they will say: Well, what good are they; there are plenty of them about. Another strange nesting place was a large old ash tree, which had been a noted place for rabbits; in fact, the bottom was all honeycombed with holes. A man was asked to go and ferret out the rabbits, as they were a nuisance. On putting in the ferrets, there was a row of nine Jackdaws which came out from the holes into the rabbit nets. Only one rabbit was found there. Had the Jackdaws frightened the rabbits away from their warren? On the man putting his arm into the holes he found nine nests with eggs in I have never heard of the like before (so many); in fact, I have only found one Jackdaw's nest in a rabbit hole. I also once found a wild Duck's nest in a fir tree.

Does Rain Kill Young Birds?

Fledglings that Survived a Record Storm.

Sir,—I recently raised this question in your columns, and I am now able to add somewhat to my former letter. In the early hours of the 14th inst. we experienced the heaviest rainfall which has ever been recorded at Teignmouth, and probably one of the heaviest that has ever been recorded in this country. The storm began at midnight with vivid lightning, violent gusts of wind and tremendous crashes of thunder. Then came the rain—a solid sheet of water which fell on the roof with the roar of a blast furnace. According to the official report of the superintendent of our local Metcorological station, three-quarters of an inch of rain fell in half an hour, and .84 of an inch in an hour. I was up very early to see what damage had been done to my young birds and nests. A Diamond Dove was feeding her young in a nest 14 feet from the ground in a position which must have been exposed to the full fury of the storm. Two young Black Redstarts (only three days out of the nest) were as lively as could be. Three young Crested Larks, which had left the nest about ten days, and which roost on the bare ground in an absolutely unsheltered aviary, were also quite fit; ditto two Rock Pipits of same age in the same aviary. Five Paradise Whydahs only turned out a few days previously, were also none the worse. My chief anxiety was for a brood of young Whinchats in a nest situated on the ground itself, these also were looking most cheerful, and have to-day (July 15th) left the nest. Although we have had rain almost every day since the commencement of June, I have not lost any young birds, either British or foreign, and have had no nests damaged, and I think this confirms the views I expressed recently.

W. G. Teschemaker.

P.S.—A full account of this thunderstorm may be found in to-day's "Western Morning News," and the young birds can be seen by any of your readers sufficiently interested in the matter.

Greenfinches Reared Solely on Mixed Seed.

Sir,—Is there anything unusual in the following way of rearing Greenfinches in an outside aviary? The parents are two of a total of 46 mixed British birds and Canaries. They build their nest in one of the bushes, and four eggs were laid, all being hatched out in due course. Naturally, it was impossible to put down any special food for the hen to feed her young, with all the others having access to it, so she simply got the usual mixed seed, and little hopes were entertained of the young being reared. To my surprise, however, they have thriven wonderfully, and are now eight days old, and doing remarkably well—this on mixed Canary seed only. Is this usual? I might add I read Cage Birds every week, from which I get all my information.

G. P. A. (Eccles).

[It is unusual, but probably only so because the average bird-keeper would never try the experiment as to whether the hen would rear the young solely on mixed seed, but would no doubt supply green-food of some kind. The Greenfinch is known to be the easiest of all British birds to breed in captivity, and the hens are invariably model mothers.—Editor.]

The Type of The Present-day Norwich Plainhead.

Sir,—Let us keep to the subject which is the "Champion" Norwich Plainhead. Mr. Woollard has checked his catalogue but he starts his wins at Class No. 7, whereas Nos. 1 to 6 were for the Champion Norwich Plainhead only. No. 7 is for Crests. The whole of these classes, 1 to 6, were won by birds from away. And in the open Non-Flighted Classes, which were four in number, three out of the four chief prizes left Norwich also, which more than proves what I have written before, that the Norwich breeders have not got the winning type. If the trouble calls forth such terms as prejudice and cowardice from Mr. Woollard, it must have hit him hard.

Novice.

Sir,—I don't see what British and foreign birds have to do with the above subject. To state that the Norwich breeders won 40 1sts in Crest, British and foreign doesn't convince one that they have better Norwich than there are outside the city. If you take the first ten classes, which alone are Norwich champion classes, and the only classes available for breeders of the variety outside, I find from Mr. Woollard's statement that only 1sts in classes 7, 9, and 10 remained in Norwich. Some of the other classes are for amateurs, and confined to the district, so can't be counted. I think that bears out "Novice's" argument so far as the Plainhead classes are concerned. I have just looked up a report of Norwich Show, which reads: "for a time the breeders of the bird in the city from which it takes its name got them too long in body, flights, and tail; they are now, however, very much improved in this respect." It is evident from that report that they are not all of the chubby type of Norwich.

The Clashing of Shows in Ireland.

Sir,—The fact is there are far too many shows in Ireland for the number of fanciers. If they are to have a success the same fanciers must show at all, which is more than working men who refuse to make a pleasure a toil can do. They are satisfied with showing at two or three fixtures any season in most cases. Holywood, Bangor, and Newtownards are only a few miles from each other, and one show instead of the three would be far better. It would relieve the present congestion. If Lurgan and the Holywood shows clash, it will be a great mistake, but I think Holywood should give way this time, seeing Lurgan has done so already to suit another Northern fixture. Should the undesired, however, happen, Lurgan, in my opinion, will get the principal support. No show ever existed in Ireland that was held in higher esteem than Lurgan, and though they have dropped out and had no show for two or three years, the fact still remains that Lurgan is one of the oldest open shows in Ireland, whereas Holywood is comparatively young, and part of that time a confined show. The Lurgan fanciers are determined to hold their show as arranged, so I trust Holywood can make a change and thereby get support.

Does Supplying Egg-shell Make Birds Egg-eaters?

Readers Say it Does Not.

Sir,—In reply to Mr. H. T. Fordred's letter in last week's Cage Birds, I might tell him that I have used egg shells mixed with sand for over three years, and have never had a bird eat its eggs yet. I have several friends who adopt the same method, and I have never heard them complain of any of their birds eating their eggs. With regard to Mr. H. T. Fordred's statement that he has heard of a case where birds have eaten their eggs, I can tell him he need not fear very much if he rolls the shells fine, and then thoroughly mixes them with the sand. I think the old saying is as true as it can be, that is "The proof of the pudding is the eating of it." Hoping this will convince you on the above-mentioned subject.

C. Oates.

Sir,—In reply to H. T. Fordred, I have used crushed egg shell since reading of its usefulness in Cage Birds two years ago, being able to get plenty of it. I sprinkle the clean sand well with it twice a week. The birds like it, but have never eaten their own eggs, and I have had 15 nests this season.

(Miss) E. Yalden.

Sir,—If Mr. H. T. Fordred baked his egg-shells and mixed them well with the grit, I am sure he need not have any fear that his birds will eat their own eggs. I never use anything else.

E. A. Kemp.

Sir,—In answer to the letter on supplying egg-shells to cage birds, I may say I have used nothing else this season, and have reared 38 young from five hens and three cocks, all Siefert Rollers, and have only had the third round of one hen, the remainder two rounds each. To prepare the egg-shells I wash them and dry well in the oven, and then I crush them with an ordinary ribbed jam-jar on a thick ash wood board, planed smooth. I have every thanks to offer Cage Birds, for it is to your paper that I owe all my good luck. I was at Wolverhampton three weeks ago and saw the light Mules that Mr. Singleton has, and that were remarked about in your paper last week.

CAGE BIRDS LEAGUE.

How to become an Associate.

Many readers of Cage Birds have written to say that they would like to join Cage Birds' League, but cannot afford the subscription. To meet their wishes we have decided to form, in connection with the League, a body of Associates. All we ask of these Associates is that they will promise to give every possible attention to the wants of their birds. And they must induce others to see that their birds are kept happy and contented.

All that the intending Associate has to do is to sign the coupon herewith, get five of his or her friends to sign each a similar coupon, and send the six, together with a penny stamp, to the Secretary of Cage Birds' League, who will forward by return an enamelled Button Badge of the League. There will be no other charge. NOW, THEN, BIRD LOVERS!—USE YOUR BEST EFFORTS IN THIS SPLENDID CAUSE.

THE BIRD LOVER'S PLEDGE.

I hereby promise to take every care of my feathered pets and to induce others to do the same.

A Cinnamon-marked White Canary.

Sir,—Perhaps it may interest some of your readers to know that I have got a young Canary perfectly white except for a Cinnamon "cap." It has pink eyes. I have never seen one like it in all my experience of nearly forty years. It came from a deep yellow cock, and a good coloured buff hen. In the same nest there are two yellows and a buff. This one is as white as chalk.

Bread and Milk Rears Thirty Young Canaries.

Sir,—It may be of interest to some of your readers to know I have so far successfully reared thirty young birds, Norwich and Rollers mostly on bread and milk, with sometimes a little Osborne biscuit and egg scattered on the top. In fact, I have never used less egg, and have not lost a single nestling. In one case, I gave a little Bovril and milk (invalid Bovril) to pull up the last hatched of a nest of three a little bit sweated by the mother and too lazily fed by the father. It succeeded well. When they are feathered, and leave the nest, the parents seem to have no patience to bring them up. In this case I took the three and fed them myself a day or two. Then three nice little Rollers would have died while the parents were playing round, so I took these and put the six all together in a cage, with the big Norwich father and mother. He at once began to feed not only his own three, but the three Rollers as well, and all are now picking up soaked seed, coarse oatmeal, bread and milk with a little bit of egg on the top. Two biscuits and half an egg for the bread and milk of six families I have used as a rule. I allow my birds to fly about the bird room, except when housekeeping. The young ones are shut together in a cage.

A Bird-lover's Enjoyable Trip to Arundel.

Sir,—On June 29th I went with the Aldwych Ramblers to Arundel. The majority of us made for Arundel Park, Mr. Garland acting as guide. We had a fine ramble through the park, then branching sharp off to the right of the main drive we encountered a very steep grass slope which led down to the prettiest lake it has ever been my lot to witness. A job some of us had to reach the bottom, too. Mr. Devis thought it safer to slide down on the part mother used to smack. Mr. Smith spotted a fine Raven, which appeared to be quite tame. The next bird we came across was a Magpie, and this was followed by many of the more common species. Down by the lake I caught sight of a fine Yellow Wagtail and several Greys and Pieds. On the opposite side, flittiug about in the rushes, was what looked like a small flock of Reed Buntings. At the water's edge we saw Yellow Buntings and quite a host of Chaffinches. All the birds seemed quite tame; in several cases we had to clap our hands to make them disperse. There was quite a large flock of Peafowl in grand plumage; plenty of Wild Duck, with young of all ages, and Moorhens uncountable, tiny chicks darting about in all directions—a pretty sight. In my opinion the prettiest sight of all awaited us in a tiny bay where a magnificent Swan, one of the largest I have come across, was to be seen, with two Cygnets about one week old. What a fine painting they would have made, floating on water about 12ft. deep, as clear as crystal, and reflecting from the sun the most wonderful colours. We were very reluctant to leave this ideal spot, but, time pressing, we passed from the park into a picturesque road lined with trees, a strip of grass and water. We made for the "Wheatsheaf," where an excellent dinner awaited us, after which some walked and others took train to Littlehampton. Bird life here was not so plentiful, but we saw several fine Shore Larks. We spent a most enjoyable day, with a nice little concert in the carriage coming home, Mr. Bustin rendering "Who Killed Cock Robin," 999 verses, which lasted from Arundel to London Bridge. Anyone interested in birds should certainly visit Arundel; a good long day for 3s. return (Cook's excursion), and plenty of room.

A Useful Rack for Nesting Material.

Sir,—The enclosed drawing shows side and front of a nesting material rack, which I have used to a great advantage, as it does not permit the stuff to fly about the room, and the birds seem to enjoy the pulling of the material from it, as it requires a little more energy than the ordinary nest bag. I first get a side of a cigar box and cut it three inches long, and then cut same from corner to corner, which gives me two sides, as Fig. A. Then I nail on the back a bottom of a cigar box four inches long. Make the wire front as Fig. B, and fix two wire hooks, as C, to hang it on the cage. It is simple to make, and the cost is nil. Dots D and E indicate where the wires for fixing the front go through the side. This is a useful rack where one has to have their birds in their living rooms.

The Bird to Banish Loneliness.

All about a Talking Parrot and its Management.

By Mrs. J. W. Ambler (Mapplewell, Yorks).

At the present time I happen to be the possessor of a fine, intelligent Blue-fronted Amazon Parrot. In my opinion nothing can come up to it either in sagacity or conversational powers, not even the much-praised Grey. I strongly recommend the Amazon for a lady's pet, being so easy to handle and tame.

A true Blue-fronted should in colour be a bright green, darker on the back and paler on the breast, with a bright blue head backed by yellow, and a bib of yellow, possess scarlet-tipped shoulders, and wings varying from royal blue and green to crimson. The eye should be round and full with a blackish pupil surrounded by an orange ring. It is interesting to note how the eye changes colour in anger or particular pleasure. A young one may be determined by means of its feet. The scales are hard and horny in a mature bird. You may give anything from 30s. up to £5 for a good Amazon, its value increasing according to its talking.

Kindness the Magic Key.

The Blue-front is homely in its habits, and when once its confidence is gained by its tutor nothing is too difficult for its imitation. Through kindness and careful handling I can do anything with my bird. She is a great pet, coming out on my hand, dancing for me, kissing me on my lips and even taking her bath near me, in the enamel bowl used on the sink. Hand-feeding goes a long way towards taming a Parrot, but once ill-treat, or cause them to distrust you in any way and they will never forget it, and all your good work is undone. They are naturally timid and distrustful, and possess particularly retentive memories.

One drawback is with regard to their dirt. If the voidings are allowed to remain long in the cage, they will sometimes eat them, and the dirt must be constantly removed until they are cured of the habit. The best plan is to have the grating bars in the bottom of the cage made narrow. I might say that this is the plan I have adopted. Another possible bad habit is that of feather pulling. This can be stopped by spraying Polly daily with quassia solution and giving attention to the diet (this being of the plainest) while a piece of stick may be given to the bird to whittle, therefore giving her something to take her attention. Empty cotton bobbins may also be given her to play with.

The best way to get Polly to talk well is to give her the things she is most fond of, talking to her all the while, with lots of fussing. A Parrot should be kept in the room in which the family lives, where it will hear plenty of conversation. Constant repetition is the surest method.

An Amazon is not so delicate as a Grey when once acclimatised. It is necessary to watch the diet, moult, cleanliness of cage and food vessels, and keep from the cold. Large roomy cages are necessary, and those free from brass are the safest. Mixed parrot seed should always be kept in its tin; boiled maize may be given sometimes, but this only keeps fresh for one day. Biscuits (plain), ripe fruit, nuts and a piece of cuttle-fish bone should also be given. No meat bones, tea-sops or table tit-bits must be allowed. If the voidings are at all watery a dose of Parrishs' Chemical Food must be given twice a week. If the reverse, use Dinneford's magnesia. The medicines may be soaked up with a little sponge cake, if Polly will not take them otherwise. Water should be given with its ordinary food. Too many "slops" are not good.

Special notice must be given to the nostrils. If the bird is in perfect health, these are quite dry; if damp or choked up, and the breathing is difficult, cold is there. Warmth is absolutely essential. Cover the bird up and dose with a little warm milk sop and touch nostrils with diluted glyco-thymoline, a very small quantity being used, as it is very strong. The nostrils will clear like magic and the breathing become normal.

To Banish that Lonely Feeling.

Constant scalding out of all food vessels is needful. Baths may be given in warm weather, lukewarm water, if necessary, to be used. Also in hot weather the bird may be hung outside, on the sunny side of the house but not in the full glare of the sun.

From a monetary standpoint the Parrot is no "catch," for no breeding can be done, therefore the value does not lie in how many nests can be reared in one season, but in the pleasure one gets from the intelligence and company of the bird. No one can feel lonely with a good talking Parrot in the house. My bird is so used to me that she will answer me back. I should like to relate a little incident here. We were at Leeds, and unknowingly left the back door open. The milkman knocked, and finding the door open walked through. Polly, who was up in the dining room shouted "Is that you?" he said. "Yes." All-right!" Poll shouted. So he got a basin out of the cupboard himself and measured the milk! Anyone can imagine our feelings when we returned!

What is the Earliest Age at which Canary Hens will Breed?

Remarkable Experiences at Morecambe.

Sir,—On Saturday last I accompanied our firm on their annual excursion to Morecambe. Whilst strolling along the front I heard my name called, and found myself shaking hands with an old friend, a Mr. Harrison, who has occasionally put me up when I have previously stayed in Morecambe. He informed me that he had heard so much about Canary breeding, and the pleasure it gives, that he had been tempted to try his hand, and apparently with remarkable results, for he said he had some young ones on the sticks, and the mother of them was bred this year! I thought he was "pulling my leg." However, he invited me to step into his motor car (he is a motor engineer by trade) and run across to his house, where, after renewing acquaintanceship with Mrs. Harrison, he conducted me to his bird-room. He informed me that he commenced last summer, but only had one nest (I forget what the results were). Just before Christmas he possessed one Yorkshire cock, and two hens and one cock Linnet, which were kept in the living room, and being a novice, and a "little bit keen" as he described it, he ran the two cocks to the two hens. On Jan. 7th the Yorkshire pair hatched out, and brought up three young ones, which proved to be a cock and two hens. I believe the hen paired to the Linnet hatched one, which died. Mr Harrison added to his stock, and commenced breeding in real earnest this season, and early in June, noticing that the two young hens, hatched in January were in good form, and calling to the cocks, he ran a cock bird to one of them. Two days afterwards she laid, and continued to lay until she had a full clutch of six eggs, all of which she hatched out, but although she proved a good mother, three of them died. The other three were fine, healthy youngsters, and about four weeks old when I saw them. He also paired up the other hen, but she only reared one. Now, I have read at different times of various records, but I do not remember hearing previously of a hen five months old bringing up young ones (her own). Can any of your readers beat this? This is not the only unusual experience Mr. Harrison has had, as his first round this summer (which was the best and most prolific), was brought up on nothing but plain white Canary seed. He was not then aware that it was considered necessary (?) to use egg food. He pointed out one old hen which had been given to him, and although nine years old, she has hatched and reared thirteen fine youngsters in three nests. Only one hen has been unsuccessful, and this did not have a fertile egg, so Mr. Harrison's son went out into the green fields and brought home three wild birds' eggs, which they set under her. Result: three fine young Greenfinches, in perfect feather and condition. The result of his first real season's breeding is over fifty young ones from four cocks and eight hens, all told, and they looked equal to producing another fifty. Mr. Harrison, though a novice, has some good ideas, or has received some good "tips" He recommends the use of chickweed for green food, and lets them have plenty of it, always taking care all the stale is removed before supplying them with new. He places as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny bit in the drinking water every morning for the hens. Please excuse me taking up so much of your valuable space, but I never came across similar results in all my experiences, and thought same would be of interest to your readers. No doubt many who read this will be visiting Morecambe before the season is over, and I am sure that Mr. and Mrs. Harrison will be pleased to show anyone the birds who care to call. Their address is 16, Devonshire Road, West End.

Another Good Word for the Buntings.

Sir,—I wish to thank you for prize money, which I received all right, as winner in the British bird section of your recent Essay Competition. I notice in this week's correspondence, Mr. H. W. Peck writes a very practical letter on four of our Buntings. These are birds which deserve more popularity than they at present enjoy. When one mentions Buntings to some fanciers, one hears such remarks as "Oh, they are no good," "too hard to steady," etc. I may say against such statements that I have two fine young cock Reed Buntings commencing to moult, which will come out of their cage and bathe themselves in a saucer of water placed on the floor, and return to their cage again without any trouble whatever. Of course, these birds were hand-reared by myself. Wishing your paper the success it well deserves. Robert Cobain.

The Problem of the Ticked Bird.

Metropolitan Norwich Fanciers Seeking Light.

Sir,—Could you through the medium of your valuable paper help to elucidate what seems to be a puzzle to many fanciers in the East End. At the last two shows I have attended, there have been very heated debates on some of the exhibits in the marked and variegated Norwich Plainhead classes—namely, as to what constitutes a mark. To make clear my meaning, I will quote an instance: At the East Ham Society's young stock show held July 13, a Norwich was exhibited in the marked and variegated class which had a mark on the breast fully the size of a shilling. It was, however, "wrong-classed" by the judge, which means that it should have been shown in the ticked class. Anyhow, that was the judge's opinion. As I have stated before, there was a keen discussion on the subject, a good few old fanciers taking part and disagreeing. I may mention that this same bird under another judge had been awarded a 3rd prize in the marked or variegated class quite recently. Now, things like these are especially confusing to the novice, and there is nothing so dissatisfying and discouraging as being "wrong-classed." If you could spare a little of your valuable space so that we could get to know what technical marks are necessary for these classes, I am sure you would be doing novices a good turn, and also settle the warm, though very friendly arguments, between the old fanciers. I wish Cage Birds the success it so well deserves.

Chas. Paynter.

[We think we are correct in stating that the specialist Norwich Plainhead Clubs have no official ruling upon the point in question. Many societies settle the matter for themselves by defining a ticked bird in their show schedules and those birds which do not conform to this definition must, of course, go into the marked or variegated classes. A commonly accepted definition of a ticked bird is that it shall be one showing a patch of dark plumage not larger than a sixpence, or one dark wing or tail feather.—Editor.]

To Keep Watercress and Other Green Food Fresh and Crisp.

The best way to keep watercress and all other green food sweet and fresh during very hot weather is to get a large flowerpot (a 10in. pot will do nicely), and plug the hole up with a cork. Then get a small jar and place the green food in it, with water. Stand this on the kitchen floor and place the flowerpot over it. By changing the water daily you will find you are able to keep the green food fresh and firm for a considerable time. Fanciers using this method will find they greatly benefit by it.—W. Burdett, 51, Dares Walk, Hinckley, Leicestershire.

Dummy Eggs from Dough.

I send you an idea for making dummy eggs. First get a teacup and half fill it with flour, then add enough water to make a stiff dough; having done this, take a bit of the dough the size of an egg and put a little cotton wool on it, and roll it the shape of an egg. Put in a cool place to dry when you have made enough from the dough, and you have got good dummy eggs when they have gone hard.—C. Lees (Derby).

When Moulting Britishers.

Every keeper of British birds, when possible, moults his birds in an outside aviary. Such fanciers cage them again two or three weeks before the show period, and often find great difficulty in getting them steady in time, particularly Goldfinches. An excellent method of procedure is to place the cage with the door fixed open in the aviary. The birds will invariably roost at night in the cages, in preference to the open aviary, and so used are they to their cages that, practically speaking, they take to them again quite naturally, and without damaging their flights against the wires, which has often spoilt many a good bird for the bench at the eleventh hour.—Albert G. Beer (Brondesbury, N.W.).

To Strengthen the Youngsters.

When young Canaries have started to feed themselves I find it a good plan to turn them loose in the birdroom for three or four weeks. Feed them well, and give plenty of fresh air, and as many baths as they will take. You will find that this makes them large and strong, and as hardy as Sparrows. They should be caged after three or four weeks, or they begin to get wild.—C. E. Gribbon (Belfast).

For Restless Hens.

If a piece of cardboard (say from 6in. deep by 3in. broad, or so) be fastened to the cage front in a position to screen the nest, you will find the hen will sit more keenly on the eggs during incubation. The cardboard can be removed the day before the eggs are due to hatch. This idea is to prevent the hen coming off the nest so much, and allowing the eggs to go cold, which causes "dead in shell."—C. Oates (Sheffield).

To Collect and Store Shepherd's Purse Seed.

Shepherd's Purse is the most useful wild seed we have, and now is the time to gather it. Cut the stalks off near the root, and when you have gathered a good quantity run the pods through the palm of the hand, holding same over a sheet of paper to catch the small seeds. When you have done this, get a small sieve and pass the seed through it to clear it of the pods. In this way you can gather 1lb. in half an hour. Put the seed on a tray and store in a dry place, or put it in the sun on a calm day; when quite dry put in a paper bag, and it is ready for use.—H. Hornblower (Dawley).

Country Rambles.

NORTHAMPTON FANCIERS FIND PLEASURE AND INSTRUCTION NEAR HOME.

The members of the Northamptonshire Hand-in-Hand C.B.S. on June 29th, by kind invitation, paid a visit to the lovely gardens and aviaries of Alderman Tomes, J.P. The weather being brilliant, the treat afforded the greatest possible pleasure to the members. Alderman Tomes's geniality and courtesy very soon made everyone feel quite at home. The photographer (Mr. Greenway, Abington Street) was at once set to work, and a picture taken from the spacious lawn. This being completed, Alderman Tomes accompanied the members to the aviaries, the first being the foreign bird aviary. The experience gained through a succession of years by careful study of bird life has enabled Alderman Tomes to form within his garden a very interesting and locally unique collection of the smaller home and foreign birds. His aviaries are of such dimensions that they afford the occupants sufficient space to lead a life of the nearest possible approach to natural existence. Their health and comfort are safely secured as far as human foresight, thought, and attention can extend, and every provision is made for their general happiness.

The situation of the foreign bird aviary has been carefully considered, together with its construction and internal arrangements. Facing the south, it has an outer play-ground covered with galvanised wire netting, shrubs in pots, and the head of a blackthorn, stand in the centre, with branches forming perches, and a gravel path runs round a grass lawn. Accommodation is provided for building homes and rearing progeny. The inner room, forming the "roost" is protected on three sides, east, west and north, by glass and brick walls; two sides are division walls to the conservatories, and are so arranged that if heat is required it is easily obtainable, and the more delicate specimens can find warmth when needed. This may account for the longevity of many of its inmates. They are watched with a fatherly care both by the owner and his gardener. The fixed periods of feeding are observed with clock-work precision. Many of the birds have become very tame, exhibiting no fear when their tenement is entered for the purpose of supplying water and refreshment. An aviary with proportions like the one under notice is of incalculable value where characteristics of the many families of birds that have come to our shores can be closely observed—a pleasure to the student and equally captivating to the amateur. The selection of tenants willing to lead peaceful lives gives no little concern to its kindly owner. Upon the arrival of a stranger, it is first confined for a short time in a roomy cage hanging on the aviary, giving it an introduction, as it were, to the other and older inhabitants, some of whom frequently fly to and cling to the outer wires, offering the "right hand of fellowship."

Before describing a few of the species one among the occupants commands instant attention, both by its clear ringing song and the beauty of its feathers—splendid in the bright sunshine—the Pekin Nightingale. The liveliness of this bird is remarkable. When in full form it will sing "almost incessantly for hours together," says Mr. Butlin, and the song more nearly resembles that of the Blackcap than that of any other British bird, but it is more rapid and frequently quite as loud as that of the Blackbird. Another resident which demands attention is the "King of songsters," no other than our summer favourite, the Nightingale. Many persons have frequently heard the glorious song of this modest and retiring bird, but have never caught more than a momentary glimpse of its form. But here it is in Alderman Tomes's aviary, and it has been there for a great length of time. In the spring time the "liquid notes" were heard in their full charm. It is impossible to give a description of the entire collection; I must simply mention a few of the birds. The American Blue Bird, of the appearance of our Robin, but excelling it in beauty of plumage, the Grass Parrakeets, (Budgerigars), Chestnut-breasted, Three-coloured, White-headed and Bronze Mannikins, Nonpariels and Indigo Buntings, Red-crested Cardinal, Madagascar Weaver, Cordon Bleus, Lavender Finches, Green Amaduvades, Orange-checked and St. Helena Waxbills, Pin-tailed Nonpariels, Gouldian, Diamond and Ribbon Finches, Black-headed Siskin, Zebra, Grey Singing, Green Singing and Saffron Finches and Combassous.

The next aviary was that of the British birds, which contained a great many species. There were the Corn, Reed, Cirl, Yellow and Snow Buntings, Gold, Bull, Bramble, Chaff, Green and Haw Finches. The latter bird was the admiration of all, and if put on the show bench would be a hard nut to crack, as also would many another in this collection. Close by this aviary hung a most beautiful Thrush and Blackbird, both looking in the pink of condition. These lovely creatures keep the whole neighbourhood ringing with song from daylight until dark. To watch the preparation of the various food is a study; the boiling of the eggs, the grating of raw carrots, the grinding of biscuits, the cutting up of raw bits of beef; then we have the mealworms, oranges, apples, bananas, etc., and the nuts that have to be cracked. We passed on to the aviaries of Pheasants, the Golden and the Silver Pheasants. Alderman Tomes was most sorry the old birds were just casting their coats, so that their beautiful plumage was lost for a time. The tail feathers the owner had kept for our inspection. Some Pheasants there were just hatched, and other young of an earlier date. Two pairs of these beautiful creatures are in our park, presented by Alderman Tomes.

Now we come to Canaryland. Our kindly host does not go in very largely for this bird. At the same time there is a loft set apart for them. In it can be seen a few very nice specimens. The Goldfinch Mule breeding this year has not been quite the success it might have been; still, Alderman Tomes means to try again. Since writing these lines, through some cause the whole of these Canaries have died. After viewing the beautiful gardens and conservatories, we found the time had all too quickly flown, and after a very hearty vote of thanks had been given Alderman Tomes for his most kindly entertainment, especially for the information that he so readily had given of his experiences in the birdy regions, we wished that gentleman the best of health and happiness. This brought a most enjoyable afternoon to its close, the worthy Alderman saying that he had enjoyed the treat quite as much as the members of the society.—A. W. Law, Sec.

Club Reports.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting, held July 6, Church Hall, Harrasterley, Mr. G. Barkus in the chair. Fair attendance of members. Decided that we have a guessing competition on the day of our show, and that the list of prizes for our annual draw lie over till next meeting. New member enrolled, Mr. Carlill. Pleased to hear the majority of our members are having a very successful season.—Lindsay and Marsh, Hon. Secs.

LONGTON AND DIS. C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, July 9th, Castle Inn, Mr. J. Bagshaw in chair, before a good attendance of members. Prize money and specials were paid out from first feather show, which was a great success. Arrangements were made to hold open show at Swan Hotel, one minute walk from the station; the room is well lighted and free from draughts, Mr. R. Ratcliffe, of Shelton, was elected a member. —Geo. Lea, Corres. Sec.

ROSSENDALE C.B.S.

General meeting, held July 2, Mr. Johnson of Bacup, gave a very interesting lecture on the Roller Canary, its song, how it was obtained, and the training of young birds. It was very pleasant and instructive, especially for the young fanciers. We take this opportunity of thanking Mr. Johnson for the able manner in which he gave his lecture. Mr. Heys, of Waterfoot, has kindly promised to give us a lecture on the Cinnamon, at the Commercial Hotel, Stacksteads, on August 13, at 7.30. Will all fanciers and members take note of the date.—H. Wantling, Hon. Sec.

EBBW VALE F. & F.S.

Annual meeting held July 9, when Mr. T. Smith took the chair. Balance sheet for 1911 read and confirmed. Election of officers: Chair, Mr. Thompson Smith; Vice-chair, Mr. R. Anthony; Treas., Mr. J. Jackson; Secretary, T. T. Tilby; Assist. Sec., F. H. Cook; Committee, The members. It was decided that until such time as there was a working capital, the annual subs. be 2s. 6d., and 6d. per quarter extra. Also decided to hold two members' shows this year, in Sept. and Dec. A hearty invitation is given to all local fanciers to become members. Next meeting at Gwalia, July 23rd, 7.30 p.m.—T. H. Tilby, Sec.

SALFORD.

First general meeting, held July 7th, at Headquarters, Boat House Hotel; a good attendance of members. Chairman, Mr. H. Cootes. The balance sheet for the year was read, and showed a financial loss on the present system under the affiliation rules, and it was decided to withdraw from the affiliation and have a series of contests to benefit the novices. First contest July 20. Following officers were elected, and they will make every effort to further the club's interest in the future, as we are assured of new members. Pres. and treas., Mr. H. Cootes; secretary, B. Wharton; committee, E. Hickman, G. Bate, J. Green, J. Godson, J. Caswell, N. Smedley.—B. Wharton, Sec.

LIVERPOOL B.B.A.

Monthly meeting held Oldham Hall, July 13th, Mr. F. Handley in the chair. Minutes were adopted and 4 new members elected and one nominated. It was suggested we have novice classes at our old show in November. Afterwards we had our second night nest feather show, 74 birds being entered, which brought out some really good young, especially in the clear classes, which were judged by Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, who got through in good time, which allowed plenty of time for the members to look over them afterwards. We had the best attendance we have had for some time, there not being enough seating room. One of our members promised a medal for most points gained in Border classes, all points to count. A vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Metcalfe for judging.—J. Lloyd.

WALKLEY C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held St. Philip's Mission Hall, Westmorland St., July 8, Mr. T. Riddle in the chair, supported by the vice-chairmen, J. G. Cowley and G. Butler. The most interesting feature of the evening was a lecture on colour feeding by Mr. W. T. Furniss, who handled the subject in grand style, giving the various methods used by himself when moulting, making several changes in his diet during the week, sometimes using egg, at other times banana, etc. At the close a great number of questions were asked. Several other members gave their methods. A vote of thanks to Mr. Furness was carried unanimously. These lectures seem to be the life of a society which, like ours, contains a good proportion of novices. A letter was read from the Vicar, asking our increased support towards the rent of the room, so we decided to grant £1 as a special donation. Members are invited to join the Sheffield C.B.S. in a ramble on Saturday, July 20, to Bradford. Meet at train terminus, Malin Bridge, at 2.30. Next meeting, table show, 9 classes. Birds staged at 7.45 sharp. Bring your last round, and make this as great a success as our June show. Will members bring ticket money for Nest Feather show. Prize money was paid out at the meeting.—C. Tomlinson, Sec.

YORKSHIRE COUNTY S.B. & M.C.

Meeting at Market Tavern, July 6th, Mr. W. Cowgill (Vice-president) in chair, as Mr. F. Archer (President) was prevented coming owing to business. Present, Messrs. Cowgill, Chittenden, Towers, Halliday, Jowett, Ross, Parkin, Inman and Hammond. Minutes were passed and letters commented upon and answered; also the resignations of Mr. F. F. Potter, Hull, and Mr. J. Taylor, Haworth, through business. We elected a member, Mr. Gomersal, of Morley. The following shows have the patronage (one or two who applied unfortunately clashed): Oct. 12, Leeds, Judge, J. H. Roe; Nov. 1 and 2, Sheffield, C. Houlton; Nov. 8 and 9, Halifax; Nov. 16, Bradford East, H. Battye; Nov. 23, Horton Good Intent, C. A. House; Nov. 27, Whitby; Nov. 30, Harrogate, W. Mundell; Dec. 26, Malton. Proposed by Mr. Chittenden, seconded Mr. Inman, That it is left to Secretary to arrange classification for shows mentioned where needs. Members please note, they must show at not less than five shows to compete for prizes. The handbook it was proposed to leave in the hands of the Secretary. Mr. C. Rose proposed, seconded by Mr. Parkin, that prizes for coming season were, 1st, 25s.; 2nd, 12s. 6d.; and 3rd, 5s., in each section, and CAGE BIRDS' prizes in addition. We had another donation from our friend, Mr. Chittenden. This was one of the best and most business-like meetings the Club has ever had. There seems to be a lot of talk about Bullie Hybrids this season, and it is to be hoped they won't be too common. It was a pleasure to see the subs. rolling in as they did.—J. Lane, Hon. Sec.

ANNFIELD PLAIN

Monthly meeting, held July 6, only a fair attendance. This is not much encouragement for secretary and assist. secretary, Mr. Archer, who is indeed a hardworking fancier. Now, ye members, pull together. I want a record time this January. We have some very important work now, re making up of schedule, and we want your views. I require all duplicates and unsold tickets, including cash, on or before August 17. I know some of you have done well, and those members who have any on hand will oblige by selling them. Nothing venture, nothing have. Special of 2s. 6d. to the member who sells most. Table show, held same night, G. Lane, Hutchinson, and Williams, principal winners, some grand birds being staged. Next meeting Railway Hotel, August 3.—J. W. Christon, Sec.

STRATFORD & E. LONDON F.S.

Meeting held July 11th, a good muster of members being present. Judges (for evening show July 25th, 8 to 10 p.m., admission free) were elected: Cage Birds, A. J. A. Marley, Esq. New members elected: Messrs. W. Marshall, R. T. Vicars, Master Roland Arnold, and W. T. Bailey. Several good specials were promised for the show. It was proposed and seconded that the cage birds be staged between 6 and 6.30 p.m., the judge having a meeting to attend later the same evening. Any fancier joining now can compete at young stock and annual shows. This old-established society (founded 1888) owns its own pens and staging, and meets in one of the best halls in East London, and has sixteen handsome challenge cups. The membership is open; subs., 3s. per year. Entry fee, 1s.—W. Maxey, Hon. Sec.

NORTHERN CREST CLUB.

Meeting held Lockhart's Cafe, Newcastle, July 3rd. Present, Messrs. Robson, Swan, Risehorough, Armstrong, Dobson and Son, Bewick, Scott, McColl, Coutts, Gillespie, and Hutchinson. Mr. T. Robson presided. Classification for our open show was arranged: 16 classes for Crests and Crest-breds, so that exhibitors can look forward to us having a good show on New Year's Day. It will be a one-day show, birds to be staged by 9 a.m., and show to close at 8 p.m., so that exhibitors from a distance will have their birds sent off by trains that will get them home early following morning. Mr. J. Clark (Sunderland) was elected judge. Agreed to pay £1 per class, viz., first 10s., second 5s., third 3s., fourth 2s. If less than seven entries in any class only half prize money, so it is to be hoped that the Crest men will avail themselves of this splendid opportunity and send an entry that will leave no reason for half money to have to be paid. Entrance fee, 1s. 6d.; members, 1s. Admission from 9 a.m. till 1 p.m., 6d.; from 1 p.m. till close, 3d.—J. G. Hutchinson, Hon. Sec.

SOUTH BIRMINGHAM O.S.

Usual monthly meeting held July 10th, Sydenham Hotel, before splendid gathering. Messrs. Everitt and Austin were elected as members, which brought the total to 60, which announcement was received with loud applause. The secretary presented balance-sheet of the first young bird show; balance to society, 9s. He thanked members for the splendid support and hoped Judge Roe on the 20th would have an even larger display. Decided to have winter members' show at headquarters. The committee having gone into the objection of Mr. Dipple to the bird of Mr. de Maillett's having been in wrong class, it was resolved to hold to the rule that the judge's decision be final, and the class and result remain as placed. At the same time they hoped all members in doubt as to the correct class would not place a number on the entry form, but describe the bird and leave the show managers to enter same. The risk of guessing the number was too great, and would cause mischief if bird or birds happened to be incorrectly numbered or classed. Paying out of the specials and prize money was then dealt with.—J. Sheppard, Sec.

GLASGOW WEST END C.B.C.

Monthly meeting, held in Co-operative Hall, St. George's Cross, on July 5, Mr. C. Campbell presiding over a fair attendance. Two letters from Glasgow and District C.B.A. were read, one on the much discussed Points Competition, held at their open show last new year. One of the awards in this competition was disputed by Glasgow West End C.B.C. on the ground that, according to the rules governing said Points Competition, the young Yorks. classes were not allowed to count for points (in other words, "specialist clubs" were debarred). There were confined to the members of the Y.C.C. of Scotland, which is purely and solely a specialist club. Therefore they ought not to have been allowed to count for points. After long negotiations re above-mentioned points competition, Glasgow and District refused to consider this matter any further, so Partick C.B.S. got the rose bowl, but Glasgow West End C.B.C. have won the honour. The other letter was expressing regret at the so-called unfortunate mistake that had been made in omitting to invite the above club to send delegates to their, the Glasgow and Dis. C.B.A., meeting, and asking us to appoint two or three of our members to act on committee. Decided not to appoint any member of above club to act as such. After discussing part of the annual show business, the meeting closed.—Wm. Proudfoot, Secretary and Treasurer.

S. WALES & MON. FEDERATION.

Third meeting held Market Vaults, July 13th, Mr. D. A. S. Longden (Swansea) presiding. Mr. Norris Sair, who attended the meeting to see how things were getting on, gave his financial help by becoming Vice-President. The gentlemen who have already consented to act as Vice-Presidents are Mr. J. H. Bant (Cardiff), Mr. W. G. Camden (Swansea), Mr. Ernest Ll. Simon (Pembroke), and Mr. H. Buckley Roderick (Barry Port). The Secretary will be pleased to receive the names of any gentlemen who are in sympathy with the good work attempted to be done and who will become Vice-Presidents. Decided that affiliated societies be asked to contribute 5s. each towards the purchasing of four cups, one each for poultry, pigeons, cage birds, and the fur section, to be competed for by members of all shows of affiliated societies who have subscribed the said 5s. Members gaining most points throughout the season will win the cup. This will no doubt considerably increase the number of entries. A gentleman is also giving a gold medal at Abertillery show for best exhibit by a member of an affiliated society. The Federation is therefore very much alive. Up to now it has been the means of preventing six societies from clashing. There are now about 22 societies affiliated, 15 having paid their affiliated fees. The Secretary would be much obliged if other societies would send on their fees at once, so as to insert names and dates in book of rules, which will shortly be printed. In this will also be allotted a page for names of local judges and their addresses. These will be inserted at the nominal fee of 2s. 6d. Next meeting at Cardiff, same time next month. The Secretary, Mr. A. A. Gordon McLucas, 48, Rosser Street, Maesycoed, Pontypridd, will be pleased to give any information required.

GT. HORTON (Good Intent) O.S.

F.F. show, July 13; Congregational Schools. Mr. E. B. Denton judged to the general satisfaction. CL. TKD. YELL.: 1, Hooson; 2, Sharp; 3, Morley; 4, Pedder. WATFORD C.B.S.

Annual F.F. show, held Conservative Hall, Clarendon Road, July 10. Despite the very poor breeding season experienced, there was a very nice show, some 120 birds being staged. Norwich were a very fine lot. Yorks. and Crests were not up to standard, but quality was extra good. Miss Hewat's Crest, which secured cup for the best young bird in show, should be heard of again. British were not numerous, but most of the winners have held their own in open competition. The special for the best hardbill was won by W. Buckingham's noted Goldfinch; best softbill, Mr. J. Goodall, with a good Reed Bunting. The foreign seedeaters' class was the best class ever seen in Watford, and gave the judge a trying time. The foreign special was won by Mr. Watts' noted Queen Whydah. The hon. secs., Mr. Rackley, and assist. sec., Mr. Quantrell, and an excellent committee of workers, worked with a will which did them much credit. Mr. Robson judged and gave entire satisfaction.

ALNWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Nest Feather table show, when some exceedingly good birds were staged, which gave Mr. A. Dippie (Morpeth) a deal of trouble to place, but he again succeeded in giving every satisfaction. In the Mule section some extra good birds were exhibited. The winner (a Dark Linnet) exhibited by Mr. W. Straughan, shows great promise, having plenty size and style. A notable feature in the Borders were several good greens shown by Mr. F. C. Rennison, who is fast coming to the front. The Norwich provided the winner of the special for best bird, Mr. Rennison, with a very fine yellow cock, which was pressed home very closely by another good yellow, the property of Mr. W. Miller. ANFIELD, EVERTON & DIS. C.B.S

First annual F.F. show, July 13th, in the Mission Hall, Binleigh Road. This is well adapted for a show, very roomy, well lighted and ventilated. This society is making marvellous progress; not quite a year old, it has 150 members. The secretary, Mr. R. B. Wright, is very enthusiastic, and the manner in which he has worked up the society is deserving of all praise. He has broken all records for this district in the way of specials for the season of four shows. The platform was like a jeweller's shop! It is a decided move in the right direction to let the members see what they have to compete for. The show of birds was the best seen in the Liverpool district for a long time, the entry of over 150 being a record for recent years, and although the majority of the birds were shown by novices, (many of them showing for the first time), the quality was above the ordinary, and shows what the novices have when they have the courage to put them on the show bench. Some hundreds of fanciers visited the show, many of them actuated by curiosity, as the doings of this society have caused a good deal of comment. Nothing but praise was heard. Mr. Geoff Benson judged, and generally speaking was happy in his awards.

YORKS., CL., YELL. (8): 1, Plunkett, lovely col. and position, extra good; 2, Crow, another good one, rather stout; 3, Wrightley. QUEEN'S PARK (Glasgow) C.B.S.

First Feather show in the Marie Stuart Hall, July 6, when over 60 birds were staged. Considering the bad season some of our members had experienced, the entry was excellent, and many fine specimens were exhibited. The awards were placed by Messrs. Sloan and Craig, who gave entire satisfaction. A fine Goldie Greenie hybrid was shown by Mr. Robert Jeffrey, of Govanhill, and should he be fortunate enough to preserve its life it should make a name for itself on the show bench. The awards were as follows:—

BOOKS THAT HELP TO SUCCESS.

Written by experts from practical experience, they demonstrate fully how success is to be obtained in the hobby of bird-keeping.

"OUR CANARIES."

By CLAUDE ST. JOHN (general expert to "Cage Birds,") assisted by over 100 of our present-day leading Breeders and Exhibitors.

Edited by C. A. House and G. E. Weston.

The Greatest Encyclopedia on Canaries ever Published.

Superbly illustrated by H. Norman.

There are Thirty-two Coloured Plates, Thirty-two Art Plates and over a hundred sketches. The whole ground covered, and the work is

15/- Carr. Paid. On full week's approval.

BRITISH BIRD MANUAL.

By H. Norman. Published complete, 190 pages 7ins. by 5ins., bound in cloth, and also in two parts—"Hardbills" and "Softbills." This latest and most up-to-date manual on British birds has been written and illustrated in colours, and black and white by "Cage Birds" artist-in-chief, Mr. H. Norman. The author, who has made a life study of the subject, gives in these volumes information and hints of the utmost value to all keepers of British birds. Part 1, "HARDBILLS," deals with the Finches, their keeping, feeding, showing, etc.; and Part 2, "SOFTBILLS," Blackbirds, Thrushes, Larks, Buntings, etc. Price 1/- per part, post free 1/1. Complete Manual 2/3.

CANARY BREEDING FOR BEGINNERS.

By Claude St. John. An intensely practical handbook for beginners at Canary Breeding. It contains 116 pages 7in. by 5in., and profusely illustrates innumerable hints. In this book the reader is instructed how to pair up the stock birds, how to cage and feed them, how to test the eggs, what to do when the young birds are hatched, and so on until the birds are old enough to be put on the show bench. Interesting from cover to cover, it is by far the best 6d. handbook on the subject ever published. Price 6d., post free 7d. Cloth bound 1/2.

"CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS."

This great work is written by CHARLES HOULTON, an authority with a reputation extending over 25 years as winning exhibitor and a leading expert and judge (associate editors, G. E. Weston and C. A. House).

Magnificently Illustrated by that great bird artist, H. NORMAN.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates in this work. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID. Every plate shows the correct colour the correct shape, the present day type and general characteristics of a modern Hybrid.

YORKSHIRE CANARIES.

How to Breed, Manage, and Exhibit.

By H. W. Battye, past President of the Yorkshire Union. It deals fully with the Yorkshire Canary and its sub-varieties, and should be in the hands of every breeder. It gives the fullest instruction upon pairing, breeding, moulting, exhibiting, and how to treat both in health and disease. Illustrated by Messrs. H. Norman and A. J. Simpson. Price 1/-, post free 1/1½.

THE SECRETS OF HYBRID BREEDING REVEALED AND EXPLAINED.

By many Notable Mule and Hybrid Breeders. Among the contributors are such well-known breeders as Messrs. R. Colton, W. H. Vale, C. Houlton, C. J. Ward, J. Beswick, C. Lander, T. H. Kinch, T. Smith, etc. This handbook, which contains 212 pages, 7in. by 5, is brimful of the most practical information on the highly interesting subject of Hybrid breeding. Being written by successful breeders, it is quite invaluable to everyone who would also be successful in his hobby. Price 1/-, post free 1/2.

NORWICH CANARIES.

By C. A. House. The latest and most practical manual on this popular variety of Canaries. It tells the fancier all that he needs to know to enable him to become successful as a breeder and exhibitor of the Norwich Plainhead. The chapters on "Forming a Stud," and "How to Produce the Ideal," are worth the cost of the whole book many times over. Price 1/-, post free 1/1.

FOREIGN BIRDS FOR BEGINNERS.

By Wesley T. Page, F.Z.S., etc. A most useful manual for all keepers of Foreign Birds. In it will be found indispensable information of an entirely practical nature—by a life-long specialist—on the keeping and feeding of the more common and popular varieties of foreigners. It contains illustrations in colour, and black and white, of some of the well-known species, and should be purchased without delay by all fanciers who go in for this most interesting branch of bird-keeping. Price 1/-, post free 1/1½.

CAUGHT NAPPING!

This novel and clever photograph depicts an Alexandrine Parrakeet slyly inspecting his two furry chums who are enjoying "forty winks" in the cosy interior of their mistress's work-basket.

DAINTY DENIZENS OF AUSTRALIA.

ALWAYS USE OUR DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting question of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

APPLIANCES.

ONE of the finest books ever offered to keepers of British and Foreign birds and Canaries is now offered at 1/8 and 2/3. This is "Aviaries, Birdrooms, and Cages," the cheaper edition in stiff cover, the other bound in cloth gilt. This thoroughly practical work, by H. Norman, with innumerable sketches and photographic plates, is a boon to fanciers, and will save pounds. If you want to make your own cages or aviary, you simply must have this work; if you wish to buy them, it will enable you to get absolutely the best for your birds at the least possible expense. "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages," with appendices on Cage-making, and the keeping of Foreign Birds in Aviaries, 1/8 and 2/3 post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

"STANLEY" BIRD FOODS (Note gilt Match-box). Bird foods, as supplied by Nature, are composed entirely of living tissue. Whether it is fruit, herbage insect, or seed, birds live entirely upon living tissue. To keep birds as healthy as they are in a natural state we must supply them with this living tissue. "Stanley" Bird Food supplies the want, and all birds like it. When sending birds to shows, put in the show cage a little of this food; it revives and strengthens birds after the journey, and they are soon seen at their best. The best birds always win if supplied with this food, because they so quickly recover from the upset of travelling, and before judging time. Remember! this food does not turn sour, and is the acme of perfection in bird foods. Good alike in the breeding and show seasons, and as cheap as a good food can be, it beats egg food at every point. To bring this food to the notice of all fanciers I will give (for a short time only) to every purchaser of 1½ lbs. a free present of a silver plated match box and stamp case (combined). Send early to avoid disappointment. Sample tin 7d. post paid, ½-lb 1/3, 1½-lb 2/6, 5lbs. 8/9; all post paid. Prepared by the winner of "Cage Birds" competition, May, 1912: Address, "Stanley" Bird Foods, 212, Rookery-rd., Handsworth, Birmingham.

HARRY ALLEN, THE ORIGINAL LINNET KING

Please read what others say. 26, Kimberley-road, Dysons-road, Edmonton. Dear sir,—Bird arrived safe, and am well satisfied with same.—W. Phillips, to H. Allen. "Victoria Cottages, Mauchline. Dear, Sir.—I received Linnet quite safe, and in good condition.—Yours sincerely, Wm. Blank, to H. Allen." "30, Harcourt Place, Rhymney. Dear Sir,—I received bird safe, and I am very well pleased at having such a fine bird. You can rely upon my word for doing all I can for you.—Yours sincerely, W. Crump, to H. Allen." Linnets from the same place as the champion Linnet of the world. They make the gamest Linnets ever carried to a contest for length turns and size; they stand alone, and for voice they have no equal. This class of bird has won the English Derby, and the world's greatest contests; they are at working men's prices, 1/-, 1/6; real gems, 2/-; new cages, with any of the above 1/- and 1/6 extra; a few Linnets, singing grand, with new cage and my book of secrets taught by the champion Linnet of the world, a treat to hear, 3/6, and a few extra gems, 4/6. I defy any dealer in the world to supply the same for the money. Very large cock Hawfinches, 4/6; German cock Canaries, singing grand, 4/6; hundreds of British and foreign birds in stock, no waiting; P.C. before birds. Only honest dealing done with me, so send to your old friend: Harry Allen, Bird Specialist and Judge, City Aviaries 40, Beckett-st., Leeds.

of priceless information. Such is the matter in "Nutshells" 25 and 26, which cover the whole of the groundwork so far as softbills are concerned. There are certain materials indispensable for the proper keeping of the more delicate of the insectivorous birds. What these are, "Nutshell" No. 25 tells you, and afterwards goes very fully into a very important subject—hand-rearing. The author, H. J. Fulljames then describes all the favourite varieties in a delightfully clear and helpful manner, showing which best repay the care spent upon them. It is safe to say that everything that is anything is dealt with in one or the other of the booklets, and readers will not be long in picking up the hints. Notice! The breeding of mealworms is described and instructions as to the gathering of ants' eggs given. For the most complete instruction on British softbills, and the foods and appliances needful, if they are to be kept in perfect health, get "Nutshells" 25 and 26, post free, 5d. the two, from The Publisher, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C., or from any of our agents. BOOKLET FREE.

Finest Talking Parrots. I only deal in Parrots that will make first-class talkers; no rubbish. I am willing at all time to send my Parrots on four week's trial and three months' talking guarantee. Why? Because all my Parrots are young, strong, and reliable. My lifetime has been spent among Grey Parrots, both at home and abroad. I guarantee every customer every satisfaction. Grey Parrots are my special fancy. I have trained them, know their wants, and can give every purchaser a bird that will please him in every way. I can supply grey talkers, not thinkers, that will say almost anything, at reasonable prices. Before you purchase a grey or green Parrot, send for my Booklet, entitled "Talking Parrots." All my birds are sent on four week's trial, at my risk. Send postcard for catalogue.—Mrs. Forster, Princes Park Aviaries, Violet Street, Liverpool.

solved. For full proofs send postcard at once for my large book, "Parrot Prattle." This is the most wonderful book ever offered free of all charge to all Parrot fanciers. (This "Parrot Prattle" is registered copyright, and all Infringers and imitators will be proceeded against). It contains hundreds of testimonials from all parts with full names and addresses, many interesting facts, and gives valuable advice and hints to all Parrot buyers. Full details of our original system of selling Parrots on four weeks' trial, at our risk, which we were the first to introduce. We sell Parrots of all descriptions on four weeks' trial, at our risk, before settlement. Cheapest and best in the Kingdom, and any Parrot sold by us and not giving full satisfaction, will be exchanged any time within twelve months. Remember we lead and others try to follow. Write to other dealers as well as us, and judge for yourselves. Lists of Parrots for sale and above book post free on receipt of postcard. Telephone No. 40 Morecambe.

The Shows.

TONBRIDGE F.A.

First annual radius show, held Old Drill Hall, July 17. Entries came up well, considering the 10 mile limit. Mr. Scarsbrook judged.

NOR: 1, Richards; 2, 3, Smithers. NOR. 1912: 1, Creed; 2, 3, Richards; 4, Smithers. YORKS.: 1, Creed; 2, Turley; 3, Cross; vhc, Lord; hc, Read. YORKS 1912: 1, 3, Bellchambers; 2, Lord; vhc, Cross. GOLDIE or BULLIE: 1, Mrs. Fincham; 2, Cross; 3, Smithers. LINNET, ETC.: 1, Cox; 2, Cross; 3, Creed.—P. Stonestreet, Sec.

RUGBY.

The Rugby fanciers held their show on July 17, in the Town Hall, the room provided being very suitable. In our section the entries came up poorly, unfortunately many classes being cancelled. The secretary of the cage bird section, Mr. E. W. Easton, had things well in hand, and proved an able official. Mr. T. Gilbert (Coventry) judged, and his awards seemed generally approved.

NOR., UNFLIG. (9): 1, Hall, nice short, thick set bird, good colour and condition, well carried wings; 2, 3, Supt. Clarke, both cl. yellows, leader a little the stoutest, looks like making a good one, short wings and tail, 3rd, nice feather, trifle longer, but not much to choose between them; vhc, hc, Mrs. Marshall; c, Veasey. UNFLIG. HEN (9): 1, Mrs. Marshall, nice quality, good colour, very typical and neat exhibit; 2, Clarke, buff ticked, good quality, fair size, nice neat wings and tail, if it had been washed it might have won; 3, White, cl., yell., very good quality and shape, but a trifle small; vhc, Marshall; hc, White; c, James. GOLDFINCH, ETC. FOREIGN (6): 1, c, Beet, charming long-tailed Whydah, in superb condition, easy win; 2, vhc, hc, Mrs. Marshall, pair Java Sparrows, in splendid condition, well shown; 3, Davies, Diamond Finch, in nice feather. Mr. G. Hall won sp. for best Nor., Supt. Clarke special for best exhibit by member.

GWENNAP.

The Gwennap Horticultural Society held their annual show on July 18th, in ideal weather. The entries came up well considering the moulting season is so close at hand. The winning yell. Norwich is a grand bird full of quality and colour. Mule classes were good, but very small, and the winner here captured the special for best bird in show. The winning Goldie is a gem, with a lovely scarlet blaze. The foreign classes were good, and the King Parrot was a beauty, in lovely fettle. The secretary, Mr. Leverton, had everything ready for the judge in good time, and this being his first year we must heartily congratulate him on the way he carried out his duties. Mr. Medlyn (Falmouth) judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction.

NOR., CLEAR (9): 1, spl, vhc, Pascoe, yell., gem for quality, nice head and neck, good wings; 2, Williams, buff, good type and quality, nice size and colour; 3, hc, Sherman, yell., not so good in colour, fine type, grand wings; c, Ferrill. TICK, ETC. (6): 1, Kemp, tick neck, yell., excellent type and quality, very nice wings and tail; 2, Pascoe, variegated, yell., lovely colour and quality, good type; 3, vhc, Williams, buff marked, very neat, nice wing carriage; hc, Sherman; c, Collins. NON-FED (6): 1, Rowe and Richards, cl. yell., fine type and quality, splendid wing carriage; 2, Williams, tick neck yell., very good colour, excels in head and neck; 3, Sherman, tick head and neck buff, very young, promising; vhc, Uren; hc, Kemp; c, Francis. YORKS. (Amalg.) (5): 1, spl, 2, vhc, Rowe and Richards, yell., non-fed leading, good length, nice wings and tail; 2nd, buff, well braced wings, good legs; 3, Richards, cinn., good colour, well carried wings; hc, Sherman. CREST OR C.B. (3): 1, withheld; 2, Ward, even-mkd. Dark Crest, nice feather, good bird; 3, Sherman, yell. Crest, lovely condition; vhc, Rowe and Richards. A.O.V. (4): 1, Sherman, yell. cinn., good type and quality, nice size; 2, Richards, Scotch Fancy, good head and shoulders, carries tail well under; 3, vhc Barnicott, cinn., nice colour and quality; hc, Kemp. GROUP (5): 1, spl, 3, Ferrill, 1st grand, even lot of Nor., good type and quality; 2, Pascoe, nice lot, fine quality and condition; vhc, Sherman; hc, Rowe and Richards. DERBY C.B.S.

F.F. Show was held July 13th, in the club-room of the Blue Bell Inn, Melbourne, kindly lent by the host, Mr. Burton. A number of Derby fanciers and friends journeyed over by brake and greatly enjoyed the journey on such an ideal summer day. The exhibits included some of the best young birds bred in Derby and district, and competition was keen. In connection with the show was a prize drawing for two Norwich Canaries and cages. Winning numbers, 934 and 297. The draw was to help the club out of its debt, which was wiped out. Mr. J. H. Drakeley, of Derby, made the awards and gave general satisfaction. The show arrangements were in the hands of the secretaries, Messrs. Wharam and Bamsey, and the Melbourne arrangements were carried out by Messrs. Baker, Pass, and York.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.' MEMBERS SEE THE AVIARIES OF THE RAJAH OF SARAWAK.

The annual outing took place July 20th, when a large number of members journeyed by motor to Cirencester. Unfortunately, the afternoon was stormy, and the beautiful scenery en route was partially hidden by a thick mist. Arriving at Cirencester, a short stroll round the town was taken till tea time. After a substantial meat tea, the company adjourned to Chesterton House, where, by the kindness of the Rajah of Sarawak, they were enabled to inspect the private museum and fine range of aviaries. The latter consist of ten compartments, with large wire flight, and a sleeping shed at the back. As it was a dull evening, many of the birds had already retired to roost, but amongst those noticed were Napoleon and Madagascar Weavers in lovely colour, chattering Lories, Blue Macaws, Red ditto, Rosellas, Red-cheeked Parrots, Indian Ringnecks, Indian Cissa, Budgerigars, Lovebirds, Bluefronted Amazons. In another aviary a slender-billed Cockatoo was recognised as one the Rajah bought at Cheltenham show last year. Upon the return to Cirencester, the motors were tuned up for the run back to Cheltenham, which was safely reached about 1 o'clock.—A. S. Treasure, Sec.

SHEFFIELD ORNITHOLOGISTS WITH ROD AND LINE.

The first annual week-end outing and angling match in connection with the Sheffield O.S. took place July 15th, to Upwell, near Wisbech. The weather was at its best on leaving Sheffield, and the journey, although a long one, is through most interesting country. Arriving at Wisbech, we at once secured conveyances to take us the six miles' journey to Upwell. We had not proceeded far before we were riding between the orchards this lovely country is noted for, and what a glorious time the Blackbirds were having amongst the raspberries and currants—several capable of securing premier honours at the Palace were spotted! Arrived at our cottage, we were ready for the good things that awaited us. Our motto was early to bed and early to rise, and this we fulfilled to the letter. Having made arrangements with our friend the boatman for an early start, on Monday morning at 3 a.m. all rest was over. Judge of our surprise when we saw scores of the gentler sex, young and old, making their way to the orchards to pick the fruit. We were told they work from daybreak to dusk during the fruit season. The Middle Level Drain was reached by 4 a.m., and between then and 9 a.m. we had not a spare moment. Some lovely fish were landed by every rod, bream being chiefly the victims, Friend Fletcher accounting for six from three to six lbs. each. A fine roach was landed nearing 2 lbs. and another 1 lb. 7 ozs. Then one of the party landed a nice Willow Warbler, but it turned out to be a willow blade! Time was getting near for us to meet the contingent making the journey on the Monday morning, who through business could not get away for the week-end. What a lovely country, and what a grand day made up our greeting. Having reached the river-side again, and inspected the morning catch, we decided to fish our match in punts at 2.30. We now had a look for bird life till the time arranged, and were soon rewarded. A bonny Tree Creeper was seen hunting round and round a fine old tree, Chaffinches by the score, and on the top branch of nearly every tree the Yellow Bunting was singing. The Skylark, too, could be heard and seen, almost every second. The Linnet—I should think there are thousands—could be heard in every hedgerow, and even the old cock Sparrow, with his black bib and rich brown back, looked pretty to observe. We could not realise he was the same species that has a bath of soot in our own Sheffield back-yards. The Redpoll and Greenie too, were always welcoming us. The time drawing near, we make for the boats, and enjoy the row for fully a mile down the river to a spot that had not been fished for some time, and so favoured no one. Friend Ward calls "Time," and all are eager for the first bite, which fell to the lot of Mr. J. Mace. But the heat of Old Sol was terrible, almost unbearable; the fish would not bite, but the flies did! Time is called at last, and your humble topped the list with 12½ ozs., also winning special prize for returning most fish alive; J. Mace, 2nd, 10 ozs.; B. Porter, 3rd, 8¾ ozs.; G. Moore, 4th, 8 ozs.; G. Fletcher, 5th, 6¾ ozs.; J. Memmott, 6th, 2 ozs.; H. Bishop, 7th, 1¾ ozs.—35 fish were caught. After the return row we were ready for our tea. Someone said he would like a wash, but he daren't venture, for the sun had played havoc. The old farmer was to time with the ducklings a few of the party had ordered to take home as present for the "better half." The train journey home passed pleasantly, and everyone was delighted with the success of our first annual week-end outing.—T. Bishop.

Budgerigars and Cockatiels: How They Live, Talk and Play

By F. W. BULL (Sutton, Surrey).

IT is many years ago that my love for feathered friends first asserted itself. My means at that time (age 7) were so limited, however, that I could not indulge in aviaries and pretty birds, not even the familiar fourpenny Linnet and fivepenny cage. With four bricks, breadcrumbs, and very much patience, I used to manage occasionally to capture a Sparrow, which would be ensconced in a "cage," consisting of a butter box, with a row of boot tacks knocked in the front top and bottom, and cotton for "wires." Needless to say, many birds "passed through my hands."

A Beautiful and Edifying Hobby.

From that time until now I have always had a keen affection for the feathered section of the creation, and a very beautiful and edifying study I have found it. I have kept many common species, but nothing expensive or rare, and my present collection comprises nothing more than Budgerigars, Cockatiels and Lovebirds.

Budgerigars, I consider, are the most amusing and interesting birds that it is possible to obtain, which fact, coupled with their cheapness and hardiness, should make them first favourite for cage or aviary.

Whether Budgerigars are harmful to small birds is a well-worn query. I have invariably kept very small birds, both British and Foreign, with the Budgies, and I must say that I have never had a case of maiming or injury as a consequence. Budgies can fight though. Occasionally I have to even part a couple of them to prevent murder, though this would be an event of the breeding season.

Playful and Mischievous Birds.

Budgerigars are very playful and mischievous, which probably has helped to their getting a bad reputation. It is no uncommon sight to see one swinging on another's tail, or a young Cockatiel flying round the aviary in fright, with a young Budge clinging to its back.

The green and the yellow varieties nearly always cross when there are several pairs of each intermixed. Even though I have taken the precaution to pair the birds beforehand, they have often gone over to the opposite colour and rematcd. The progeny turn out about eighty-five per cent. green. I have not been fortunate enough to produce a pair of blues, though I have had some very pretty mottled birds.

The only trouble to be encountered of any consequence in Budgerigar breeding is egg binding. Taken in time, however, this can be easily cured. Unfortunately in many cases the first sign of trouble is the bird on the floor of the aviary in a very weak state, and unable to fly. The bird should be caught very quietly, and after she is in a comfortable position in the hand (both as regards the holder and the bird, for they can bite remember) hold her carefully over a jug of hot water, at the same time anoint her vent with a little sweet oil, using a feather for the purpose; a drop or two should also be applied to the bird's mouth. After a little kicking the bird will patiently abide the soothing ordeal, and the result should be an egg laid within half an hour. I have had the same bird bad half-a-dozen times in succession and pulled it through.

Fourteen Eggs in One Nest.

Prolificness in Budgerigars is very varied. I have had many nests of nine, eight, and seven all reared, and have had as many as fourteen eggs in one clutch, all fertile. One pair of yellows reared four nests in one season, amounting in all to twenty-nine birds, everyone proving healthy, and perfect in all respects. Of course such hard breeding is not advisable, and should not be encouraged, though Budgerigars will, if left to themselves, breed all the year round. As a general rule they are excellent parents. Occasionally a bad mother will crop up, who, after bringing up the youngsters to a nice age, will calmly tear them up, and line her nest with the carcases. I once had a nest of six yellow, and one green, from yellow parents. When the young birds were old enough to show their colour, the green one was annihilated, the yellow ones were brought up all right.

I always give soaked bread, squeezed almost dry, when the young are being reared, and the parent birds very ravenously eat it if allowed. I have had very good results from its regular use, though on this point, as on many others in bird keeping, local circumstances, and personal opinion should be the chief guide. Some breeders do not recommend the use of soaked bread, while others advise dry.

Climb Over One Without Fear.

Budgerigars can be readily tamed and some of them made to talk. The male birds are the best pupils. One I gave to a friend talks, dances, kisses, whistles, and causes no end of amusement. His name is "Joey." He calls out "Pretty Joey," and is very apt at imitating a Thrush which is kept in the same room. He performs many tricks, allows his poll to be scratched, has free use of the sitting room, and goes back into his cage on request.

The birds in my aviary are very tame. It is a pretty sight to see from thirty to fifty Budgerigars, old and young, swinging on, and scrambling over an armful of greenstuff that my wife, myself, or even my baby girl, may be holding. They climb over one's arms and hands without any sign of fear, and will even take single seeds from the fingers. Considering the size of the aviary, and the fact that the birds are always out of doors, their tameness is all the more remarkable.

"Buzz" and "Fuzz."

Cockatiels are more or less famed for their wildness. I don't know that they altogether deserve to be; I hope to prove that they do not. Cockatiels are certainly somewhat noisy at times, though very clever and pretty whistlers. In this respect they are admirable mimics. They make a great commotion when flying, especially in an aviary of small timid birds, but are quite harmless. In one particular they are very wild—they will not be handled.

If Cockatiels are to be tamed they must be placed into an old parrot cage as soon as they leave the nest. The parents will continue to feed them through the wires. As soon as they can feed for themselves they should be brought indoors, where, after a good deal of patience and perseverance, they will soon become as tame as "Buzz" and "Fuzz."

"Buzz" and "Fuzz" are a pair of Cockatiels that my wife and I have tamed. They fly round the room and wander all over the house. Have dinner with us, and allow the baby to wheel them about in her doll's push car. They make love to themselves in the looking glass and enjoy pulling out my wife's hairpins. The hen bird is the more tame, and does not mind even being wrapped in a shawl and being nursed like a baby. We kiss her, scratch her poll, and let her feed from our mouth, but she will not talk. The male bird is not quite so tame, but is an excellent talker. He says: Tiger, Polly, Puss, Pretty Polly, Hurry-up Polly, here, etc, etc.; he mimics kissing, and whistles almost anything. The two together are highly amusing, and perform in their cage like a couple of monkeys.

WHAT EXPERIENCE HAS TAUGHT ME.

By W. JEREMIAH (Ebbw Vale).

A well-known Welsh fancier imparts some useful hints gathered during his career as a Canary breeder.

THOSE about to launch out upon this fascinating hobby whose spare time is limited should never attempt to keep too large a stock, or they will find it rather difficult to attend to the birds properly at all times. And everything should be carried out by system. It is wonderful how much can be done if a proper system is organised. In Canary management alone so much has to be crowded into one's spare time that unless things are arranged beforehand it is almost impossible to have everything attended to as it should be, and the neglect of what may be small items may entail great loss.

The breeding room should be well lighted and, if possible, lofty, although the majority of fanciers unfortunately cannot always get rooms of that description. Yet fresh air and plenty of it is of great importance to the health of the birds. With regard to the aspect of the room, some fanciers seem to think that a southern aspect is the best. However, I don't think it matters much, as my room faces the north, and I have had very good results the last few seasons. Fresh air should be provided by lowering the top part of the window every day for a short time, while in the warm weather the window should be left open a considerable distance, and the opening be covered by a frame of wire netting (½-inch mesh) to prevent any birds escaping if they should happen to get out of their cages.

No Use for the Ornate.

I would advise the fancier to study simplicity in the cages and thus save both time and expense. Even the best of birds can be bred in a plain box, whitened ineide, with a movable wire front and door of ample size to allow the free passage of the nest-pan, and a turn-rail along the bottom for cleaning out purposes. The bottoms of the cages should be covered with sand (some fanciers, I know, use sawdust) and the hoppers filled with best Spanish canary seed, and the latter should be cleared out frequently, the seed emptied into a sieve and thoroughly shaken and the husks blown away. No room should be without flight cages, for the birds may be run in batches and kept through the winter in them, especially hens, as they will benefit most by such a process. But any birds of show promise should be caged singly.

With regard to the stock, a fancier concentrating his efforts and capital upon one variety invariably does better than a person who attempts to keep three or four varieties. It will be necessary at various times, if the fancier wishes to become successful as an exhibitor, to dip into the green blood, and he will also have to mate two yellows and two buffs together, choosing, of course, birds for this purpose rich of colour, and dense of feather. Devote the greatest attention to the choice of birds for reproductive purposes. This indeed, is the point upon which depends the formation of a successful exhibition strain. It needs birds as near as possible to the recognised standard of perfection of the variety that the fancier wishes to cultivate, and they must be full of health. Never breed from diseased birds, however valuable they may be, as ill results will ultimately follow. This is admitted by all experts.

Young to Young and Degeneracy.

In pairing together typical young birds there is a possibility of producing good specimens, but it will be found that to make repeated unions between young birds will only lead to degeneracy. A Canary that has attained complete development, which it only does at a certain age, is sure to produce well-developed young ones. That which, for instance, cannot turn out badly, is the pairing of a well-matured bird with a young one. The qualities of a bird of a certain age allied to those of a younger subject, typical, full of vigour and ardour, will practically always produce progeny that will win success and provide satisfaction for their owner. I may mention in passing that the object of doubling the yellows is to produce fineness of feather, and doubling the buffs tends materially to improve the size and constitution, and it also establishes the type.

With regard to the food of Canaries opinions differ on this as on many other questions connected with the Fancy. However, I maintain that Canaries should not be fed with a mixture of every kind of seed which is seen advertised and recommended. I have known this done in some fancier's rooms, besides, at the same time having in the cages three or four different kinds of green stuff, to say nothing of soft foods during breeding operations. This is a mistake. It reminds me of a man who went to the doctor complaining of his stomach being wrong. "Not a bit of it," replied the doctor, "God made your stomach, and he knows how. There's something wrong with the things you put in it, maybe, and something wrong in the way you stuff them in, but your stomach is all right."

Our birds as well as ourselves should not be pampered with too many kinds of eatables, especially as the season for moulting comes on. Birds which have been methodically rationed change their feathers more quickly, and with greater ease, than those that have been allowed to feed indiscreetly and suffered to fatten, under the impression that abundance of nourishment gives them greater warmth and hastens the moult. This is a mistaken idea. It ought not to be difficult to comprehend, indeed, most fanciers of experience know well, that the greater part of the maladies which trouble our birds proceed from too abundant or too many kinds of food. Should the bird be ill from excess of food (or from any other cause) the moulting will either come to a standstill or drag itself more or less slowly along.

Some Simple Remedies.

Disease should rarely appear in a room that is kept clean and thoroughly ventilated. If a bird takes cold the symptoms are a puffy appearance and a wheezy respiration. For this I use nothing but ten drops of whiskey and ten drops of glycerine mixed in two tablespoonfuls of water. Another source of trouble is "scouring," which usually attacks hens when they are feeding their young. I have found plenty of boiled German Rape seed very effective in complaints of this kind. But great care is necessary when soft food is given to the birds, because if the food is continually given in the same pots without being washed, ill results will certainly follow.

Another thing which materially impedes the way to success is the detestable red mite unless these pests are strictly kept under. Now, of all the various remedies that have been prescribed from time to time to destroy these blood-thirsty things, it will be found that nothing equals creosote. It is a certain and complete cure. It can be injected into the crevices of the cages by the aid of a small syringe.

The return bowling match between a few of the Paisley and Renfrew members of the Paisley, Tannahill O.S., took place at Paisley writes Mr. J. Stewart, and ended in a win for the Paisley fanciers by 8 shots, the score being 18 for 10. The teams were—Paisley: A. Livingstone, A. McDonald, J. Fulton, J. Stewart; Renfrew: A. Ferguson, J. Moore, R. Simpson, A. N. Other. Reference was made to making this an annual match.

Those on a study whose colour feed to use, just read these absolute true facts. I don't bounce on men's names who have had a pound or two so as to compete for specials. Everyone below had from 28 lbs. to 112 lbs. Royal Red, Crystal Palace, 1912. Ten Open Champion Norwich classes, nine 1st prize winners, special best bird in show, champion diploma, best in section, were moulted solely on Royal Red by Messrs. Thomas, Davies, Smeaton, Turner. The one first moulted on another was a Buff, four champion Cinnamon classes, every 1st, 2nd and 3rd were moulted solely on Royal Red by Messrs. Dormer, D. Godley, Deacon. The above are classes where colour is everything. In Yorkshires, Messrs. Binns, Thomas, Hirst, Ellis, Dykes; all big first winners, moulted on Royal Red. If above is not a record what is? Just the same at every leading show. I can't give you the quality and extra big specials as well. I give guarantee that Sandiford's Royal Red costs £20 per ton more than any other in England. See advert. (Advert.)

Into the Horse Trough.

According to the "Evening News" a Canary at the Royal Hospital for Incurables, Putney Heath, is allowed to leave its cage daily, and occasionally flies out of the window, having a bath in a cattle trough before returning.

A Grower of Wormwood.

I saw, writes G. W. Shaw, Folly Gardens, Brotherton, Yorkshire, a Miss Turner asking if you knew where she could get some wormwood. I can supply as much as anyone wants, as I grow it all the year round.

A Reader Returns Thanks.

Mr. John B. Waterman, of East Dulwich, who has just gone through a serious operation for an old-standing aural trouble, wishes to thank his many friends for their kind enquiries during his illness. Mr. Waterman, we are pleased to learn, is making an excellent recovery, and hopes soon to again take up the Yorkshire Canary with all his old-time enthusiasm.

Sale First Feather Show has been postponed, owing to the bad breeding season, write the secs., Messrs. Royle and Wood.

In our report of Bethesda Show last week 2nd and 3rd in the Norwich local class should have been credited to Mr. Owen Thomas, not Sergt. Evans as printed.

Fanciers should not overlook King's Lynn show being held August 5, at which 15 classes are provided, with good prize money (see review of schedule in this issue). That well-known bird-lover, Mr. S. Denny Hunt, is at the helm (29, London Road, Kings Lynn), and entries close July 30th.

Entries are very, very poor for Cambridge Show on Bank Holiday Monday, and the date has been extended (vide advertisement). We hope fanciers will rally round this well-conducted fixture and help the officials in their attempt to benefit the funds of the local hospital.

Special Notice.—R. A. Newley, the well-known bird-cage specialist, will be glad to receive additional names and addresses of breeders of various types of Canaries, etc. View, purchase of stock for the coming season. Transactions straightforward and for cash; all communications treated in strict confidence; write, giving particulars and prices, to R. A. Newley, 24, Stockwell Green, London, S.W.—(Advert.)

OBITUARY.

It is with much regret, writes Mr. W. Chubb, that I have to announce the death of the beloved wife of Mr. J. Neil, one of the oldest and most respected fanciers in the Stirling and Dist. C.B.S. Members will join with me in tendering their heartfelt sympathy to him in his bereavement.

I deeply regret writes Mr. F. Cullington, to have to record the death of the wife of Mr. E. Clarke, of the "Rose Inn," trustee for a number of years of the Norwich Alliance C.B.A., and greatly esteemed by all fanciers in Norwich. The deceased lady was very generous and kindly, and made many friends. To her sorrowing husband and children we extend our heartfelt sympathy. Mrs. Clarke was borne to the grave by fanciers, and wreaths were sent by several societies.

Cinnamon C.C. Patronage.

All societies wishing the Cinnamon Canary Club's patronage should please apply by August 7th, when same will be allotted, writes Mr. J. W. Metcalfe, Hon. Sec., 68, Brunswick Road, Liverpool.

Dangers of Closed Rings.

We hear from Mr. J. W. Ramsden, who has lately returned from the North, that there have been many accidents and some deaths due to the use of closed rings, especially so in the breeding centres of Yorkshire. The opinion seems to be that when the hens are sitting closely the rings damage the legs of the youngsters. Anyway, in many instances hens have bitten off the damaged legs and in others mortification has set in, while in other cases sores have formed, and in this manner numbers of promising youngsters have been ruined.

The Widow's Canary.

A widow's description of her trouble over a Canary caused amusement in the Waltham Abbey County Court recently, says a local paper. The widow, Mrs. Charlotte Suchwell, of Enfield Lock, who secured judgment for the return of 8s. 6d. paid for a Canary from Mr. Bertram Matthews, a bird dealer, of Waltham Cross, said that she wanted a green cock Canary, but the defendant sent a yellow hen bird. She returned it, and the defendant sent her another hen bird, and when she sent that back the first bird was sent to her again. The "cock" birds laid so many eggs, she complained, that she had to throw them away. (Laughter.)

Air Machine Scares Birds.

Whilst spending a few days in Upper Annandale, I witnessed a "bird panic" such as I never previously beheld, writes "A. B." to the "Glasgow Evening Times." I was sitting reading in a secluded corner of a field, when my attention was attracted by the shrill cries of the Crows, followed by the alarm call of the Blackbird and the excited twittering of Sparrows, etc. Curious as to the cause of this, I gazed around for any exceptional circumstances, but found none. Just as I resumed my seat the low throb-throb of a motor engine was audible, and then a monoplane hove in sight. This was evidently the signal for the utmost confusion and excitement, birds of every description fluttering about quite aimlessly, some of them being so overcome with terror that they landed on the ground within two yards of where I sat. After the machine passed three or four hours elapsed before the usual peace and quietness of the countryside was regained.

Wild-Bird Life.

Birds by the Railway.

If one could afford the time to travel on foot by the side of the railway, along its embankments and cuttings, he would probably meet with more bird life than over an equal distance across fields and meadows. Many birds love a sunny bank, where convenient hollows and tufts of coarse grass give shelter to their nests, and in the clumps of bushes and dwarf trees of the railway embankment many of the perching birds find convenient cover, and although there is always the dash and roar of the passing trains, there is at the same time a freedom from intruders that must appeal to those birds that delight in getting as far from the haunts of man as possible.

During a life spent among birds, the writer can call to mind many instances of rare finds along these old banks, which are frequently, covered with wild thyme, ox daisies and other flowers of the open, a fitting setting for the homes of Larks, Pipits, and Wagtails, that frequently nest there. A choice little area close to the writer's home is thickly clothed with dwarf bushes, with here and there a taller whitethorn or birch, the latter lifting its graceful head above the surrounding foliage. Here the Nightingale comes year after year, and although the passing train is within a few feet of his favourite perch, he does not let it interfere with his music.

That interesting bird, the Red-backed Shrike, may also be met with along the embankment. He is essentially a bird of the summer, one of the last to arrive, and one of the first to wend southwards as the days shorten. The Shrike is apparently as hardy as any of our visitors, but waits until the big beetles and banded bees are busy among the herbage, and the half-fledged Greenbirds become an easy prey to his quick eye and strong feet and claws. The impaling of the slaughtered upon convenient thorns does not appear to be a regular mode of procedure, but is possibly in a measure regulated by the supply of the victims. The writer has frequently hunted all the bushes and trees surrounding the nest without finding evidence of the Shrike's bloodthirsty nature, and is convinced that when indulged in it is more frequently at a distance than quite close to the nest, especially while the hen is incubating.

H. N.

Where the Starling Forages.

One would think that birds would find more insects and grubs in the long grass of the meadows, than in the shorter grass of the gardens, and yet Starlings prefer the lawns as a hunting ground to the open grass land. Possibly the thickness of growth of the latter prevents them reaching the earth, and the grubs they require are hidden near the roots. Anyway the birds almost desert the open field, particularly in dry weather.

'PHOSTO'

The Marvellous PHOSPHATIC FOOD For Canaries and Cage Birds.

ONE OF THE LATEST OPINIONS.

1, Strathearn Road, Wimbledon, S.W. July, 1912.

Dear Sirs,—Prior to the use of your preparation "PHOSTO," I had been exceedingly unfortunate with regard to bad feeding hens, only rearing 4 young out of 33 crests and crestbreds.

"PHOSTO" was mentioned to me on 1st June by a fellow fancier (whose results were confirmed by another fancier), and determined to try same, with the result that I am MORE THAN SATISFIED, having now a nice batch of young ones coming on, the hens feeding well, and I confidently anticipate that those about to hatch will not fail me. I think that the quantity specified by you, viz., half teaspoonful to an egg is more than necessary. I INTEND USING "PHOSTO" DURING THE MOULT. Yours faithfully

The Rival of the Nightingale

By A. A. GOODALL (West Dulwich).

A charming account of the dainty Blackcap.

This excellent essay came very near securing premier position in our rece nt competition.

A HOST of aviculturists claim for the Blackcap a premier position among cage pets; for few, if any, of the sweet-throated songsters whose presence brings gladness into the daily life of those about them can vie with this graceful little Warbler as an eminently desirable acquisition. Whether we know the Blackcap in the leafy glades that are his haunts when the glory of early summer impels him once again to break into song—in joyous brilliancy inferior to none—or merely as the confiding occupant of the bird-room or aviary, he possesses for us at all times a special charm, due in no small degree to his dainty outline and captivating ways.

Residents in the London district—those especially who delight in studying the movements of wild birds—have reason to congratulate themselves that they are able to include this interesting migrant among other winged visitors to the outskirts of the metropolis; for opportunities for observation of the Blackcap, as well as several allied species, seem to be on the increase rather than otherwise. Living within five miles of Charing Cross, it has been my privilege during the past summer to renew an old-time acquaintance with the home-life of Sylvia atricapilla, and under cover of a shady retreat, in close proximity to the object of my search, to enjoy, within a few feet of the musician, the wonderful song that not even Philomel herself can eclipse.

Really a Hardy Little Fellow.

But great as is the temptation to linger in thought amid such pleasant surroundings, I must not digress from the purpose of these notes, which is to speak of the Blackcap as a cage-bird. First of all, it is necessary to dispel a very common, though erroneous, idea, viz., that it is a difficult matter to keep this Warbler in captivity. As a fact, such is very far from being the case; for though, like other softbills, it requires a variety of food and plenty of exercise to maintain it in perfect health, the Blackcap is a hardy little bird, while its diet need not be costly nor difficult to procure.

To those who are not able to afford the luxury of an aviary, in which shrubs and "tangle" can be arranged for the convenience of the inmates, the choice of an inexpensive and suitable cage is the first matter requiring consideration; and while one is about it, it is well to bear in mind that the principal object should be to make this as long as possible, in order that the occupant may bring its wings into use when moving from perch to perch. This is really of the highest importance to all captive birds—softbills especially— and to carry the idea into effect the cage for a Blackcap ought not to be less than three feet in length, with a perch at either end so placed as to permit the bird to turn round without running the risk of damaging its tail.

The cage should be designed on the "box" principle, that is, with the back and sides made of wood, the front—with the exception of a two-inch bottom screen—being barred and fitted with a central door. I find twelve inches a very useful depth; while as to height, about the same measurement, or even an inch or two more, will suffice—the object being, as stated, to ensure flight-room rather than loftiness. The top should be cloth or baize, which may either be stretched tightly across and studded with brass-headed nails, or held in position by means of fillets of thin wood fastened with screws. For convenience when renewing, the latter plan will be found the better of the two. A movable tray is, of course, necessary, and it is also advisable to have a perch extending the whole length of the front, on a level with the top of the wooden screen; this encourages the bird to come to the bars for any tit-bits that may be offered, thus assisting in establishing confidence between the captive and its owner.

A Singer Fond of Seclusion.

The Blackcap being of a retiring nature and fond of seclusion, it is desirable that the cage be partially shaded off—a provision for which the inmate will quickly show its appreciation, especially when singing. A piece of green gauze—say a couple of inches deep—hung from the top of the cage along the front of the bars, is all that is necessary, and can be fastened so as to lift up or hang down, as required; this material I have found better than baize or dark cloth, as it does not exclude all light.

The necessity for a cloth top to the cage is well-recognised by those who have kept migrants under these conditions for any length of time, and can be explained in very few words. During the seasons of migration, and under the mysterious influence which seems to dominate them at such times, the birds become very restless, and are apt, especially in the early days of captivity, to make sudden upward dashes as though startled, thereby coming into more or less violent contact with the top of the cage. These flutterings will be most noticeable at night time, and unless some precautions, such as those suggested, be taken, serious injury may result. In any case, one cannot rely upon preventing a certain amount of damage being done to the plumage—the tail in particular often presents a broken, ragged appearance. To keep a Blackcap or other similar bird in perfect feather, it is advisable, therefore, to wait until the period of migration is well over, and then to remove the tail feathers. If these be withdrawn gradually, no cruelty whatever is involved, and the new appendage will very soon appear, and remain perfect until the next season.

Look After the Feet.

One other little matter which occasionally gives trouble must be mentioned; it is not a serious one, but unless taken in hand promptly may cause considerable inconvenience to one's birds. Owing to unsuitable feeding or, as some suggest, to unnatural perches, the feet may at times become rough and sore; horny growths appear upon the toes, which eventually get quite mis-shapen. As a result of this condition the feet become clogged and the bird has some difficulty in retaining its hold upon the perch; in consequence, it spends most of its time upon the floor of the cage. The best method of affording relief is to first soak the feet in warm water for a few minutes, at the same time carefully removing every particle of dirt with the thumb and finger, after which they must be thoroughly dried and anointed with a little vaseline, sweet oil, or fresh butter. It may be necessary to repeat the operation two or three times before the trouble subsides. As a means of detecting this particular evil in its incipient stage it is a good plan to make a periodical inspection of the feet of all caged softbills, and in bad cases the cage should be thickly strewed with cocoa-nut fibre or other such material, in lieu of sand, which tends to aggravate the trouble. Scrupulous cleanliness is, one need hardly add, of the highest importance.

Dont's Concerning the Bath.

Bathing should be encouraged, but only in moderation, as the Blackcap, like other birds of its kind, is rather susceptible to chills, for which reason it is not advisable to allow the bath to remain in the cage for any length of time. Some Blackcaps seem to have a great aversion to making their ablutions in the orthodox way, but manifest the liveliest satisfaction if submitted to the ordeal of a shower-bath, which can be administered by means of a small spray. After a few times they will look forward to the operation with every indication of pleasure, and soon become tame under its influence, which desirable result may be further brought about by permitting the birds to fly at large in the room every few days—an exercise that also contributes to general good-health.

FROM FIELD TO SHOW BENCH.

By J. STEEL (Dalkeith).

To Select a Possible Champion.

Selecting the Thrush: I will confine my remarks to one species, the Song Thrush, and deal with this question by first expressing my opinion, viz., that a really good exhibition Song Thrush is, despite the plentitude of the species, one of the most difficult Britisher to obtain, and the appearance of a champion in the arena, is quite an event, as may be understood by the fact that such may easily maintain the title for years. To explain this, I must deal individually with some of the points. Size: This is not so difficult to obtain, but generally it is in the wrong direction, the Thrush being one of the few birds in which the Yorkshire, or long shape, is essential, or preferred to the cobby. Skull: This should be flat and broad. Body tone deep, the difference between buff and yellow being very marked, and no method of feeding will bring the former up to exhibition quality. The feature wherein, to use an Irishism, 999 per cent. of Thrushes fail, is the spotting. These markings should be dark, abundant, reaching from under mandible to vent, distinct, and rowed. Therefore, in selecting an exhibition specimen, we are like the gent. who was choosing a pup, not looking for a best, but the one with fewest defects, architectural or colorative.

How to Hand-rear the Young.

The knotty question arises here, what are the chances of hand-rearing a good one, the qualities being practically indistinguishable in the nestlings? Also, which is the best time of taking—when adult, they being a very wild species, or as young ones for hand-rearing to counteract the tendency to wildness. For exhibition, I should choose an adult, if such were a particularly fine specimen. I have seen, and tried in vain to catch, a Thrush, which I would certainly not have grudged a large expenditure of cash and patience, if, even two years later, I could have benched it, for I should have then had my reward. If, however, I were inclined to risk my chances of hand-rearing, I should endeavour to select a nest the owners or parents of which I saw were good, or fairly approaching the ideal in size and colour, and I should reduce the clutch or brood to two in number. Taking them when fairly feathered, and feeding them on scalded game meal and hard-boiled egg, proportion two to one respectively, made rather sloppy at first, and supplied at not more than forty minute intervals from 4 a.m. till dusk. In addition, I should supply grubs of various kinds, keeping them, the birds, warm and clean, gradually diminishing the moisture in the food, and giving a few drops of tepid water or milk after the feed, as they got older transferring to cage with a deep layer of dry earth or peat in bottom, teaching them to peck by withdrawing feeding stick, and placing lively grubs in dish, and continuing to hand-feed at longer intervals, even after they could peck, as I think a check to growth occurs at this period.

All That is Possible.

Every care must be taken to prevent the youngsters from eating any stale residue of food which falls to cage bottom. The blotched markings of a nestling are not indicative of a similar fault being reproduced in the mature plumage. Colour-feeding is well nigh imperative, and if such is eked out with a plentiful supply of berries, such as yew, alder, blackberry, privet, etc., the fancier can rest content in the knowledge that he has done all that is possible, and deserves, though unfortunately he cannot command, success. That, gentlemen, terminates my lecture, and if the hints I have given add to your knowledge of the requirements of your feathered pets, the application of such, by adding to their happiness while under your care will be sufficient reward for me, and my object then accomplished.

CANARY QUERIES.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

HOW TO FEED GERMAN (German).—You may feed a Leipzig Roller just the same as you would any other German singing canary, for full details of which you should get the Nutshell booklet No. 10 (see inset advert.), but gradually bring the bird on to a staple of two parts canary to one part summer rape. At this season half ripe plantain stalks, seed heads of shepherd's-purse, flower buds of groundsel, lettuce, and watercress are excellent green foods.

EGGS AND BROKEN LEGS (Crest).—Glad to hear the first broken leg has got on so well under the system of no "treatment" advised. The cause of the toes turning under is probably due to muscular contraction, and considering your interference with the fracture before writing for advice I would advise you to leave the foot alone now. If it does not remedy itself in course of time the bird will manage to get about comfortably. Treat the second fractured leg on the same lines as last advised. If you want to escape such accidents in future get rid of the Cardinals. It is folly to attempt to keep an incompatible mixture of birds together. (2) The chances are the eggs will prove useless, but if the hens sit their time it might help them to break away well with the moult, so you may lose nothing by allowing them to go on.

FEEDING YOUNG (Portable).—You may drop the egg now, and give instead a piece of bread about the size of hazel nut, soaked in milk and sprinkled with maw every second day, and half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake or plain biscuit on the alternate days. Give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as staple, and three times a week half a teaspoonful of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, millet, teazle, groats and black rape. Give, in moderation, half ripe plantain stalks, seed heads of shepherd's-purse, or seedy sprays of chickweed. In a month hence gradually reduce frequency of soft food by one-half.

YORKSHIRE MOULTING (E. C., Derby).—The bird will not resume singing until the moult is finished, and it must drop all its body feathers as well as those of the wings and tail before the moult is complete. It seems to be moulting very slowly. Keep it quite on the warm side, and feed it the same as advised to "J. F.," except that you should give a staple of three parts canary to one part rape. Twice a week for a fortnight add as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and half as much chlorate of potash to the water, and on two other days 20 drops of whiskey and a few shreds of saffron. The duration of the moult varies greatly according to circumstances; it may extend to four months or more, but the most usual time is from two to three months.

NORWICH COCK AILING (S. G. R.).—Keep it in a moderate temperature, as equable as possible, quite free from draughts and the fumes of burning lights in the evenings. In the first week give a staple of plain canary only, and add a liberal supply of green food daily, but no other food of any kind. During this time add six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence to the water every second day. After this add a fourth part of summer rape to the staple diet, and every second day for a fortnight give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with four drops of sherry and two of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it and sprinkled with maw seed. Twice a week on the alternate days give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts inga, millet, teazle, and black rape, and a little green food four times a week. Only allow it to bathe freely in fine weather. Get a chemist to mix you two drachms each of glycerine and oxymel of squills, one drachm each of chlorodyne and ipecacuanha wine, and eight grains of iodide of potassium, and add 20 drops of this to the water two days in every three for a week, and every second day afterwards until better.

CONTINUAL MOULTING (Melbourne).—I am afraid you keep this bird either in a draughty position, or where it is exposed to the heat and fumes of a burning light in the evenings, or extreme variations of temperature. Look well into these points and remedy any apparent fault, when the bird will probably be right and fine after the moult. Do not try to stop feathers dropping now. Rather encourage them by keeping the bird on the warm side, dusting its egg food three times a week with flowers of sulphur, and adding 20 drops of whisky, five of syrup of saffron, and as much chlorate of potash as will cover a threepenny-piece to the drinking water twice a week, to get it break away freely with the moult. If it should not tighten up at the end of moulting season, write again.

CAUSE OF FAILURE (Failure).—The eggs were all broken in transit owing to being packed with wool rather too tightly. The contents of all had been quite fluid and clear, consequently the two that had been sat upon were certainly infertile, and the other probably the same. It is doubtless the fault of the cock, who may be past his best breeding days, although only five years. The hen has already had too many nests this year. Cage them separately now until next spring, and turn your attention to getting them through a good moult and in hard vigorous condition for next breeding season. Give both birds a fortnight of the low diet treatment advised for the first week to "S.G.R." It would be wise for you to try this cock with another hen next season, and get a young cock to mate with the hen you now have.

YOUNG DYING (Home Rule).—You make no mention of green-food, and I think it very probable the lack of this item may be largely accountable for your failure to hand-rear the birds. The nest should be kept in a cosy place—not overheated, but still warm—and covered lightly at night, and also by day whilst the birds are unfeathered, with a fold of flannel. The food should be made into a soft paste, and as much as the bird will readily "gape" for given every hour or so from dawn to dusk. No water is necessary until young begin to pick about for themselves. In about half a dozen "feeds" each day a little finely minced green-food should be mixed, regulating the quantity given so as to keep the evacuations in a normal condition.

VARIOUS (Amadis).—The Norwich cock undoubtedly has a bronchial tendency, and this, as any other weakeness, is apt to show itself during the moult. Treat him for a month or so the same as advised to "S.G.R." You must not put him in the ontside aviary by any means. Only one week's lack of oversight would not allow mites not previously troublesome to become so numerous as to weaken the young brood. Probably the hen was not a very good feeder, and if she plucked the young at all such a combination of adverse circumstances would materially affect the growth and stamina of the brood. Give the young a little scalded rape, cracked hemp, groats, and a morsel of bread and milk, with a few drops of cod liver emulsion on it and sprinkled with soft sugar daily for a few weeks. The outdoor aviary you describe should answer admirably for Canaries all the year round.

MOULTING AND COLOUR (Would Like to Know).—(1) You do not say whether these young birds have dropped many or few feathers, so I cannot tell whether they have finished their moult. They should drop all the small body feathers, retaining only the flights and tail until next moult. Give a little green-food four times a week. (2) To apportion colour food well mix two unheaped teaspoonfuls of colour with a teacupful of egg-food, and gradually increase the colour to four teaspoonfuls when the moult gets in full swing. Allow one teaspoonful of this coloured egg-food to each bird daily. Adhere to about same proportions in making large or smaller quantities. (3) The hen with young three days old may quite possibly finish rearing them before the moult overtakes her. If she stops at a fortnight's end you should easily rear the young by hand. You might try putting in the cock, if he is a good feeder, in case she stops feeding, but it will be merely experimental. Only time can prove whether this hen and the one with eggs yet to hatch will complete their family duties before dropping into moult.

SKIN GROWTH (J. F.).—Such growths as you enclosed are not very uncommon in old birds, but this particular specimen is certainly very unusual in a 1911 bird. The real origin is as yet obscure, but a lowered vitality and weakly constitution has much to do with them. Your diet is not sufficiently nourishing, and probably this largely accounts for the trouble. Give a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape as staple. Twice a week give a morsel of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw. On two other days give half a teaspoonful of crushed sponge cake with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion mixed in it, and on two other days again a pinch of mixed seed. Give a little green food daily. Allow bird to bathe freely. Keep cage and perches as clean as possible and free from insects. Anoint bare place with Lanolyllin once a week and dust on a little boracic acid afterwards. It is very unlikely any more feathers being produced on the spot. The above treatment is the best you can do to aid their production at the moult.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., Etc.

WHAT BIRD? ETC. (Hopeful).—(1) I think the bird must be a Pileated Finch, though the absence of the head plumage leaves the question somewhat open, but I think there is very little doubt about it. In good condition 12/6 to 15/-, as it is, barely 5/-. (2) First let me say unless your aviary is a very large one, the mixing of Parrakeets, Lovebirds, etc., with Finches is certain to result in disaster in the long run. If you had described your aviary and stated whether indoors or out I could have helped you better, also many Saffron Finches often prove perfect bullies or worse! Green and Yellow: Green Avadavat, Green Singing-finch; Blue or parti-blue: Cordon Bleu (fragile at first); Red, Orange or parti-red: Fire-finch (very fragile at first), Ribbon Finch, Orange-cheeked Waxbill, Gold-breasted Waxbill, Grey Waxbill. The price you name limits me. A series of Weavers are not costly, and these are gorgeous when in breeding plumage, but in small quarters ought not to be kept with Waxbills and the like.

ORANGE BISHOP (A. Orain).—The Orange Bishop or Weaver; in fact none of the Weavers are free breeders in captivity and the rearing of young is distinctly eventful; nevertheless there is no reason why they should not breed in a roomy natural aviary—the Grenadier Weaver has just reared young in an English aviary, so why not the Orange? Diet: canary, white and spray millet, greenfood, and one or two live insects daily.

BENGALESE AND GOULDIAN FINCHES (A.B.C.).—The Bengalese are somewhat erratic feeders, but if you supply unlimited greenfood, and a little of some good soft food mixture, in addition to the ordinary seed diet—give a liberal supply of millet sprays at this period—the young should be reared. As regards acclimatised pairs of Gouldian Finches, the value is from 40/- to 60/-; single birds about half or a little more.

FOR A PET (H.J.F.).—Your query is a bit of a problem, as the smaller Parrakeets are not the cheaper ones. The Blossom-headed is handsome, and, though not often on the market now, is usually cheap, as also are the Moustache and Ring-necked, but these are quite large. I advise you to spend a little more and get a Yellow-winged Parrakeet (Brotogerys virescens), these make ideal pets, soon become finger tame, and are easy to cater for, value about 40/-.

PULLING ITS FEATHERS (F.Moore).—You do not tell me anything about this bird save the fact that it is pulling its feathers, etc. Tell me how long you have had it and how you have been feeding and treating it during this period I shall then be in a position to advise a possible remedy, at present I cannot even guess at the possible cause of the trouble—you don't even tell me what kind of Parrot it is! In the meantime put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia in the drinking water every third day. This should take full effect, and the bowels move freely, nevertheless, if the voidings become and remain watery-loose, you must cease giving the magnesia pending a further reply.

FOREIGN BIRD QUERISTS

should consult Page's "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (1/1½); Arthur's "Budgerigars and Cockatiels" (6d.); Arthur's "Parrots for Pleasure and Profit" (7d.); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); Dr. Clarke's "Septic or Bird Fever" (7d.); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure them," No. 9 "The Disinfection of Cages, Bird-rooms, etc.," No. 14 "Gouldian Finches," No. 16 "Avadavats," No. 17 "The Grey Parrot," No. 18 "Budgerigars," No. 19 "The Pekin Robin," No. 20 "Waxbills." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, BLUE-FRONTED AMAZON (Bird Lover).—There is a great deal of confusion as to the distinguishing features and much remains to be done before a really satisfactory diagnosis can be given, but the beak of the male is longer and also narrower at the base than that of the female. The iris of the eye is orange-red in the adult bird, pale yellow in young birds, but there is probably a stage during which the eyes of very young birds are almost entirely blackish-brown.

AMAZON PARROT (P.Z.).—Continue your present treatment with this addition, foment the swollen parts with a hot (not hot enough to cause discomfort) decoction of camomile flowers, dry with a cloth and paint with neat whisky daily. Also keep the bowels moving quite freely by an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia as required—the voidings should not be allowed to continue watery-loose, if this occurs stop the laxative for a time. Put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water every other day. You must not use a metal drinker while giving drugs. Report progress two or three weeks hence.

WHAT BIRD (African Bird).—I am sorry if you have been overlooked, certainly I do not call to mind your query, if it was sent in, the description must certainly have been different to the present one, I think the bird you describe must be the Red-headed Finch (Amadina erythrocephala), which is a sort of glorified and enlarged Cutthroat, but in lieu of the crimson collar, the head of the male is brick-red, but I should describe the colour of this bird as fawn-brown, lightly washed with grey. If you know your bird not to be the above, could you make me a rough diagram of it and rub in the main colours with crayon or something similar. I could then settle the matter at once.

AVIARY QUERIES (Siwel).—(1) Yes, but see that you get half-inch, five-eighths inch is often sold as such. (2) About eight to ten pairs. (3) Yes, Foreign and British species can be kept together, but it is bad policy to mix the Parrakeet-tribe (Budgerigars) with Finches, etc., there are always tragedies at intervals. With Budgerigars you could keep Cockatiels, Madagascar and Blue-winged Lovebirds and a pair of Cardinals. With say—British Redpolls, Siskins, Bull and Goldfinches, Linnet and Twite, you could keep such small Foreign Finches, Waxbills and Mannikins as you desire—space is precious this week, let me know which course you prefer and I will send you a definite list.

BIRDS FOR AVIARY (Alpha).—First group: One pair each Rosella Parrakeets, Cockatiels, Green and Yellow Budgerigars, Madagascar and Blue-wing Lovebirds. The Rosella is a brilliantly coloured species, and not at all noisy for a Parrakeet, neither do I consider Cockatiels so out of doors, save during periods of excitement. The above usually agree together. It is no use attempting to grow anything in a Parrakeet aviary, save grass and cereals. Second group: One pair each Zebra and Ruficauda Finches; Long-tailed Grassfinches; Cutthroats; Silverbills, Spice Birds, Bronze Mannikins, Avadavats; Gold breasted, St. Helena and Orange-cheeked Waxbills. I am unable to speak for or against the Dahlias and at the moment of going to press have no time to look this up—I should take them out and replace them with one or two evergreens, dock, cow-parsley, mallow, cornflowers, garden marigolds, mignonette. I have named birds which are all easy to keep for a beginner.

AMAZON PARROT (S.M.L.).—In the article you refer to, in every respect the bird has been treated as described in this column regularly both as to training and feeding, and you cannot do better than follow the same course. Parrots are as variable and have as much individuality as human beings, and some allowance must be made for this. It is quite natural for a bird to regurgitate its food after being fondled, I used to give my Parrot my finger to play with at such times and it acted just as if it was feeding as it would have done had there been another bird (its mate) in the cage. The bird is a little out of tone, stop the tea sops and all other table leavings, etc. Give Dinneford's as required to keep the bowels moving quite freely, and put a little Byno-phosphates in the drinking water several times during each week till the bird is itself again. If sufficient hard seed is eaten to keep the bird in condition, boiled maize is not necessary. Regularly cover the bird up for a time when it is too noisy, it will soon get to recognise this as a punishment.

IS IT A PENNANT? (J.G.D.).—There is a considerable amount of green in the plumage of young Pennants, and also considerable variation, some being much greener than others. Undoubtedly your bird is a young Pennant, which in due course will don the typical adult plumage.

WEAVERS (G. Heath).—Undoubtedly you were sold the birds as a pair in good faith by the vendor, as when out of colour the sexes are not easy to discern, though a practised eye, which many dealers do not possess, usually makes but few errors—from your description the bird is an Orange Bishop or Weaver.

BIRDS FOR INDOOR AVIARY (H.W.M.).—Well furnish your aviary with twiggy branches and nest receptacles, and also grow grass, lettuce, etc., in pots, by having a series to take turn and turn about, such last a long time, and mean much to the health and contentment of indoor birds. You should have better prospects with a dozen pair than with a larger number, though some should breed if you put in 15 pairs. The following are all probable breeders and pleasing to the eye: Cordon Bleus, Red Avadavats, Green Avadavats: Zebra, Bib, Spice and Ruficauda Finches; Silverbills, Bengalese, Bronze Mannikins; Gold-breasted, Orange-cheek and St. Helena Waxbills; Aurora Finches, and Long-tailed Grassfinches.

SAWDUST FOR CAGE BOTTOM (Freda).—It may be largely prejudice on my part, for many use sawdust, yet my prejudice has the result of numerous post mortem examinations to support it, where sawdust adhering to the soft food or sticky fruit (for in spite of hangers and other contrivances many species will get their food to the cage bottom) has occasioned internal complications and death, and I always discourage its use. In my opinion there is nothing to equal sand (not grit) or dry earth for the purpose. For many years, for a few cages and wooden floors of indoor flights, I used nothing but dry earth.

AMAZON PARROT (C.A.B.).—Get our Nutshell, "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager, and with the addition of boiled maize treat your bird on the lines advised therein. Stop the milk, custard, etc., and the diarrhœa should gradually disappear; I should give one or two doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—one teaspoonful over the boiled maize after all water has been drained away—with three days between each dose. Keep cuttlebone continually in the cage, and put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates in the drinking water every other day. Also supply fruit and nuts, and add a pinch of grit (not sand) to the daily supply of seed, keep it where it will have plenty to see and hear, also teach it by constant repetition and it will ultimately prove responsive.

IS THE RED-CRESTED CARDINAL AMIABLE? (P. Allen).—Their demeanour is very variable, and some specimens are certainly bullies; I have kept them with Waxbills without the latter being interfered with, but there was cover and room for them to get out of each other's way. However, in a community of all males, and the species you name, I do not anticipate there being any trouble, but of course you must keep them under observation for a time, at the same time do not mistake the bickering that occurs when a new bird is turned into an aviary or cage for maliciousness—give them time to settle down and then judge. The Red-crested Cardinal is every whit as hardy as the British species you name.

AFRICAN GREY PARROT (A.T.H.).—Confine the diet to seed mixture, greenfood, nuts, plain biscuit and ripe fruit—grit, cuttlebone and water must also be regularly supplied. It will, I expect, be a work of time to check the habit. Get a mist sprayer, and spray the bird twice weekly with quassia solution; examine the bird, and if there are any parasites rub a little insect powder into the plumage. So long as the voidings are not watery-loose, put one teaspoonful of Dinneford's Magnesia into the bird's drinking water every fourth day and on other days put half a teaspoonful of Byno-phosphates into the water. On all suitable days put it outside for an hour or two, but not in an exposed position—a bird is as liable to sunstroke as a human being—nor yet when chill or gusty winds prevail. Give it wood, cotton reels, etc., to play with. You should get our Nutshell "The Grey Parrot," 2½d. post free from our Manager, it will help you.

SUDDEN INDISPOSITION (A. Mundav).—A Parrot or any other bird for that matter, should not be stood out of doors in any exposed position, nor subjected to chilling winds. Your bird was probably affected by the heat and I much fear you will lose it. Give it three drops of Dinneford's Magnesia direct to the beak, repeating this daily till full relief has been given. In lieu of the drinking water give very weak brandy and water (chilled) as a stimulant, but as soon as the bird picks up a little substitute Byno-phosphates for the brandy. If the bird's mouth is furred or slimy, put a little honey and borax on its tongue or in its beak daily—this can do no harm and will keep the mouth clear. You must give a little sop at present, prepare as follows:—Break up an arrowroot biscuit to the size of maize, sprinkle with sugar, spot over it a little Byno-phosphates, then add as much boiling water as the biscuit will absorb; if the bird will not eat you must handfeed it, till it does, giving little of the above sop every two hours; keeping of course the ordinary dietary in the cage and also the sop, for the bird to help itself when inclined to do so. I am very doubtful about its recovery.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES, AND HYBRIDS.

Answered by G. E. WESTON.

AN AVIARY (Beginner, Orkney.).—Your aviary is so very narrow (18 inches) that I am afraid it is not of any great utility—it is only like a large flight cage. I do not think you want to keep more than about a dozen male birds in it and it would be better they should be all cocks. A Canary could certainly be included, and if you want a foreigner with a lovely song try either a Green or Grey Singing Finch (or both). The British could be selected from Gold, Bull, Green, Chaff and Bramblefinches, Linnet, Twite, Redpoll and Siskin, Yellow, Reed, Snow and Lapland Buntings.

EXHIBITING HYBRIDS (R. Winterburn).—You ask whether in the absence of a class for Mules or Hybrids these birds can be entered to compete in the class headed "Any Other Species of British Bird." The answer is, no. The latter class is restricted to species found wild in the British Isles, and any Mules or Hybrids located therein by the judge would be marked "wrong class."

H. HOWARD.—You say that you purpose catching Linnets on hedges. By means of bird-lime, we presume. This is not the usual, nor the best method, the clap-net being generally adopted. Information on the making and using of bird-lime has appeared recently in our article and correspondence columns (notably in the article and letter sent by Mr. Steel). Should you require further details, send a letter for insertion in our correspondence columns, when no doubt some reader or other will oblige you.

AN "IDEAL" THRUSH CAGE (R.S.M.).—Opinions differ, of course, as to what constitutes an "ideal" cage, but in my own opinion you will find it very, very difficult to beat the one illustrated in "Nutshell" booklet No. 26, which said booklet deals with the larger insectivorous birds, and is only 2½d., post free. The drawing shows clearly all the details you mention. If, after seeing this drawing you would like any questions answered just send them along to me.

A SOFTBILL FOOD (J.W.C.R.).—I should certainly moisten the food, either by the addition of a very small quantity of water, or, better still, by either a little grated raw carrot, or chopped lettuce leaf, watercress, chickweed and the like. Possibly a little water may always need to be used, as the mixture seems very dry (hard). You can give any kind of smooth caterpillar, small grubs and snails, beetles, ear-wigs and creeping things from the garden, flies, scoured gentles, etc. Live ants' eggs are greatly appreciated. Rely on mealworms more for use during winter.

BRITISH BIRD & HYBRID QUERISTS should consult Houlton's great work, "Cage-Bird Hybrids" (7/6); Norman's "British Bird Manual" (2/3); or Part 1 "Hardbills" (1/1), Part 2 "Softbills" (1/1); "Aviaries, Bird-rooms, and Cages" (2/3); "Seeds, Foods, and Wild Plants" (1/2); "Secrets of Hybrid Breeding" (1/2); Dr. Creswell's "Hygiene of Bird-keeping" (1/1); Dr Clarke's "Sceptic or Bird Fever" (7d.); "Colour-feeding" (3½d.); or the "Nutshell" booklets (2½d. each): No. 1 "Goldfinch," No. 2 "Linnet," No. 3 "Skylark," No. 4 "Song Thrush and Blackbird," No. 11 "Bullfinch," No. 13 "Chaffinch," No. 15 "Greenfinch," No. 22 "Siskin, Redpoll, and Twite," No. 25 "Small Insectivorous Birds," No. 26 "Large Insectivorous Birds," No. 6 "Ailing Birds and How to Cure Them," No. 9 "Disinfection of Cages, Birdrooms, etc.," No. 12 "How to Moult British Birds." All thoroughly practical and instructive. Prices quoted are post free from "Cage Birds," 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

THREE WEEDS (Shug.).—Of the trio of weeds you send the only one I use regularly is No. 2, which is plantain (sometimes termed "rats' tails"). This is good for most birds. No. 1 are legumes of the broom and this class of seed is not easy of digestion; apart from this, I do not consider it worth the trouble of gathering as only a few birds seem to tackle it. No. 3 is pennywort, and this is another plant I have not utilised with my own birds, so cannot speak concerning it. A large number of really good and useful wild-foods were depicted on one of CAGE BIRDS coloured plates some little while back. If you haven't a copy of this plate, by all means obtain one.

SISKIN AND BULLFINCH (H.J.F.).—Evidently you have overlooked the "Nutshell" booklets (post free 2½d.) dealing with the Bullfinch and Siskin. They are No. 11 and No. 22 respectively and will give you all the information you ask and much more useful advice in addition. A "hand-reared" cock Siskin could certainly be bred with next year. But how are you going to obtain him? The Siskin is a rare breeding bird in England (known chiefly as a winter migrant). It breeds more commonly in certain districts of Ireland and in Scotland. I may say, however, that I think a caught Siskin would answer quite as well as a hand-reared one, as the great majority are extremely easy to get tame—in fact, they are "born tame."

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 1, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.: analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. Any bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

W. A. LINDLEY.—Cock Bullfinch died from internal hemorrhage, subsequent upon rupture of an important pulmonary blood vessel. The other bird succumbed to congestion of the lungs induced by the heat. It is difficult to conjecture the cause of lesions in the first, but, judging from the state of the young birds, I should conclude there had been quarrelling amongst them.

H. GREAVES.—Your birds are dying from acute inflammation of the bowels, arising from the presence of poisons or ptomaines taken in with the food. There is something radically wrong with the food (the nature of which you have not described). You must remove the cause by securing at once an entirely fresh supply of seed. Exercise every cleanliness, and give Condy's Fluid in the drinking water. In affected cases try a little charcoal mixed with the bismuth dusted on the bread and milk, and give to your birds in the drinking water three times weekly a little sulphate of magnesia. Egg food is also a likely medium for the formation of these poisons, whilst paint freshly applied to cages, or left about in the bird-room, can also produce the same symptoms.

F. LOWMAN.—Congestion of the Lungs. This can be induced by the heat, thundery weather, fright of any kind acting upon the heart inhibiting its action, with consequent stagnation of blood in the veins, particularly those of the lungs. All organs were perfectly healthy with this exception.

Absolutely Indispensable to Bird-keepers.

THE STOCK BOOK.

Compiled by G. E. WESTON.

It simplifies the operations in the Birdroom and makes it possible for everyone, even the veriest novice, to breed his birds as they should be bred. Gives also valuable hints for times of emergency during the breeding season.

A noted fancier says of this book, "It makes bird-breeding easy."

GENERA

Answered by THE EDITOR.

John Gurr.—We have sent your notification of the finding of the stray homing pigeon to the Editor of the "Racing Pigeon," 19, Doughty Street, London, W.C.

H. Wilcock.—We have published this notion several times in the past.

W. H. Teat.—It is contrary to newspaper rules to divulge addresses of correspondents without permission. Send your communication to us in a sealed, stamped envelope and we will address and forward it, with pleasure.

W. R. Brayley.—We have published your letter this week, and your customer will find in this and our last issues other letters bearing on the same subject.

R. HOLMES.—We are afraid you labour under several mis-impressions. For instance, an entry fee of 1s. 6d. is not charged at nest feather shows, and the classes are confined solely to members' birds (one or two shows excepted). Further, considerations of space alone govern the other item you mention; reporters have nothing whatever to do with the matter.

WINDSOR AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

F.F. show, July 11, although not quite satisfactory from the number of birds staged, was very successful as regards the quality of the new blood shown. YELL. YORKS.: 1, 2, 3, King. BUFF: 1, 2, Clarke; 3, King. NOR.: 1, Simms. BRIT.: 1, May; 2, Wilkins; 3, Turner. MULES: 1, 2, Wilkins. Mr. H. Burfoot acted as judge, and carefully explained to members his reasons for placing the birds, which proved both useful and instructive.—E. A. Strickland, Secretary.

WEST BROMWICH C.B.S.

Second Nest Feather Show July 16th, at headquarters. Entries were very moderate in numbers, owing to the majority of the members having poor breeding season. Mr. J. H. Roe (Birmingham) judged.

YORKS., YELL.: 1, 2, Andrews; 3, Beck. BUFF: 1, Beck; 2, 3, Andrews. NOR., YELL.: 1, 3, Taylor; 2, Sadler; 4, Collier. BUFF: 1, Taylor; 2, Sadler; 3, 4, Collier. CREST OR C.B.: 1, 2, Groves. BRIT. HARDBILL: 1, 2, Capewell. NOVICE, YORKS., YELL.: 1, Smart; 2, Greenhouse. BUFF: 1, 2, 3, Greenhouse; 4, Smart.—W. G. Andrews, Hon. Sec.

LEYTON AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Y.B. show, July 20, at the Grange Park Hall. There was a good display of Yorks., especially in Novices. Some very good Norwich were also staged. The attendance was not up to the usual, owing to a great many members being on their holidays. Mr. J. S. Clarke judged.
